Lord Roberts Dies Near the Battle Line in France

Severe Weather Conditions Reported From the Trenches

TO PROVIDE SINEWS OF WAR

Extra Taxation will be Required.

OTTAWA, Nov. 14.—Hon. Mr. White, Minister of Finance, is busily engaged day and night worrying with the problem how to raise the money necessary to enable Canada to properly participate in the great war.

Extra taxation for the purpose of providing from 30 to 50 millions of dollars will, it is said, be required.

Mr. White's special problem is to devise a scheme that shall distribute this extra taxation as much as possible over the entire population without pressing unduly hard upon one section. And the particularly hard nut in that special problem is: How shall the farmer, who has suffered least from the war, if he has suffered at all, be made to contribute his fair share of the extra taxation necessitated by the war?

Hon. Mr. White has been in close consultation with the prominent men in the financial world, and it is rumoured that there is every probability some further form of direct taxation in the shape of a stamp duty on cheques and receipts and commercial bills of all kinds may be imposed. Such taxes were imposed in the United States to meet war expenses.

A Pious Programme.

"What are you going to be when you grow up, Johnny?"

"I'm going to be a pirate 'til I gets old an' sick," answered Johnny, "then I'm going to be good."

Turk Forts Are Taken On Red Sea

MESSAGE FROM SULTAN

LONDON, Nov. 15.—The Paris Herald's correspondent at Aden says that a British cruiser has shelled and destroyed the Turkish forts at Sheikh Said, opposite Perim Island, on the eastern side of the Straits of Bab-el-Mandeb, the entrance to the Red Sea.

Indian infantry was landed under the Turkish fire and took the fort and blew up the magazines and guns. The Turks fled, a few of them being taken prisoners. The British losses were two officers and three men killed and a few wounded.

The Sultan has refused to proclaim a holy war, but at the urgent request of Enver Pasha, Minister of War, signed a proclamation addressed to the army and navy in which he exhorted all Moslems to fight Turkey's enemies, especially the English, who, it says, aim at the annexation of Persia and Arabia.

The proclamation declares that the English attempted to corrupt the Arab chiefs but failed, and everybody is now united under the Caliph's flag.

To Protect Interests Only.

England, it is announced here, has no intention of undertaking any military or war operations in Arabia, except for the protection of Arab interests against Turkish or other aggression or in support of attempts by the Arabs to free themselves from Turkish rule.

Bulgaria, which has not yet cast the report that she had an agreement with Turkey, and has issued a statement that no such agreement exists.

It is declared officially here that the western entrance of the Shat-El-Arab River, known as the Abadan Passage, is now clear and that steamers were passing freely.

British forces a week ago occupied the port at Fao, at the south of the Shat-El-Arab, a Turkish river which empties into the head of the Gulf of Persia. Previous to the landing of the British forces the Turkish guns at Fao were silenced by the fire of the sloop Odin.

"Comrades —I have the honour to announce to you a noble irade from the Sultan. Our army will destroy our enemies, with the Allah's help and the assistance of the prophet, and by the pious prayer of the sovereign. Forward, always forward! Victory, glory and Paradise are before us, death and disgrace behind. Long live our Padishah!"

SEA DRIVEN GALE OF RAIN AND SNOW SWEEPS THE LINES

Weather Conditions Impede Work of Infantry and Battle Along the Yser Has Developed Into an Artillery Duel—Enemy Driven Back Across Yser Appear to Be Farther Than Ever From Calais

Examiner Special:

PARIS, Nov. 16.—In trenches filled with water and swept by rain and snow driven by a gale from the sea, all the allied and German armies today continue the struggle for the possession of the line leading to the coast cities of Dunkirk and Calais.

Heavy artillery fire has marked the fighting for the past twenty-four hours, is was stated at the war office to-day, weather conditions preventing successful work by the infantry.

The Germans are now struggling to regain a foothold on the left bank of the Yser.

The official statement that the Germans have been driven back to the right bank of the canal along the line resulted in the greatest satisfaction here. The enemy paid a terrible toll for the ground they held on the left bend It was only by pouring men in massed formation through the fire of allied guns which mowed down hundreds, that a foothold was gained.

PARIS, Nov. 15. — The Germans were driven to-day from the only position they held on the left bank of the Yser, losing a foothold they had gained at great cost. The victory of the allies is officially reported. It is unofficially stated that the force of Germans which were thrown back across the river, numbered 5,000 men.

The only important battles anywhere on the wide [illegible] North Sea and Alsace yesterday and to-day took place in the small area of conflict in Belgium, where the Germans appear to be risking their whole campaign in the west by the effort to tear a hole in the allied line that would let them through to the French coast.

Lost Heavily.

They not only failed to keep a grip on part of the left bank of the Yser but they lost heavily in attempting to storm the allied line holding the wooded region of Ypres. Here the British and the French touch shoulders in defending the cornerstone of their northern line, and here Germany's finest troops, the Prussian Guards, has been driven furiously against them day after day. The result of the battles around Ypres yesterday and to-day was exactly the same as on many days previous, costly repulses.

Farther Than Ever From Goal.

The French Government summarizes the results of the past week's fighting with the comment that the whole German effort, the most violent of the campaign in the north, has gained for them only Dixmaunde, on the right side of the River Yser, and a position difficult to defend. Judging only from the Government's communiques, the German appear farther than ever from their goal, Calais; and the allies continue to advance at many parts of the line, the same sort of trench by trench advance that has characterized the fighting for two months.

Germans Mass Great Strength.

The attacks by the Germans have been carried out at each place with great [illegible] that one point might yield. Some hamlets in the neighbourhood of Dixmunde, which have been taken and retaken three or four times, are now in the hands of the allies, who are strongly situated on the canal, the crossing of which would be of great importance to the Germans.

The most intense interest is concentrated on this portion of the extended battlefield, but other points are also the scene of stiff conflicts, which have resulted in nothing more definite than the capture of a few trenches.

It is officially announced that two German regimental flags found in trenches formerly occupied by the Germans on the Marne have been handed to Field Marshall Sir John French by General Joffre, as they were discovered opposite to the position then held by the British.

Battlefield a Vast Swamp.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—The Amsterdam correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Co. sends the following despatch concerning the fighting in Flanders:

"The Germans on Friday blew up all the culverts of the Leopold and Schipdonck Canals, with the object of flooding the surrounding country. They also destroyed the bridge at Moerkerke.

"The same night there were heavy artillery fighting near Lombaertzyde and Nieuport.

"New troops have arrived at Ostend and Bruges. Troops are continually passing Ostend on their way to and from Roulers. Bad weather has made the battlefield a vast swamp, and the entrenchments are filled with water and mud. Weather conditions causing a shortage of food supplies.

"No civilians are allowed at Zeebrugge, presumably because work is being rushed on more submarines at that seaport."

Desperate Fighting in Mountains

ENEMY LOSES HEAVILY

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Nov. 15—The London Telegraph's special correspondent at Petrograd says: A telegram from Tiflis to The Bourse Gazette says the stubborn battles at Kaprikai must be considered historical. Artillery has moved along impossible roads, there being neither railways nor highways and only bare tracks through the hills, in places covered with snow bridges, which it was impossible to take the guns across. All provisions in the district had been removed by the Turks. Day and night the Russian troops advanced on Kaprikai, taking position after position.

Enemy Fought Desperately.

The enemy's artillery at Kaprikai was armed with the new German guns. The Turks fought desperately, suffering very heavy losses. Specially fine execution we done by the Russian mountain guns. Each time the enemy was driven back he received reinforcements and returned to the attack. His positions were very strong, and only occupied by the Russians on the evening of the second day of battle.

A brilliant episode was the charge of a squadron of Cossacks up the hill held by the enemy's artillery. Not a single Turk escaped this onslaught. The scouting of the Cossacks is said to have a very demoralizing effect on the Turks, who retaliate barbarously whenever a member of this force falls into their hands. A case is mentioned in which a Cossack prisoner was crucified after his tongue had been cut off and his eyes gouged out. The Turkish army at Kaprikai was composed of six divisions. At a critical juncture the Russians allowed the enemy to advance to within 400 paces before opening fire, which compelled the Turks to make a precipitate flight.

An earlier despatch from Constantinople claimed that this fight resulted in a Turkish victory, with 8,000 Russians killed or wounded.

FRENCH-CANADIAN REGIMENT READY

The French-Canadian Regiment now in training at St. Johns, P.Q., is recruited to 100 above the required strength. Every recruit in it is a picked man—picked from a number more than three times in excess of that required. Not a case of sickness or indisposition from any cause has been reported. The men are of fine physique, strong, young, wiry and have already begun to take on the manner and bearing of the professional soldier. Some of them have seen active service; the most of them are from the ranks of the artisan class of Montreal. Before they were accepted they had to run the gamut of one of the most severe physical examinations that any Canadian regiment has been put through. They have been equipped with uniforms and arms and subjected to severe drilling. They are housed in the commodious barracks at St. John's, and are well looked after, two chefs from the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Montreal look after the culinary department, though the food they get is more intended to create brawn, muscle and endurance than the menu customary to the guests of an expensive hotel. They are ready for the trans-Atlantic voyage and eager for the word to go. A few weeks, or less, under the skillful training of European officers, will suffice to put them in fine trim for the firing line.—Book's Weekly, Montreal.

OLIVE OIL AS FOOD

ONE of the most sensible things for enjoyment of life is the eating of Olive Oil as Food and Medicine. Physicians have advised such uses of the oil, but it has only been of recent date that it has become a "fad." It has been proved in many cases to be not only a corrective of the liver, but a food for the system as well, and is of great benefit for weak stomach and bowels. The dose is usually a teaspoonful of oil to be taken half an hour before breakfast and half an hour after supper. The oil may be freely used with vegetables and on salads, as it is harmless and beneficial. Its use may be continued for years, and in restoring the liver to do its work (it is in most cases mildly catharetic), the complexion is cleared of the ugly brown spots and bothersome yellow appearance due to inability of the liver. The taste is not unpleasant, although a liking for it has, in most instances, to be acquired. But very few effective medicines are really finely flavoured, although any unpleasant taste can be disguised. Many physicians strongly recommend its use, both internal and external. It is excellent to use, after the bath, and many delicate persons—especially children—very greatly benefited by being massaged with it. The best quality all can be procured at 25c & 50c Bottles.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 15.—Berlin reports the flight of the population of Cracow. It is expected the railroads will be cut and that Cracow will not be defended.

UPRISING BROKEN.

JOHANNESBURG, Nov. 15.— The backbone of the Orange Free State rebellion has been broken and scattered, the bands of malignants, including General De Wet, being closely pursued by Badenhorst. General Botha's recent successes against Vancalier and Kirstein, respectively, have greatly disheartened the rebels.

LORD ROBERTS DEAD.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Field Marshal Earl Roberts died on Saturday night in France from pneumonia. He had crossed to greet the Indian troops. Soon after his arrival he became ill. Pneumonia developed and he died very suddenly.

AUDACIOUS GONE.

Although the Admiralty has not made an official announcement, eye witnesses describe in detail the sinking of the British dreadnought Audacious on Oct. 27, some 25 miles off the north coast of Ireland.

LEAVING BRESLAU.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—A despatch to The London Telegraph from Stockholm says:

"A diplomatic despatch from Vienna states that the German army is evacuating both Breslau, in Silesia, and Koenigsberg, in East Prussia.

MARCHING ON DANZIG.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 15. — Russian troops advanced rapidly to-day toward Danzig, the objective of the campaign in East Prussia.

WILL PROTECT ARABS.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Britain, it is announced, has no intention of undertaking any military or war operations in Arabia, except for the protection of Arab interests against Turkish or other aggression, or in support of any attempt of the Arabs to free themselves from Turkish rule.

Liquor Shops Attract Crowds on Last Day of Opening.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 15.—Thousands of men, women and children stood since 4 o'clock yesterday morning in a driving snowstorm before the doors of the liquor shops, the last day on which it was possible to purchase light wine and beer under the prohibition act of the Russian Government, which on Monday becomes absolute.

This final prohibition act is the last of three distinct liquor reforms, the first curtailing the sale of vodka and the second abolishing it absolutely. The third measure extends the prohibition to every form of alcoholic drink in all portions of the Empire under martial law.

BRYAN WILL INVESTIGATE

The South American Cases to Find Out If Neutrality Has Been Broken.

RADIO STATIONS THERE?

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Yielding to the suggestions of the British and French Governments, Secretary of State Bryan yesterday took a long step toward the assumption of further responsibilities under the Monroe doctrine, by instructing American diplomatic representatives at the capitals of Ecuador and Colombia to investigate the charges made by the British and French Governments that the South American countries were the scene of unneutral operations.

The American Ministers are not only to take up the subject with the Ecuadorean and Colombian Governments, as was requested by Great Britain and France, but they are to make enquiries on their own account in an endeavour to ascertain what basis exist in fact for the allegations of the two European Governments. As recently disclosed, the charges were made that radio stations in the two countries were being used for the assistance of the German squadrons operating in the Pacific, and that the Galapagos Islands, a group lying off the entrance to the Panama Canal, belonging to Ecuador, were being used for bases of supply and operations by the German warships.

CANADA'S DOUBLE DUTY.

Men Working In Fields Are Helping Just As Soldiers.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The Westminster Gazette to-night, referring to Canada's reported willingness to increase its contribution of men to 150,000 by next autumn, remarks: "We recognize to the full that Canada is with us in the fight to the full extent of its resources, but we shall expect that recruiting at home will have settled the issue before we have to bring any such number of men from Canada. We have remembered that from Canada is required a double service; she will have been, to a large extent, the granary of the Empire, and, if we are to come successfully through the war, men working in the fields of Canada will be doing their share almost as effectually as those actually at the front."

FRENCH NAVY IS HELPING

Fleet Has Contributed 8000 Men and Guns for Land Fighting at the Yser and is Active at Sea.

BOTTLED UP AUSTRIANS

PARIS, Nov. 15—The Figaro prints the first information given out here regarding the part which the French navy is taking in the military operations. It points out that the fleet is not only taking an active part in the blockading of all the Austro-German squadrons and in the protection of commercial traffic on the high seas, but is also lending valuable assistance to the allied forces which are holding back the German army in Belgium. The French battleships have contributed a force of 4,000 marines and 2,000 gunners, together with a great umber of naval guns.

The brigade of fusiliers and a company equipped with mitrailleuses have been placed under the command of Admiral Ronarch, and played an important part in the stand of the allied forces at Dixmeunde. A great number of naval aviators and engineers have also been placed at the disposal of the commander of the land forces.

OSTRICH PLUMES AGAIN IN STYLE

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Any sordid commercial soul can feather her own nest, but it takes a true sartorial genius to feather her own costume artistically. My lady has this winter gone back to her old friend the ostrich for her borrowed plumage. The ostrich plume has returned with added prestige to its high station atop some of the very best hats. It is in its new role of fringe, however, that it tickles the feminine fancy most of this season.

The delicacy and softness of this fragile fairylike fringe of feather fronds makes it a particularly desirable garniture on light fluffy evening frocks, gossamer lingerie and diaphanous negligee, but it is also pressed into service as suitable trimming on wraps and neck fixings.

FEW CANUCKS AT THE FRONT

Section of Artillery and Transport May be Already in the Field—Main Body Training Yet.

CENSORED REPORTS

OTTAWA, Nov. 15.—No official advices have as yet been received by the Militia Department here confirming the published rumours to the effect that a number of the Canadian troops, including some of the western cavalry, are already in France and in the firing zone. It is though probable in official circles here, however, that some of the regulars among the Canadian forces, with perhaps a few of the artillery and some of the motor transport service, have already been sent to the front. It is not expected that the main body of the first contingent will see active service for some weeks, it being Lord Kitchener's policy to send only thoroughly-trained troops to the firing line unless less further reinforcements of the more recently enlisted men are absolutely necessary.

The principal need of the allies in France at present however, is understood to be in the artillery and transport units, and when the troops left here last September it was expected that some of the artillery units, which are particularly well equipped and trained, would be speedily sent to France. Owing to the strict British censorship, it is not expected that anything will be sent out in regard to the movement of Canadian troops to France until after they are already at the front and have perhaps had their first baptism of fire.

RUSSIANS SEND VAST SUPPLIES TO POLES

WARSAW, via Petrograd and London, Nov. 14.—Representatives of the Petrograd relief fund for Poland arrived here to-day from the capital with fifty carloads of provisions for destitute families and 300,000 rubles ($150,000) in money for the relief of the needy.

Russian soldiers continue to unearth near Warsaw German machine guns, rifles and ammunition which had been concealed by the forces of Emperor William in mounds on the battlefields which had been given the appearance of graves. The presumption here is that the Germans intended to utilize this material in their contemplated new attack on Warsaw.

By Geo. Allan England

"I hardly think so," he judged. "You see, I left it in a wide sand-barren. I think, on the whole, it will pay me to make the expedition. Of course I shan't take less than a dozen men to help me bring it back—what's left of it."

"But Allan, can you find your way?"

"I've got to! That machine must positively be recovered! Otherwise we're totally cut off from the Abyss. Colonizing stops, and all kinds of hell may break loose below ground before I can build another machine entire. There are no railroads running, now to the brink," he added smiling, "and no elevators to the basement of the world. It's the old Pauillac again or nothing!"

The girl exhausted all her arguments and entreaties in vain. Once Allan's mind was definitely made up along the line of duty, he went straight forward, though the heavens fell.

Four days later the expedition set out.

Allan had made adequate preparations in every way. He left a strong and well-armed guard to protect Settlement Cliffs. By careful thought and chart-drawing he was able to approximate the probable position of the machine. With him he took fifteen men, headed by Zangamon, who now insisted he was well enough to go, and ably seconded by Frumuos.

Each man carried an automatic, and six had rifles. They bore an average of one hundred cartridges apiece, and in knapsacks of goat-leather, dried rations for a week. Each also carried fish hooks and a stout fibre line.

The party counted on being able to supplement their supplies with trout, bass and pickerel from countless untouched streams. They might, too, come into wooded country, if the fire had left any to northward, and here they knew game would be plentiful.

One thing seemed positive in that new world: starvation could not threaten.

Cloudy and dull the morning was—yet well-suited to the needs of the Folk—when the expedition left Settlement Cliffs. The convoy, each man provided with eye-guards and his hands and face well painted with protecting pigment, waited impatiently in the palisade, while Allan said farewell to Beata and the little chap.

For a long moment he strained them both to his breast, then, the woman's kiss still hot upon his lips, ran quickly up the path and joined his picked troop of scouts.

"Forward, men!" cried he, taking the lead with Zangamon.

Through her tears she watched them, waving her hand to Allan—even making the baby shake its little hand as well—and throwing kisses to him, who returned them gaily.

On the far bank the party halted a minute to shout a few last words to the assembled colonists that lined the parapet of the terrace.

Then they turned, and, striking north-west, plunged boldly into the burned and blackened waste.

Long after the marching column had disappeared over the crest of the second hill Beatrice still watched. Up on the cliff-top, with the powerful telescope at her eye, she followed the faint, drifting line of dust and ash that marked the line of march.

Only when this, too, had disappeared, merged in the sombre grey of the horizon, did she sadly and very slowly descend the path once more, back to the loneliness of a home where now no husband's presence greeted her.

Though she tried to smile—tried to believe all would yet be well, old Gesafam, glancing up from her labours at the cooking-hearth, saw tears were shining in her beautiful grey eyes.

Barbarian though the ancient beldame was, she knew, she understood that after all, now as for all time, in every venture and in every task, the woman's portion was the harder one.

CHAPTER XXXI.
A STRANGE APPARITION.

At a good round pace, where open going permitted, the party made way, striking boldly across country in the probable direction of the lost aeroplane.

Some marched in silence, thoughtfully; others sang, as though setting out upon the Great Sunken Sea in fishing boats. But one common purpose and ambition thrilled them all.

For, to speak truth, the finding of the needle in the haystack would have been as easy as any hope of ever locating the machine in all those thousands of square miles of devastation.

But Stern felt no fear. The great need of the colony made the expedition imperative; his supreme self-trust rendered it possible.

From the very beginning of things, back there in the tower overlooking Madison Forest, he had never even admitted the possibility of failure in any undertaking. Defeat lay wholly outside his scheme of things. That it could ever be his portion simply never had occurred to him.

As they progressed he carefully reviewed everything in his mind. Plans and equipment seemed perfectly adequate. In addition to those impedimenta already mentioned, a few necessary tools, a supply of cordage for transporting the machine, and three bottles of brandy for emergencies had been judiciously added to the men's burdens.

Each, in addition, carried a small flat water-jug, tightly stopped, slung over his shoulder. Allan counted on streams being plentiful; but he meant to look out even for the unexpected, too.

He had wisely taken means to protect their feet for the long tramp. In spite of all their opposition he had made them prepare and bind on sandals of goat's leather. Hitherto they had gone barefooted at Settlement Cliffs; but now that was no longer permissible.

The total equipment of each man weighed not less than one hundred pounds, including tools and all. No weaklings, like the men of the twentieth century, could have stood the gaff marching under such a load; but these huge fellows, muscular and lithe, walked off with it as though it had been a mere nothing.

Allan himself bore an equal burden. In addition to arms and provisions he carried a powerful binocular, the spoil of a wrecked optician's shop in Cincinnati.

Underfoot, as the column advanced in a long line, loose dust and wood-ashes rose in clouds. The air grew thick and irritating to the lungs.

Now and then they had to make a detour round a charred and fallen trunk, or cut their way and clamber through a calcined barricade of twisted limbs and branches. Not infrequently they saw burned bones of animals or of Anthropoids.

Here and there they even stumbled on a distorted, half-consumed body—a hideous reminder of the vanquished enemy—the half-man that had tried to pit itself against the whole-man, with inevitable annihilation as the only possible result.

The distorted attitudes of some of these ghastly, incredibly ugly carcasses told with eloquence the terrified, vain flight of the Horde before the all-consuming storm of fire, the panic and the anguish of their extinction.

But Allan only frowned or smiled grimly at sight of the horrible little bodies. Pity he felt no more than for a crushed and hideous copperhead.

The country had been swept clean by the fire-broom. Not a living creature remained visible. Moles there still might be, and perhaps hares and foxes, woodchucks, ground-hogs and a few such animals that by chance had taken earth; but even of these there was no trace. Certainly all larger breeds had been destroyed.

Where paradise-birds, macaws and parroquets had screamed and flitted, humming-birds darted with a whir of gauzy wings, serpents writhed, deer browsed, monkeys and apes swung chattering from the liana-festooned fern-trees, now all was silence, charred ashes, dust — the universal blank awfulness of death.

Naked and ugly the country stretched away, away to its black horizon, ridge after ridge of rolling land stubbled with sparse, limbless trunks and carpeted with cinders.

A dead world truly, it seemed—how infinitely different from the lush, green beauty of the territory south of the New Hope, a region Stern still could make out as a bluish blur, far to southward, through his binoculars.

By night, after having eaten dinner beside a turbid, brackish pool, they had made more than twenty miles to north-westward. Stern thought scornfully of the distance. In his Pauillac he would have covered it easily in as many minutes.

But now all was different. Nothing remained save slow, laborious plodding, foot by foot, through the choking desolation of the burned world.

They camped near a small stream for the night, and cast their lines, but took nothing. Stern gave this matter no great weight. He thought, perhaps, it might be a mere accident, and still felt confident of finding fish elsewhere.

Even the discovery of three or four dead perch, floating belly up, round and round in an eddy, gave him no clue to the total destruction of all life. He did not understand even yet that the terrific conflagration, far more stupendous than any ever known in the old days, had even heated the streams and killed there the very fish themselves.

Yet already a vague, half-sensed uneasiness had begun to creep over him—not yet a denite presentiment of disaster, but rather a subconscious feeling that the odds against him were too great.

And once a thought of Napoleon crossed his mind as he sat there silently, camped with his men; and he remembered Moscow, with a strange, new apprehension.

Next morning, having refilled their canteens, they set out again, still in the same direction. Stern often consulted his chart, to be sure they were proceeding in what he took to be the proper course.

The distance between Settlement Cliffs and the machine was wholly problematical; yet, once he should come within striking distance of the scene of his disaster, he felt positive of being able to recognize it.

Not far to the south of the spot, he remembered, a very steep and noisy stream flowed toward the east, and, off to north-west of it rose a peculiarly formed, double-peaked mountain, easily recognizable.

The sand-barren itself, where he had been obliged to abandon the machine, lay in a kind of broad valley flanked on one hand by cliffs, while the other sloped gradually upward to the foot-hills of the double mountain in question.

"Once I get anywhere within twenty miles of it I'm all right," thought Allan, anxiously sweeping the horizon with his binoculars as the party paused on a high ridge to rest. "The great problem is to locate that mountain. After that the rest will be easy."

At noon they camped again, ate sparingly, and rested an hour. Here Allan brought his second map up to date. This map, a large sheet of parchment, served as a record of distances and directions travelled.

Starting at Settlement Cliffs he had painstakingly entered on it every stage of the journey, every ridge and valley, watercourse, camp and landmark. Once the goal reached, this record would prove invaluable in retracing their way.

"If the rest of the trip were only indicated as well as what's past!" he muttered, working out his position. "One of these days, when other things are attended to, we must have a geodetic survey, complete maps and plans, and accurate information about the whole topography of this altered continent. Some time—along with a few million other necessary things!"

The third day brought them nowhere. Still the brule stretched on and on before them, though now, far to right, Allan occasionally could glimpse a wooded mountain-spur through the binoculars, as though the limits of the vast conflagration were in sight at least in one direction.

But to left and ahead nothing still showed but devastated land.

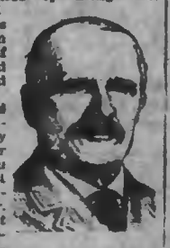
Operation Decided On As Only Means of Relief

But the Writer of This Letter Resolved to Try Dr. Chase's Ointment First and Was Cured.



MR. BEAUVAIS.

This is not an isolated case, for we frequently hear from people who have been cured of piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment after physicians had told them nothing short of an operation could bring relief and cure.

If you could read these letters, coming as they do, day after day and year after year, you would realize what a wonderful curative agent Dr. Chase's Ointment really is. Few ailments are more annoying or more persistently torturing than piles, and when this suffering is promptly relieved by the application of Dr. Chase's Ointment there can be no doubt as to where credit is due. Friends and neighbors are told of the results and so the good word spreads, and Dr. Chase's Ointment is becoming known far and wide as the only actual cure for piles or hemorrhoids.

Mr. Charles Beauvais, a respected citizen of St. John's, Que., writes:—"For 14 years I suffered from chronic piles or hemorrhoids and considered my case very serious. I was treated by a well-known physician who could not help me, and my doctor decided on an operation as the only means of relief. However, I resolved to try Dr. Chase's Ointment first. The first box brought me great relief, and by the time I had used three boxes I was completely cured. This is why it gives me such great pleasure to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to everybody suffering from hemorrhoids as a preparation of the greatest value."

ABLE TO WITHSTAND IN THE EVIL DAY

An Armament Divinely Provided.

The Present Scripturally Designated "the Evil Day"—A Time of Thorough Testing—Special Points of Faith and Obedience—Difficult to Stand—Need For "the Whole Armor of God"—Thousands Falling on Every Side.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

Philadelphia, November 16.—Pastor Russell preached today at Mixon Theatre from the text, "Take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand" (Ephesians 6:13). He said in part as follows:

Only those who have learned the meaning of the Apostle's words concerning the right dividing of the Word of Truth, only those who have learned from the Scriptures that the Divine Plan is a progressive one, in which successive ages form links, can understand why Divine Providence should permit peculiar experiences, trials, etc., upon the Church at one time, not permitted at another. Would that all Christians would awake to a proper study of the Bible—to see the object of the Divine dealings with the Jews during the Jewish Age, with Christians during the Gospel Age, and with the world during the Millennial Age. They would see that the Scriptures show that there is a seed time, a sowing time, and a harvest, a reaping time. Each Age, which when it has served its purpose passes away, giving place to another Age and a different work.

In the end of the Jewish Age, for instance, there came to that people a peculiar sifting and testing, while John the Baptist, the last of the Prophets, was preaching; namely, a winnowing of the wheat, a separating of the chaff preparatory to the gathering of the wheat into the garner of the next Age, and the permission of trouble to come upon the chaff class, which utterly destroyed them as a nation.

Similarly, in one of His parables (Matthew 13:24-43) our Lord tells us that in the end of the Gospel Age there will be a separation of wheat from tares, the former being gathered into the glorious Kingdom for which we pray, "Thy Kingdom come," and the latter being consumed as tares, though not as individuals. The destruction of a tare, an imitation Christian, will signify that the person thus posing as a Christian, drawing nigh unto God with his lips while his heart is far from Him, will cease to make such profession. Thenceforth the true Church will be recognized in its peculiar position as "the very Elect" of God, a Little Flock who follow in the footsteps of the Master, gladly sacrificing earthly interests for the attainment of Heavenly ones. Thereafter, as the parable shows, these will shine forth as the sun in the Kingdom for the blessing of all the families of the earth, including the tare class, who will be no longer deceived or deceivers in respect to their true position, but be privileged with the remainder of mankind to come into full harmony with God.

We have not the necessary time to-day to examine the various Scriptural evidences which indicate that we are now living in this particular period. Many of you have our STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES, in which this subject is fully presented. We must content ourselves at this time by pointing to some of the outward demonstrations that we are in the time which the Apostle designates "the evil day."

Throughout the Scriptures this period is most graphically set forth as a time of thorough testing, a time in which the separation of wheat from tares will be most absolutely accomplished, so that not one grain of wheat will be lost or one grain of tare preserved with the wheat. It seems difficult for the majority of people to think that they should be in the midst of fulfilments of prophecy. If we were telling that these things would take place within a century or within a thousand years, many more would be ready to investigate and to acknowledge the force of the arguments. But, familiar with the conditions, the trials, the perplexities of our day, many shut the eyes of their understanding to the very remarkable condition of affairs in the world.

As St. Peter predicted, many in our day are suggesting that all things will continue as they have been from the beginning of the world. The Apostle also declares that this class are wilfully ignorant (2 Peter 3:5); indeed, the majority do not desire knowledge. Imbued with the spirit of the world they desire money, pleasure or fame. To say the least, the majority of professing Christians are careless, indifferent, to what the Lord has caused to be written for their admonition, encouragement and assistance in this evil day.

Such are not of "the very Elect." The latter, as St. Paul shows, will not be in darkness that that Day should overtake them as a thief. (1 Thessalonians 5:1-6.) They will be earnest, watchful, standing fast in the faith. Therefore, using the means the Lord has provided, they will receive the special reward, while others by neglecting their privileges mark themselves as unworthy the great favor which the Lord is now dispensing to the Little Flock. We will not say that they will not have opportunities in the Great Company that will come up out of great tribulation and stand before the Throne, instead of being in the Throne.—Revelation 7:9, 14, 15.

Mark our Lord's declaration that the trial at our day would be so critical, so special, that it would deceive if possible "the very Elect." (Matthew 24:24.) But this will not be possible; for the Lord has promised them assistance, and they will be in the attitude of heart and mind to seek that assistance and use it. Mark how the Lord through the Prophet David foretold the special trials of this time, picturing the various devices of Satan—Spiritism, Higher Criticism, Christian Science, Evolution, etc.—as pestilences and arrows. He tells us that a thousand shall fall at our side, yea, ten thousand at our right hand—amongst those whom we consider most favored and, in some respects at least, as our friends in the Lord.

Then the reason is given why the very Elect will not fall under these pestilences and arrows; namely, "Because thou has made the Lord, even the Most High, thy refuge and thy habitation, no plague shall come nigh thy dwelling." What to others will be a stone of stumbling will to this class be an assistance, in that they will climb upon it to still higher personal development and character-likeness to the Lord. All things must work together for good to these because they love God truly, sincerely, above self or any other creature, and because of their faithfulness to their covenant of consecration to Him.—Psalm 91.

Note again that our text applies to the Harvest of the Gospel Age, which it calls an evil day—a day of trials, testings, etc., upon the Lord's people for the development of those who love the Lord with all their heart, soul, mind and strength, and their neighbors as themselves, and for the remonstrating also of those who have been only lukewarm in their love of the Lord and of the brethren, those who have been overcharged with the cares of this life or with the deceitfulness of riches, and so overtaken.

Much in harmony with Psalm 91, our text indicates a need for the armor of God, a difficulty in withstanding the assaults of this evil day, and the firmness of those who will eventually stand. The Apostle's exhortation is that we take the whole armor—not merely the shield of faith, not merely the helmet of salvation, not merely the breastplate of righteousness, not merely the Sword of the Spirit, not merely the sandals of preparation, not merely the girdle of Truth; but all of these. We shall need all of these if we would be able to withstand all the assaults to be expected in this day.

Alas, how few seem to realize the importance of this armor which God has commanded! Their difficulty is the result of not knowing the time in which they are living, not being sufficiently awake, not being sufficiently zealous to consult the Scriptures

HAD DYSPEPSIA

So Bad Could Not Take a Drink of Water Without Suffering.

Dyspepsia is one of the most difficult diseases of the stomach there is to cure. You eat too much. Drink too much. Use too much tobacco. You tax the stomach over overtime. You make it perform more than it should be called on to do. The natural result is that it is going to rebel against the amount of work put on it. It is only a matter of a short time before dyspepsia follows.

That old, forty year old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, will cure the dyspepsia and will cure it to stay cured as by test proven by the thousands of unsolicited testimonials we have received from time to time.

Miss Sarah McRae, Newfield, Ont., writes, "I write to say that I have used your Burdock Blood Bitters, and have found it the best remedy I have ever used for dyspepsia. Two years ago I had stomach trouble so bad that I could not even take a drink of water without suffering. I quit the use of B.B.B., and have been entirely cured, and can now eat anything without any bad after effects."

Burdock Blood Bitters is an old and well tried remedy but on account of the many substitutes we would ask you to make sure that our name appears on both the label and wrapper as this preparation is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Before taking "Fruit-a-tives", I [illegible] but the treatment was too harsh. I thought I might as well suffer from the illness as from these treatments. and making use of all the very machinery of Christendom in all denominations, especially through the theological seminaries, to undermine and overthrow the faith of all who have named the name of Christ—great and small, rich and poor, learned and ignorant. It is being done systematically—craftily, carefully, in a manner that the masses of people would scarcely credit.

It is safe to say that fully four out of every five who are graduated from theological seminaries,—all denominations, are Higher Critic infidels, who have been instructed that their main business is to promote unbelief amongst the people, especially to build up Churchianity, particularly their own denomination, and gradually, stealthily, craftily, to turn the people from the faith of the Bible to their Higher Criticism notions. And they are succeeding most wonderfully. A "pestilence" is the only figurative expression which really fits this [illegible] infection.

"Out of their own mouth will I judge them," saith the Lord; and in harmony with this statement we find that in the Lord's Providence these Higher Critics are more and more falling on themselves. But the ignorant Christian is quite content; as many of the true Christians, as the Apostle explains, are merely "babes in Christ," unable to use the strong meat of the Word.—Hebrews 5:12-14.

Christianity is not merely an acceptance of the fact that Jesus was born and that Jesus died, nor is it an acceptance of merely the moral teachings of Jesus. Christianity is the acceptance of the fact that mankind are sinners, that Christ died for our sins and rose again on the third day for our justification, that through Him we have redemption and forgiveness of sins through faith in His blood. Whoever has lost his faith in Jesus' blood has lost his relationship to true Christianity; and the sooner he and all mankind know it the better for all concerned. Whoever does not believe in Christ's Atonement work is not a Christian. As many of you are aware I have devoted an entire volume of my Scripture Studies to this subject, under the title "The At-One-Ment."

18 MILLIONS IN RESERVE

Cologne Gazette's Boast of Untouched Strength of Teutons.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—According to the Cologne Gazette, the combined strength of German and Austrian reserves is 18,000,000 men.

There are 2,000,000 volunteers in Germany and 230,000 in Austria, and recruits of the 1914 conscripts of both countries 1,000,000 each. This makes a total of 4,250,000, but, according to the Rheinish paper this estimate is altogether incomplete.

In Germany, as in Austria, that portion of the Landsturm which has not yet seen any service is almost as good as untouched, and, according to the best authorities, this untouched Landsturm amounts for Germany to 7,000,000 men. They are between the ages of 20 and 45. Already the vast majority of these men have been registered by the military authorities as suitable. Only a very small percentage may be regarded as hardly fit for the front, but they are capable of other military duties.

In Austria this untouched Landsturm is placed at 5,000,000, making 12,000,000 for both countries. If we deduct 2000,000 from this total for volunteers who have already been counted, we get a total of 14,250,000 as still available for active military service, and if the age limit is raised from 45 to 50 years, and the limit at the other end be reduced from 20 to 18 years, we obtain an additional 3,750,000, which, added to 14,250,000, makes the grand total 18,000,000.

SERVIAN OFFICER RELATES INCIDENT IN EASTERN FIELD

NISH, Servia, Oct. 10.—A Servian officer writes: "We feel the autumn chill at nights and no longer hug the ground with the same sense of relief we had when the days were burning and night alone brought freshness. Our hands got swollen from holding hot rifles, and we wrap them around with green leaves before lying down to rest. I have a hammock and the men never forget it, but I sleep on the ground among them, so that we are truly alike in all things. Soon we will have to make a fire and stretch around it as we did in the late wars, our feet to the blaze. If fighting outlasts the winter there could be no greater boon for us than a heavy fall of snow. The shepherds in all these mountains are our kind, and will do their best for us.

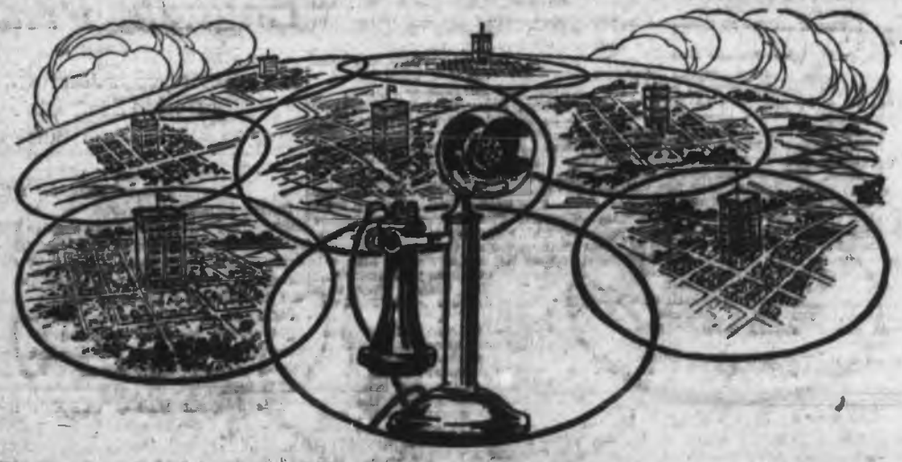
"I must not tell you where we are, but you must reckon us well on the road to Budapest. Remember, we are all the time on Servian ground, which is none the less Servian that it has been treacherously annexed by the House of Hapsburg. The Austrians spoke of bringing us a superior civilisation. Our own is better. We do not want to conquer and command the world. I think of all this lying under the stars. It is marvellous how humane are our soldiers, although such hard fighters. They fear nobody but God. That they do fear God is very evident after battle. The first thing they ask a prisoner before they fight. On a loaf and a they share their bread with him.'

Less Food, Better Fighting.

"It is a blessing they are so frugal and hardy. The less they have, the better they fight. On a long haul a sound pair of sandals the infantry marched thirty-nine kilometres (23.4 miles) last Tuesday and then straight into battle. At each hill in action you hear flutes on all sides. Some stretch on the ground composing martial ballads, all beginning: 'Glory to God, a great battle was fought,' as Shabats, Jadar, Lubovlya, or wherever the poet took a prominent part, and describing different comrades' prowess. So much for poetry. The prose is to be found where groups gather round lighted faggots and hold their shirts in turn over the blaze. The plague of vermin is, however, much less than it was in the Balkan Wars, for we are never long without meeting a spring, at which the men can get a sousing to which they are accustomed. They do not consider they have washed except it be under running water, and have great contempt for the Suabian who performs his ablutions in a basin.

Have Weathered the Storm.

"The women have gathered in the harvest, mown the hay, and stacked it. Better [illegible] way they went to the harvest decked with green leaves as if to a wedding and not to 'fields of death.' The entire nation realized that after the Turks had been defeated a reckoning with the Suabians was inevitable. They seem to have instinctively understood it better than our government. But we have weathered the storm and just now there are no Austrians on Servian soil although there are many under it. We have accounted for at least 120,000 of the enemy, and if the other Allies had a like proportion to their credit the war would soon be ended. Can it be that little armies are more determined than big ones?"



Not Too Far To Telephone!

THE man you want to reach may not be within your immediate circle, but he's not so far away but that you may reach him by Telephone. From the instrument in your office or your house you can talk with satisfaction either to those within your own talking circle or beyond it to remote interlinking circles.

Consider what this means to your business—the saving in time, labor and travelling expense! Horrors Attend Moving Wounded Men in France

(Special Dispatch.)

ON THE REAR OF THE ALLIES' LEFT, ST COMBIES TO LONDON, November 14.—The day of the war correspondent is past, and any observant newspaperboy, with a little "protection," is just as likely to see all that can be seen as the belligerent-mad gentleman who spends a hundred dollars a day motoring in a machine in which he bustles round the flanks of the scene of action at a tantalizing military zone distance of fifteen miles. If he is lucky he may hear the heavy guns booming in the distance, and even see a few puffs of smoke representing bursting shells, out of which he sets to work to construct an admirable account of a great battle.

A vivid imagination, a skilful pen, more like a brush filled with lurid colors, and perhaps a regretful recollection of campaigns where he was allowed to ride far and free from front to front, are all that the war correspondent can offer his paper or the public.

As the storm rolls forward it is possible to follow in its track and reap the aftermath, but, except from military writers, we shall probably never learn any connected story of the mighty struggle of the millions. In England the war is still little more than a stirring romance with agony chapters, breaking off "to be continued in our next."

Wounded Exposed Four Days.

The fearful horrors of the war can never be grasped by seeing the carefully attended wounded who come back to England and by hearing their tales, however gruesome, while there is scarcely a day in any of the French towns near the armies that does not bring with it some five terror from the front. One example will suffice to point this truth. Several days ago the hospital corps and volunteers were mystified that a convoy was expected toward midnight, bringing the French and German wounded who had been abandoned by the Germans in their retreat. We have many trains of wounded before, and the necessary arrangements were made as usual. But when the convoy arrived even the most hardened had to summon all their fortitude to the task of emptying the carriages.

When a man has a broken leg or arm or a bullet through his finger the skilled ambulance staff soon has him comfortably packed, but here were human vestiges so mangled that it was difficult to find a place to touch them without screams or moans. An insufferable charnel-house smell pervaded the whole night air, for most of the wounded had lain four days and nights where they had fallen before being picked up, and had not yet had their wounds examined, much less dressed.

Germans Suffered Most.

Under the burning sun and myriad flies, and under, later rains, they had been left to suffer the torture of pain and hunger and thirst, until it was a marvel they still breathed. The state of their wounds can be guessed, but will not bear description. It was three o'clock in the morning before they could be disposed of in the hospitals. Even twenty-four hours later not all of them had had a first dressing. It was the Germans who were in far the worst case, for the French fire seems much more destructive than the German, and when it does not kill instantly its ravages are horrible.

After four days it was decided to shift these men again, such of them as could be moved. The reason seemed extraordinary, for the authorities feared a mutiny, and had no troops to guard them properly.

That these poor wrecks should ever dream of rising appeared a fantastic idea, but some of them were morose and half mad, and one or two, especially a sullen young officer, declared that they would not remain quietly in hospital. It must be an effect of war fever that comes upon the maimed, for a batch of French wounded who had been transferred from Dieppe to Rouen to make room had attempted to mutiny because they wished to return to the front, where their dead were friends, and actually had to be threatened with fixed bayonets. Though "official secrecy" had been observed, the whole town, in some mysterious fashion, gathered round the hospital to see the evacuation, but were kept at a distance of a hundred yards by a cordon of gendarmerie to avoid demonstrations of an unseemly nature.

To watch a train have German atrocities charged upon it which they would be glad enough to wreak their hate upon even the wounded if the chance were given. In contrast with this popular spirit was the kindness of the French nurses and attendants who had been in actual contact with the prisoners.

The train that was to take them on was drawn up fifty yards from the hospital, and all the carriages and trucks were littered deep in straw. The very worst cases were laid full length on the floors of the trucks. "As" they came out on stretchers several of them were holding the hands of the "ladies of France" who had been nursing them. Those who could totter along were also supported by having their arms around the necks of French railway employes or volunteers, and sometimes again of the nurses. It seemed hard to conceive these were units of the terrible German army—the nightmare of the world for forty years.

One young fellow kept a wistful watch at the window, and suddenly his face lighted up and he beckoned me to come near. "That little lady in black with the white coif—I want to see her." I fetched her, a buxom damsel who came up laughing and jumped into the carriage. She could not speak a word of German, but kept shaking hands and patting the occupants on the head, with little interjections of "Tiens-tiens! En voila de bons enfants! Bon voyage!" &c., and they would hardly let her leave. One who ought to have gone because he was not very badly hit, hid himself in a pantry till the train had started and could not conceal his delight at being left.

Would Not Surrender Dying.

The original order was that everybody was to be shifted, but the nurses absolutely refused to allow many of their charges to be moved. "They never ought to have been brought here, and the least that can be done is to let them die in peace," said one. This woman had charge of a wretched patient with a broken spine among others. There were twelve cases of lockjaw, which appears to be almost confined to the German wounded by French fire. It was terrible to hear a man call for the doctor and that his jaws and whole head were "growing stiff." They were probably almost the last words he would be able to speak.

One carriage in the train had "reserved" scrawled on the door in chalk. It was for the obstreperous officer. A short, bullet headed, thick-set fellow, with close cropped hair and a sneering mouth, he marched contemptuously down the platform. A couple of reservists with fixed bayonets kept him company on the journey. This is the wood that Hindenburgs like Von Forstner are made of, and it is such as they who have brought everlasting infamy upon the German uniform.

In one of the next carriages were two well educated soldiers, one in spectacles, speaking French fairly and keeping up a fire of question and answer with a few Frenchmen. Both of them were convinced that France had declared war and would suffer for it, and quite good humouredly retorted against all the accusations against the Kaiser and his false news.

"We shall all be wiser another month or so," they said.

Are Only Suffering Humanity.

On one of the stretchers lay a fair-haired man with a more refined face, who also spoke French. His nurses insisted upon him being made especially comfortable. I remarked that she seemed to have gained many future friends among the Germans.

"What can one do, monsieur! They are men, and they are women they love, and who love them, and we who have husbands and brothers who are perhaps in German hospitals come to feel for them when we are tending them night and day for four days. That is an attaché of embassy, and so grateful for the little that can be done for him. It is all very well to fight the German army, and crush their regiments, but when a soldier comes in wounded like some of these, one soon forgets that he is a comrade. He is only a shipwrecked splinter of humanity."

Another woman who was standing by said:—"I never, never, could say a hard word to a German soldier. Yet how many of these my best beaux-garçons, but we replied that they were worn out by hard work and could not be put in order again. So we left the machines by the ground.

"The mounted Gendarmes (Grandfers as Fred), into whose hands we had fallen, took us to their captain, who spoke English perfectly, and said with much politeness:—'I regret, gentlemen, that since you are not officers, I suggest you go on parole.' As a matter of fact, we were just as glad that he could not, as neither of us was reconciled to the idea of being locked up in a German prison for the rest of the war.

"The Germans treated us shamefully. They gave us nothing to eat and taunted and jeered at us continually. The night we spent in the open, lying on the roadside without any covering between two men. The Germans made themselves comfortable enough, you may be sure. Then in the morning we were handed over to a regiment of infantry, the King of Spain's regiment of Prussian infantry, and the way these men treated us was a revelation of German brutality. They took a sheer delight in knocking two defenceless Englishmen about, prodding us with their bayonets, jabbing us with the butts of their rifles and kicking and pushing us as we marched along with them. They ordered us to carry their packs. Thinking discretion the better part of valor, I took the one handed me, but Geoffrey, like the high spirited fellow he was, flatly refused and got a smack across the head with the butt of a rifle.

"The Germans took us with them in their advance against the French and made us go into the trenches with them. We were thrust into the line with the rest under a terrific fire from the French guns and artillery. The French shrapnel was awful. The Germans fell like flies and their bodies began to pile up in the trenches.

"I had a good opportunity of seeing the German soldier under fire, and I must say he is brave enough. He seems to be imbued, with a sort of Oriental fanaticism, and goes about his duties stolidly, paying no heed to the bullets flying around.

"But Geoffrey and I were getting a bit tired of this gentle German. In the trenches we were constantly exposed to the risk of being killed by the French or British fire, so we decided that we might take a chance of escape.

A Dash Under Fire.

"We decided to make a dash for it. The Germans were all very busy with the fight, and we managed to creep away unperceived out of the trenches and through the long grass. There were some civilian prisoners with us in the trenches, and they were in the last stages of physical fear. I believe the poor beggars, fearing they might have to bear the consequences if we got clear away, drew the attention of the Germans to us. Anyway, we were not more than two or three hundred feet away when the Germans saw us and opened fire. By instinct, I suppose, I threw myself flat on my face, and Geoffrey did the same. Seeing that we did not move, the Germans took no further notice of us, and I lay for about three hours without moving. Then I noted that the Germans had left their trenches, and I turned to Geoffrey, who, like myself, had never stirred. He was dead, shot through the head.

"I had to leave him where he lay and creep away for safety. Finding a loft in the village of Varreddes, I stole in there, and in the evening the Germans came back. Four of them installed themselves in the room below my loft, and for two days they remained there, while I was a prisoner in the hay above them. Hungry as I was I could not help laughing at them, that they should be there, all unconscious of the near proximity of their former prisoner.

"From the window of the loft I saw an old peasant with a cow, and that gave me an idea for escape. As soon as the Germans left the house I stole out, got into a house next door, loaned myself a suit of peasant's clothes, and in order to complete my make-up captured a calf. I led it right through the German lines into the French. None of the Germans took the least notice of me, but the French imagined I was a spy, until one of their officers, who spoke English well, recognized me, and passed me through to the British.

"I have got that peasant suit still, and mean to keep it as a souvenir of my experience."

"A week later I returned to Varreddes and found the body of poor Geoffrey Pearson lying where I had left it, and buried it there, with the assistance of some peasants, sprinkling the grave with a cross on which I cut the name and date, and which it may be I shall easily later on."

English Prisoners Face Fire of Allies

Two Motorcyclists, Captured by Germans, Are Forced to Enter Trenches—One Is Killed in Effort to Escape, but Other Succeeds and Tells of Teuton Cruelty After Their Surrender When Surrounded on Scouting Trip.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, November 14.

No more dramatic adventure of the war perhaps has befallen any one than to the Hon. Geoffrey Pearson, son of Lord Cowdray, and Sergeant Major Mackay, of the Army Motor Transport. Geoffrey Pearson is dead, and his body rests in the middle of a great plain, the battle field of the Marne, surrounded by innumerable little crosses which mark the resting places of many comrades, French and British.

It is Sergeant Mackay who tells the story.

"On the retreat from Mons Geoffrey Pearson and I were acting as motorcyclists, and were letting out our machines for all they were worth along a straight road, with open country on either side. Suddenly we seemed to ride into a perfect hailstorm of bullets. Ahead of us the road ran into a little wood.

"'Come on, Jeff! We'll ride for it!' I shouted, and we dashed through in safety; but hardly had we entered the wood than we rode into a group of German cavalry, stationed about on either side of the road. They immediately fired on us, and seeing the game was up we tumbled off our machines, put up our hands and surrendered.

"The Germans were wild with delight when they discovered we were British, spat at, struck and taunted us. They allowed us to mount our machines again, but plainly let us understand what should happen to us if we attempted to escape. We had no intention, however, of letting the German army have the use of our machines if we were to be prisoners. So we turned off the interesting old, with the result that after a little while the machines jammed and became useless. The Germans were very suspicious and asked us why. Since we were motorcyclists we could not repair our machines, but we replied that they were worn out by hard work and could not be put in order again. So we left the machines by the ground.

"The mounted Gendarmes (Grandfers as Fred), into whose hands we had fallen, took us to their captain, who spoke English perfectly, and said with much politeness:—'I regret, gentlemen, that since you are not officers, I suggest you go on parole.' Russian Wounded Reach Petrograd by Hundreds Capital's Accommodations for 50,000 Will Soon Be Inadequate, According to Present Indications—Youthful Aviator Is Decorated for Valor.

(Special Dispatch.)

PETROGRAD, November 14.

Were it not for the daily arrival of the wounded from the front and the continuous streams of soldiers on their way to the railway stations Petrograd might be as far removed from the seat of war as if it were in the depths of China. A wise government has even prohibited the crying of war news in the streets, and the uniformed venders lounge at the street corners mutely exhibiting their stock of papers, old and new, for almost every week brings a new journal into being.

Poems could be written full of thrilling incidents of the war as related by the wounded returning from the front and by the many correspondents scattered throughout Poland and Lithuania but miles and miles away from the actual scenes of operation. So fantastic were some of these tales that I set myself the task of verifying as far as possible some of them, going to hospitals and talking with officers and men who have passed through a veritable "hell" of fire, din and smoke. Petrograd is equipped to take care of 50,000 wounded, and from present indications it cannot be long before this number will have to be taken care of. Hundreds arrive daily and thousands are concentrated in the field hospitals awaiting transportation to the different centres.

The ambulance trains are marvels of practicability and comparative comfort. They are fitted with hammocks for the seriously wounded, to whom every jolt of the train means increased agony. But the trains move only at the rate of about twenty miles an hour, and the broad gauge of the Russian railways enables smoother travel than on any other.

Thousands Aid Wounded.

Thousands of hands are at work here providing for the wounded. As all the restaurants and places of amusement close at eleven o'clock and the Russian is not accustomed to retiring early, the evenings are given up to really benevolent work. Students, male and female, college boys, men and women in society and the thousands of moderate means whom war has deprived of employment go abroad collecting money, clothing, some luxuries and tobacco and bring them to the depots, sorting and distributing until all hours of the night.

All society affairs have been stopped. No dinner parties, no games, practically no enjoyments of any kind are allowed in the Russian houses, and the money saved is given to the Red Cross and the funds for relieving the needs of the reservists' families.

At the Elisabeth Hospital, at present three hundred are being treated. There are sights almost any one of which is enough to cause a shudder. Here, for example, is an artilleryman who has been struck in the shoulder by an explosive bullet, his entire shoulder having been torn away and his arm hanging by just a few strings of muscle. Next was hit by a bullet while in charge of a gun, and as he remained unnoticed for some time after he was struck he knows what had happened. Another is a fisherman with Austrians on the Galician frontier, when the Russians, getting out the upper hand, advanced the fighting positions and took a prisoner's privileges. Some were shot, others were taken prisoner, and some were left behind. Among the latter was this fisherman, who was found by the Austrian war officer [illegible] bullets had been served out to [illegible] duty had been detailed to [illegible] ammunition, but the prisoners from whom these rifles were taken had been fighting in the ranks.

Another interesting case is that of a Cossack who had been out on a scouting expedition and, with eleven of his comrades, suddenly found himself opposite a detachment of twenty-five Austrians. A hand-to-hand fight ensued, and he, receiving a sabre cut on his right shoulder, was taken prisoner, while some of his comrades were killed, and the others escaped, after killing five Austrians and wounding several. His captors brought him before an officer in charge of a patrol, some four miles from the scene of the encounter, and, after being questioned regarding the position of the Russian main body, from which he had been detached, and, refusing to answer, the officer, notwithstanding the fact that he was badly wounded, ordered him to perform the Cossack dance on horseback, called the "Gopitovka."

The Cossack could do nothing but comply. He mounted his own horse and began the series of gyrations composing the dance. His horse was comparatively fresh and he noticed that the other horses belonging to the Austrians were some little distance away. Suddenly gaining his spurs into his mount he gave him his head and made off, trusting to his horse's instinct to carry him back to the lines.

With the wonderful agility innate of the Cossack he even managed to pick up a carbine off the ground while going at full speed, and fired a few shots at his pursuers, who had recovered from their surprise. They in turn shot at him, and one of their shots took effect, striking him in the upper left arm. He finally reached the lines half dead from the loss of blood, and is now resting comfortably in a hospital.

Young Aviator Wins Cross.

A young aeronaut with three bullet wounds in his chest is one of the hospital's favorites. On his breast glitters the Cross of St. George, Russia's highest military decoration, conferred only for bravery on the field of battle. He is only nineteen years of age, but has been a member of the flying corps for more than two years. His story, as told in the official reports, is this:—

He was sent to reconnoitre the enemy's position before dusk. It was in Galicia, and the territory was unfavorable for a landing at any point. He flew a single plane machine and went up about 1,800 feet, at which height however, he could not make out the exact positions. He therefore descended to about 500 feet, but was discovered by the enemy, who immediately began firing shrapnel at the machine. By zig-zagging with lightning rapidity the aviator managed to stay at this height until he got the information desired. He had made [illegible] and was about to return to his [illegible] when an explosive bullet struck [illegible] of his motor, shooting off a piece of the cylinder and a valve, and tearing away part of his jacket, inflicting two terrible wounds in his chest.

Quick as thought the young officer unwound his scarf from his neck, stuffed it into the gap and continued to fly, but his right arm was ruined. He manoeuvred to descend and returned in safety with all of these, at the moment, unnecessary wounds. He was awarded a decoration, [illegible] of a certain kind. Having his wounds dressed he begged to be given back to the aeroplane and, in spite of his pain and the remonstrating protests of his comrades, insisted on making a flight to test the machine. He was [illegible] to bandage his wounds, and [illegible] with

"Ma, has your tongue got legs?" "Got what, child?" "Legs, ma?" "Certainly not, but why do you ask that silly question?" "Well, I heard pa say that your tongue was running from morning till night."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A REUNION

A LABOR DAY STORY

By ARTHUR PRICE

The Labor day procession was coming down the street. The first man in it was six feet four inches tall, with a bearskin hat on his head that raised him to seven feet. He was the drum major of the band and was twirling his big silver headed staff and throwing it into the air with fine juggiery. Behind him came the band and then the man of most real importance, the grand marshal, followed by his aids. Then came the different unions marching in line, every man looking happy on this clear September day that he could lay aside his hammer or his trowel or whatever tool best represented his trade and step out to the inspiriting strains of martial music.

Among those who lined the sidewalks, occupied the steps of the buildings and climbed the lamp posts along the line of march was a certain Mrs. O'Toole, who had recently come over from Ireland. With her was her son, Daniel, six years old. The mother was standing with the crowd on the curb, but Danny was perched with a leg on each side of a horizontal piece of iron under the lamp, straining his eyes to catch the first glimpse of sunlight that would strike the brass horns of the band.

"They're comin', mother!" he shouted, wild with excitement. Every eye within hearing of the boy's voice was turned in the direction he was looking. True enough, a line of mounted police wheeled around a corner, and in another moment the strains of music were heard in the distance. Danny kept his mother informed of each appearance as it was revealed to him and was not a little proud to think that there were those in the crowd directly beneath him who were benefiting by his information.

"Oh, mother, there's a giant with a woolly dog on his head throwin' up a big stick. Reckon he's runnin' the whole business.

The big horns grew hoarser, the bass drum pounded louder, the piccolo shrilled harder, as the columns advanced. When mounted police riding abreast came a man on the sidewalk interested in Danny's description and his uneasiness that his mother should see it all handed her a step but on which he had been stumbling and made her mount it. She thanked him and, stepping up, had a fine view of those passing in the street, much to Danny's satisfaction.

The drum major passed, the band passed, the grand marshal and his aids passed. Then came the Carpenters' union, the Plumbers' union and the Masons' union.

"Oh, Danny," cried Mrs. O'Toole, "there's your father!"

Now, Danny O'Toole had known ever since he was old enough to know anything that his father had left him and his mother in Ireland when Danny was a baby to come to America. He was to send money home and when he got enough together to send for his wife and boy he would do so. For awhile letters had come from him; then they had ceased. His wife had come to America to look for him.

"Which?" cried Danny.

"The man on the far side, him with the red head. Call him."

Danny, knowing only one way to attract his parent's attention, shouted "Red head!" with all the power of his little lungs. The man heard him and turning his head, saw a kid on a lamp post waving his hat at him. Then, lowering his eyes, he saw his wife looking in his direction. Leaving the ranks, he came across the street, elbowed his way through the crowd to his wife, and she fell into his arms.

Meanwhile Danny, feeling that he was not getting his share in this fatuly reunion, dropped down on to his father with one leg on each shoulder. His father pulled him down into his arms.

"The child?" asked O'Toole.

"Yes. It's Danny."

Danny got a bag that made him cry out, and, drawing off as far as he could, he punched his bugger with his little fist.

"Don't you hurt me that way again!" he said fiercely.

"Oh, Danny," said Mrs. O'Toole, laughing through her tears, "your father's so glad to see you."

That ended the O'Toole family's interest in the Labor day procession. O'Toole went with his wife and boy to their rooms, where he explained his long silence. He had been suddenly taken ill and attacked with loss of memory. It had partially returned to him, and he had written his wife, but she had already left Ireland for America.

O'Toole was getting on his feet again when his wife and boy were restored to him, and it was not long before he was able to make them comfortable.

That was a number of years ago. Since then Danny O'Toole has grown to be a stalwart young fellow, has learned his trade and can swing a sledgehammer with any man. And when labor processions march down the street between admiring crowds Danny is sure to be among them. And he takes a greater interest in the day because it is the anniversary of his first meeting with his father in America and of the family reunion.

HEALING THAT IS FROM GOD

To the world at large it may sometimes seem as if Christian Science were primarily concerned with the healing of the body. The mission of Christian Science without question is to bring the healing and saving love of God to misguided humanity, but the improved bodily health which its followers experience is only the symbol of a deeper change that has taken place in a regenerated state of consciousness. Not only does physical illness come within the field of divine healing, but sin, poverty, accident, and all other afflictions of mortal man, as well. The belief in evil challenges us in various disguises and fortunate indeed is the one who has learned in Christian Science how to find an immediate haven in divine Love, where the storms of mortal sense cannot continue to assail him.

"When an accident happens, don't think or exclaim, 'I am hurt!' Your thought is more powerful than your words, more powerful than the accident itself, to make the injury real. Now reverse the process. Declare that you are not hurt and understand the reason why, and you will find the healing good effects to be in exact proportion to your disbelief in physics, and your fidelity to divine metaphysics, confidence in God as All, which the Scriptures declare Him to be" (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, by Mary Baker Eddy, p. 397). Faithful adherence to this teaching has many times enabled students of Christian Science to recover instantaneously or without a very short time from injuries which mortal sense would proclaim as entailing a long period of distress.

The discovery of Christian Science came partially through such an experience. Mrs. Eddy, the discoverer and founder of Christian Science, was herself prostrated as the result of an accident when her thought, lifted with trust to God, attained the spiritual recognition of His all-presence and power. Spiritualized thought is the open door to the blessings God intends for His children. She was healed and to her persistent search for the meaning and Science of her recovery the world owes its opportunity of repeating her experience by a like growth in spiritual understanding. The result of her research is contained in the Christian Science text-book "Science and Health with Key to Scriptures." Here the nature of God and man's relation to Him are stated with the greatest clearness and directness. It restates in the language of to-day the message brought by Jesus, by which He wrought the works of healing and by which He was enabled to save Himself in the sharpest trial His enemies were able to put upon Him.

The Christian Science definition of the life of man may be stated as follows: God, the divine Mind, or Spirit, is Life. Man is the reflection of God. He exists as a perfect idea of God. Man is, therefore, a spiritual being. The idea, man, remains forever perfect in the divine Mind. Mortal sense, because it seeks to contradict the perfection of God's universe, Christian Science calls error. If mortal sense declares that an injury has occurred, the perfect idea, understood, quietly blots out the false evidence upon the basis that the spiritual man is forever unimpaired.

In proportion to the depth of understanding is the extent of the field of healing. With perfect understanding will some day go perfect healing. Jesus, the great Exemplar, never found a case too difficult because he refused to listen to the arguments of mortal sense. The severed ear of the high priest's servant he healed instantaneously. His own mutilations were overcome in three days, and His sense of life as one with the Father was manifested in a higher understanding of man's control over so-called matter than had been revealed before he was put to the test. He allowed his enemies to do their utmost to destroy him from the world's standpoint of life in the body. The result was a supreme opportunity to prove the life of man indestructible as the reflection of an eternal divine Principle.

Christian Science has accepted Jesus' standard of healing as the test of an exact knowledge of God. It has accepted without reserve his promises that the power of good should be manifested through him who has a clear faith or understanding of man's relation to his heavenly Father. To the truth of Jesus' statements Christian scientists are willing to entrust their well-being and their lives. The result is the revealing once more to the world of the operation of the spiritual law that has been in apparent abeyance for so many centuries. God has always been with me, but men, perverting their inheritance, have denied man's true qualities, and set up other gods whose laws they have conceived as apart from spiritual being. Man is not dual. He is one, and that one is spiritual. God, creative Principle, is never set aside by another power. Now is the day of spiritual being. The unfaltering recognition of this brings out man's inheritance of harmony as the child of God.

Christian Science teaches men how to remold their habits of thought in line with true being — how to know God aright. This is the part man is called on to play; this is his duty to God and to himself. The Christian Science church shows forth the fact that the declarations concerning the relations of God and man which its members are called upon to know and prove are indeed demonstrable Science. The perfect idea discerned and reflected in consciousness bears its fruit in regenerated lives.

The healing of individual needs constitutes the healing bit by bit of the needs of society. The brotherhood of man has been felt as an ideal by many, but has been thought impossible of attainment. Since God is Love, the perfect harmonious relation of man to man must already exist in the divine Mind. The practice of Christian Science heals the human consciousness of the blots and impurities of the belief in error. As this is done for individuals it is done proportionately for society and the brotherhood of man is brought to light. "One infinite God, good, unifies men and nations; constitutes the brotherhood of man; . . . annuls the curse on man, and leaves nothing that can sin, suffer, be punished or destroyed" (Science and Health, p. 340).—Christian Science Monitor.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD.

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

SOOTHING MIDNIGHT CHIMES.

There is one nocturnal noise which most of us, when we hear it, contrive to tolerate. That man could have no music in his soul who should grumble at the ringing of the midnight chimes. Do you remember the experience of "Harry Ryecroft"? "I once passed a night in a little market town where I had arrived tired and went to bed early. I slept forthwith, but was presently awakened by I knew not what; in the darkness there sounded a sort of music, and, as my brain cleared, I was aware of the soft chiming of church bells. Why, what hour could it be? I struck a light and looked at my watch. Midnight. Then a glow came over me. 'We have heard the chimes at midnight, Master Shallow!' Never till then had I heard them. And the town in which I slept was Evesham, but a few miles from Stratford-on-Avon.—London Chronicle.

Defender of Liege Refused Privilege Because of "Atrocities."

PARIS, Nov. 15.—The correspondent of the Temps at Copenhagen says Gen. Leman, the Heroic Belgian commander, who defended Liege, now a prisoner at Magdeburg, asked permission for his daughter to come and see him.

The German authorities refused to grant this permission, on the ground that the Belgian population had committed atrocities against German troops and civilians.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—"By order of the Government," says an announcement in Le Figaro yesterday, "the communication of meteorological information is suspended. We are only able, therefore to give the temperature of Paris."

This step is believed to have been taken as a precautionary measure, the Government weather and predictions being of potential value to German commanders, especially those of the navy.

THE MISERY OF WAR

A German Soldier's Tears of Pity—Graphic Picture of Siege-Gun Fire.

"The "Echo," the Socialist paper in Hamburg, publishes a letter written by well-known local Socialist, now at the front, to his wife. We take the following interesting passages from it:

"We are going to be quartered upon the next village. We arrive with the third detachment at a public house. The woman, with her children, is in the kitchen crying. Her husband was shot in the morning. We receive warm food from the field kitchen—bacon and rice once again. Scarcely have we finished our meal than the call resounds: the British are four miles away, make ready! Tired and broken-down, we nevertheless set out. It is dusk already. We wend our way through the narrow streets and come out into a field. We muse—we lie down. We are lying on a damp ground; the hours pass by slowly. Now we lay ourselves down; now we kneel. The rain comes down in a thin penetrating veil.

Overpowered by Sleep.

"Everybody gets up. It is impossible to remain any longer on the wet ground. But I drop down overpowered by sleep, scarcely able to get up once more. We have not slept now for four nights. At last it begins to dawn, we return to our quarters. Rest at last till the next order. We lie down like dead wherever we find a little space. At mid-day we clean our rifles, and then dinner—rice and bacon again.

"The church is harbouring about 900 persons, men, women and children, some of the latter quite small, wrapped up in shawls and held in arms by their mothers. A picture of misery in the night I go there. Here and there a little mite is squeaking. It is heart-breaking. I brought with me bread and jars with marmalade. The poor creatures are grateful and speak in broken German, 'German soldier brave.'

Could Not Refrain From Tears.

"When I see in the houses children's toys I nearly cry for pity. I notice in a corner a child's tricycle, and I cannot refrain from weeping. The war is terrible. Some of it cannot be described. Words lack to express it. Now we must go to A——. But I hope we may have no street-fighting. Better to be opposed by mobile troops in the open field. This at least is an honest sort of contest."

A letter from the front published in the "Vossische Zeitung" thus describes the action of the big German 42cm. guns:

"The two Krupp guns are now ready after three days' work. They have lowered their mouths in order that the shell may be placed with the greater care. It is as if they felt melancholy because they were not yet allowed to fire. Suddenly one of them stood up erect, proudly looking into the sky. The distance has been determined; the great moment has arrived. Carefully a fuse is being brought to the trigger (abzug), which is pulled by two men. 'Ready!' and the commanding officer calls 'Fire!' A gigantic ball of fire some 30 to 40 feet in diameter is formed at the mouth. A deafening crash resounds and a strong pressure of air is felt. The window-panes in the house, which stands about 350 feet in front of the gun in the direction of the fire, are all shattered and the roof is partially carried off. The experienced eye can observe the shot. A little round body appears above the mouth of the barrel, rises straight in a steep line, and disappears after a second in the clouds. It is driven upwards with the facility of a child's indiarubber ball.

Shots at Ten Minutes' Interval.

"I carefully watched the thing as we were ordered to look after the Growler (Brummer). The shots followed one another at intervals of ten minutes from each gun. Consequently we had the same spectacle over again every five minutes. In the afternoon we learnt that the fort had received two complete hits, one after the other, and that the garrison had withdrawn. This was noticed by the observation post, which stood about a mile and a half from the gun, and is connected with the latter by telephone. The impression is gigantic even at a great distance. Our quarters are situated at a distance of about 600 yards from the guns. Nevertheless the house gets a shock with every shot, which is heard as if it were quite near."

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

You can turn grey, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost overnight if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea Recipe are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning grey, becoming faded, dry, scraggly and thin have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the grey hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful—all dandruff goes, scalp itching and falling hair stops.

This is the age of youth. Grey-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

THE PLEASURES OF READING

By F. M. DELA POSSE

Sociology, according to the dictionary definition, is the "Science that treats of the origin and history of human society and social phenomena, the progress of civilization and the laws controlling human intercourse. Most people, unfortunately, seem to be deterred from a study of the subject by reason of its somewhat forbidding title. Many confound it with Anarchism, Nihilism, and a few of the other "isms" that at times raise their spectre heads above the ocean of life. Others again, seem to have an idea that it is simply another term for Socialism, a subject which even yet is referred to with bated breath in so-called orthodox circles under the hazy belief that its doctrines are subversive of all law, order and morality, and its expounders fit victims for the common hangman. As a matter of fact, it is none of these yet all, for it takes note of all, discusses all, the sum total of this information and deductions to be derived therefrom being entitled Sociology.

That the study of Sociology is absolutely essential for everyone who is anxious to obtain other than the most superficial ideas of modern society and the foundations on which it is based can easily be seen when such matters as Statistics, Education, Commerce, and the popular life of the people necessarily find a place therein.

The best thinkers of all ages have had something to say in regard to social principles. Plato, Aquinas, Hobbes, Locke, Montesquieu, Rousseau, Humé, Burke, Hegel, to mention only a few, developed many valuable thoughts along these lines, but it was not till 1838 that Comte, the great French philosopher, used the term, Sociology, to designate what to him appeared to be the master of science of all. But Comte shared the fate of every other philosopher; he did not satisfy everyone, particularly in his argument that social law should be constructive, and based, not on an assumption of God or man but only on proved facts. Following him, Herbert Spencer, in 1876, published his great work, entitled, "The Principles of Sociology." It is a stupendous piece of reasoning, but he also failed to gain more than a limited number of adherents owing to the fact that he raised the argument that the State should assume no more than the simplest governmental functions. Both these men gave much that was of the highest value to the question. Comte's chief claim to distinction is that he first raised Sociology to the dignity of a science and that he laid emphasis on facts rather than on theories.

If one were to attempt to sketch the full course of the social system it would take a volume to do so adequately. All that can be done here is to show the agencies whereby man has been enabled to raise himself to his present status and leave the reader to trace out for himself the history of the Social system.

Man is not the only animal that is social. Most created beings are social. The associations of bees, ants, beavers and birds are well known. But with these the feeling is instinctive, born of a necessity for help in the great struggle for existence. In human beings of low calibre and even in some instances of highly developed minds it is instinctive also and manifests itself in panics, fads, mobs, crazes, revolutions and lynchings. But with the human being, the social idea is, in the main, due to the great parts that memory and speech play in the mind. Through the possession of these attributes tradition has afforded to the social mind a certain continuity which is responsible for the level to which society has attained.

To assert that level is very high would be, in the light of present happenings in Europe, manifestly fallacious. Yet, in spite of the tremendous conflict now raging, and the rending of the great social fabric, thereby entailed there is ground for hope and courage, because the longer the warfare lasts the more apparent does the source of the evil become. It is the old story of opposing theories. Too many men have regarded themselves in the light of saviours of society and have attempted to match their amateur handiwork against that of the greatest Architect of all. There has been too much of the sand of materialism and too little of the cement of Christianity employed in the building and now that their efforts have wrought ruin and destruction through half the civilized world men begin to realize on what grounds the social system will have to be reared in order to be rendered imperishable.

There are about 500 volumes in the Library dealing with various aspects of society and sociological problems. There is little indeed, touching on the great questions of the past and the present, with which the reader may not get in touch by looking over the shelves.

WHY THE FRENCH FIGHT SO BRAVELY

The Morning Post of London publishes the following letter which a soldier in the French fighting line received from his sister. The letter reached the hands of a French general officer, who was so impressed with it that copies, omitting the name of the writer, are being widely circulated through the army. The letter is as follows:

"My dear Edward,—I hear that Charles and Lucien died on the 25th August; Eugene is very badly wounded; Louis and Jean are dead also. Rose has disappeared.

"Mamma weeps. She says that you are strong, and begs you to go to avenge them.

"I hope your officers will not refuse you permission. Jean had the Legion of Honour; succeed him in this.

"Out of the eleven of us who went to the war eight are dead. My dear brother, do your duty whatever is asked of you. God gave you your life and He has the right to take it back; that is what mamma says.

"We embrace you with all our heart and long to see you again.

"The Prussians are here. Young Joudon is dead; they have pillaged everything. I have come back from Gerbervillers, which is destroyed. The brutes!

"Now, my dear brother, make the sacrifice of your life. We have hope of seeing you again; for something gives me a presentiment and tells me to hope.

"We embrace you in all our hearts. Adieu and au revoir, if God permits.

"Thy Sister.

"It is for us and for France.

"Think of your brothers and of grandfather in '70."

Rival Leaders Meet.

"The formal meeting of the commander-in-chief of the Japanese army, Lt.-Gen. Kamio, and Capt. Meyer-Waldeck, formerly governor of Tsingtau, occurred on Nov. 10 at the Moltke Barracks. Capt. Waldeck will go on board a transport bound for Japan to-day. The total number of prisoners taken is 5,000.

"The ceremony of entry by the Japanese troops into the city of Tsingtau is expected to take place Nov. 16."

Zealand Ashore Near Quebec.

MONTREAL, Nov. 14.—In a blinding snowstorm the Red Star Liner Zealand, operating in the White Star-Dominion service, ran ashore at noon yesterday in Lake St. Peter, about 10 miles below Sorel. She stuck fast on a mud bottom, although the reports indicate that she has not suffered damage. It is thought she may be released before long, although some dredging may possibly have to be done first. About 100 passengers were taken off the Zealand and brought to Montreal on Grand Trunk and Quebec Southern trains.

Australians Oppose Reception.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—A storm of protest has been aroused in Melbourne by the suggestion that Capt. Carl von Muller, commander of the German cruiser Emden, which was destroyed recently by the Australian cruiser Sydney, be given a public reception in recognition of his gallantry and courtesy when he arrives in that city. This statement is made in a despatch from the Melbourne correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co.

FRENCH PARENTS JOYFUL WHEN SON RETURNS EVEN IF "DECORATED" FOREVER

CALAIS, Oct. 18 (by mail to New York).—You can't imagine the joy of mothers and fathers when their boys come back to them from the war minus an arm or a leg or some other portion of their bodies. Human nature is a queer thing, and war brings this queerness into strong relief.

I witnessed the arrival of a Red Cross train at the station here today. The cars were loaded with young men fresh from the Belgian border. They had been helping the poor Belgians to hold back the Germans along the Yser River, and, according to a soldier I talked to, "we gave them h——, I tell you—but we caught a few bullets ourselves."

And from the looks of them they had indeed. Some hobbled out of the cars themselves, their arms in slings or their heads tied up or a foot off the ground; others came on stretchers to be transferred to the channel steamer waiting at the dock. Presently one soldier limped out on the platform and stood for a moment looking about him, as if for someone. His head was bandaged all around so voluminously that he couldn't wear his cap; only one eye showed, and under it a badly swollen face. One arm was in a sling; the hand was bandaged in a way betokening the absence of one or more fingers.

Nearby stood a woman. She, too, was looking for someone. Several times she looked at the bandaged soldier, only to turn away. Suddenly the much bandaged soldier saw the woman and started. With his good hand he held back the bandages covering his face and part of his eye, to see better. With an articulate sound, partly smothered by the bandages, he stepped forward and touched the woman on the shoulder.

The woman uttered a cry. She searched eagerly, almost feverishly, the bandaged face, with her red eyes. Apparently her mother-love rather than her eyes, told her her search was ended. She uttered another cry, and joyously but tenderly caught the soldier in her arms.

"My son! My son!" she exclaimed, enraptured. A Red Cross surgeon stepped up.

"Madame," he said, "you son undoubtedly will recover, but I must tell you that most of his jaw is shot away."

"Oh, I'm so glad! So glad!" the mother cried, tears streaming from her eyes.

"Of course you are," the surgeon said, and turned away. He understood what she meant.

I confess I did not understand. I sought out the doctor to explain why a mother should be glad to get her son back with his face half gone.

"I see that sort of thing many times daily," the surgeon replied. "It really is quite simple when you figure it out. When a mother sees her boy march away to war she gives him up for dead. She scarcely hopes, even in her mother heart of hope, ever to see her boy alive again. Always she lives in dread of the day when the brief announcement of the dead will contain the name of her boy. So, at last when her boy comes back to her, it doesn't matter how terribly he is shot up or disfigured. It is the same with mothers everywhere, any time. When the boy comes back to his mother's arms, defeated in life's fight, wounded and hurt in life's struggle, no matter what his condition, his mother's arms want him.

As a matter of fact, the psychology goes a bit further. There is another cause for a mother's joy when her son returns, maimed, broken physically, but alive. She knows her trials are over; that her boy cannot return to the battle line, a mark for bullets and shrapnel that kill. From this time on she will have her boy with her. If the war last for ever, she will have no more terrible suspense, no more wakeful nights of dread.

There is another strange thing to be noted while talking to the wounded. They are quite happy to have bad wounds about the face and head, much preferring disfigurement of the face to lesser wounds in body or legs. The following picture explains. A train of wounded was on its way to southern France. When it halted at Boulogne those of the wounded who were able, got out to walk up and down the platform. Among those was one whose face could hardly be called by that name. One eye was gone, the other was badly swollen until he could barely see. Bandages covered all but discoloured parts of his face.

"You poor dear," sympathised an English woman who approached him timidly. "You poor, poor boy."

"Madame," replied the soldier with as much pride and clearness as the bandages would permit, "don't pity me. Pity my friends in the train there who got it where it won't show."

The English woman couldn't understand.

"Why—why—why," she stammered, "I thought you wouldn't like to be disfigured."

"Disfigured!" the soldier replied. "I'm not disfigured; I'm decorated."

And so he will be. Most of the soldiers feel the same way about it. They consider themselves in rare luck to get a bullet through the face. And after all, such a decoration is better than a medal.

THERE IS STILL NO LIGHT ON THE "AUDACIOUS" MYSTERY

MORE COUNTRY FLOODED BY ALLIES AND GERMANS SUSTAIN HEAVY LOSSES

Entire Regiment of Infantry Destroyed---Invaders Are Being Assaulted by Fire and Water and Have Been Unable To Make Progress--Terrible Weather Brings Suffering to the Troops.

WINTER CLOTHING RUSHED TO FRANCE

Examiner Special:

PARIS, November 16.—An entire German regiment was destroyed north of Bixschoote when the allied troops again flooded the district in which bitter fighting for the line to the coast has been in progress for hte past month. This was declared to-day in an official communique issued by the war office. About five miles has now been added to the flooded area, according to the official announcement. The inundated district heretofore has extended to Dixmunde, but it is now south of that point and continues to within three miles of Bixschoote, or to the forest of Houtsulst. It was there that the German regiment was destroyed in a rush of water which swept through the trenches. The renewal of the attack upon Dixmunde during the last week was made possible for the Germans by the receding waters which poured over the lowlands when the Belgians first flooded the district. More ground is now being inundated however, as part of the defensive measures.

LONDON, November 16.—Biting gales, driving before them hail, rain and snow, from Nieuport, along the entire left wing of the allied army, have brought to the fighting line in Belgium and France conditions which are causing the war office the greatest concern. The attack of the Germans has slackened owing both to the inundation of additional territory and the storms which prevail. It is realized however that under present conditions the danger in the British and French ranks of an epidemic must soon become acute. The suffering of the men is intense. Great quantities of heavy clothing and other supplies for winter campaigning have been rushed to France and more are following. It is feared, however, that with the ground sodden from the heavy rains and the snow now falling the death rate will be increased as all reports indicate that the men find it impossible to keep dry.

The situation with the German lines is even more serious than on the left bank of the Yser with the allies. All the roads are declared to be practically impassable; guns and waggons have mired down, and the roads which still be used despite the mud, are now made more treacherous by the snow. The Germans are now assaulted by both fire and water. Virtually marooned in some places by the flooding of the lowlands, they are subjected to a terrific artillery fire from the allied lines, and hold their positions only by the greatest show of bravery and at terrible cost.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Telegraphing from Athens, the correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company says it was announced at the Grecian Chamber of Deputies to-day that Great Britain had advanced the Greek Government eight millions to pay for warships for Greece to be constructed in English shipyards.

LONDON, November 16.—England to-day awaited in sorrow the body of "Bobs." It is expected that to-day or to-morrow the remains of Lord Roberts will reach Folkestone from France, where he died among the British troops, literally giving up his life for one more visit among his beloved Indian troops. The funeral services for late hero of the South African war and Field Marshall will probably be held at St. Paul's, where those of Wellington, Nelson and other British heroes have been held. Messages of condolence have been sent to Lord Roberts' widow and daughter by King George, General Sir John French, and others, from all parts of the Empire.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 16.—Premier Sir Robert Borden, who has been at Hot Springs, Va., for the past three weeks, arrived in the Capital at noon to-day. The Premier, who is in splendid health after his holiday, will meet his ministers in daily cabinet councils to press forward arrangements for the despatch of additional contingents to the front.

Presentation To A. Kidd

Citizens Regret Loss of Chief Who is Returning to Peterboro' Force

BRAMPTON, Nov. 15. — Mr. A. Kidd, who, for four years past, has had charge of the police force here, was the recipient of an address and a gold watch at an informal meeting of influential citizens at the Victoria Hotel last night, Mr. C. W. Duggan made the presentation. He remarked upon the satisfactory manner in which the town's interests had been guarded during Chief Kidd's term here.

Reeve Milner stated that strong efforts would be made to retain the Chief's services, if the police authorities of Peterborough could be prevailed upon to allow him to remain.

SALVATION ARMY BAND HONOURS MEMORY OF "BOBS"

In respect for Lord Roberts, the patriarch of the British land forces, who died Saturday on the way to the front to visit his former command the Indian troops, on the battle line, the Salvation Army Band, at the regular evening service last night, played the "Dead March" from Saul. Reference to the death of the idol of the British Empire was made in a feeling manner by Adjutant McElhiney, who very aptly expressed the feeling of sadness which the passing of this grand old soldier has occasioned throughout the length and breadth of the Empire.

5th Anniversary of Opening of Sacred Heart Church

The fifth anniversary of the opening of the Church of the Sacred Heart will be celebrated next Sunday. Three masses at 7.30, 8.30 and 10.30 will be solemnized, the last a pontifical high mass with His Lordship Bishop O'Brien officiating. Rev. Dr. Roche, Superior of the Order of St. Basil, will preach in the morning and evening.

FIRE IN CELLAR WAS EXTINGUISHED BY NEIGHBOURS

Mr. George Ruth's new house at 747 Water street suffered last night from damage by smoke when a fire broke out in the basement. The house has just been recently completed and there were some shavings in the cellar which in some manner became ignited by a spark from the fireplace in the room above. The neighbours assembling with two lines of garden hose assisted Mr. Ruth to extinguish the fire. Very little damage was done by the flames, but the smoke penetrated every part of the house, and considerable damage may result to the furnishings. The fire broke out about fifteen minutes to eight. The fire brigade was also called out.

FIGHT IN SECOND HAND STORE ON SATURDAY NIGHT

Two Men Charged With Assault —New Crown Attorney Takes Hold of His First Case for the Crown

QUARREL OVER WATCH

Charles Swantson and Eric Ricourd appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning charged with assaulting S. Shenkinoff, the Simcoe street second hand dealer, with intent to do him severe bodily harm. It seems that some time ago one of the defendants left a watch in charge of Shenkinoff and received money for it. Shenkinoff said that he thought he bought the watch outright, while the defendant claims that he only received a loan, giving the time piece as security. On Saturday night the two men went to Shenkinoff's store to redeem the watch only to find that it had been sold. They then proceeded to administer to the unfortunate Hebrew what they considered to be sufficient punishment for what he had done. They succeeded in mauling him severely, although his wife came to his assistance and hit one of them across the face with an iron instrument that was originally designed and manufactured for the purpose of shaking down a stove. As a result one of the two prisoners displayed a nasty cut this morning.

Shenkinoff appeared in court this morning to swear out the information against the two prisoners, and bore evidence of having emerged from a conflict in which his assailants seemed to have had the better of the argument. His head was bound up and sundry lines of red upon his countenance showed where blows had been received.

As prosecutor in this case, Mr. G. W. Hatton made his first appearance as local Crown Attorney. He asked for a remand until Wednesday which was granted, the prisoners being allowed out on bail. Mr. D. O'Connell is appearing for the defence.

PRAISE FOR A LOCAL CONTRACTOR

Addition to Lindsay Post Office a Good Piece of Work

The Lindsay Warder says: The new addition to Lindsay Post Office was completed on Saturday, and to say the least, is a beautiful structure. Taken perspectively or from an inspection of the inner building, it will bear the keenest criticism for workmanship and material. The structure was erected by the well-known and experienced contractor Mr. Jas. Bogue, who has the proud reputation of doing nothing in a careless or superficial manner. It is an obvious and incontrovertible truth that has been borne out in the many structures erected by Contractor Bogue that all work done by him is well and satisfactorily done.

The new addition to the post office has a dimension of 60 x 60 feet, standing on a 9-foot base, and is one storey high. The place is constructed of brick, supported by steel columns where necessary.

THE WEATHER

The rainfall of yesterday and last night totalled over one inch and a third (1.37.) While the rainfall during the summer months was very short, the fall rains have been quite copious, and should bring the water in the rivers and streams up to their normal flow. The rainfall during the month of October, however, at least in this section, was not up to the average, and gave a total for the month of only a trifle over two inches.

UNION STOCK YARDS

Toronto's Big Fat Stock Show.

The Toronto Fat Stock Show will be held at the Union Stock Yards, Toronto, on Friday and Saturday, December 11th and 12th. The number of entries are very large and a show of fat stock, the like of which has never been equalled in the Dominion, may be looked for. Many special prizes are offered, several for farmers, such as for ten bacon hogs, ten long-wool lambs, 10 short wool lambs, etc. These prizes are offered to encourage the farmers in feeding and breeding.

Stret cars run direct to the show grounds. No effort or expense is being spared to make this Fat Stock Show the largest and finest ever held in Canada.

TEN MORE OFF TO JOIN THE 2ND CONTINGENT

GIFTS TO THE MEN

Ten more 57th Regiment recruits left on the morning G.T.R. train for Kingston this morning to join the 21st Battalion, making a total of 80 sent by the regiment. Eleven had been successful in passing the medical test, but one was unable to get his parent's consent and had to be struck off the list.

There was no public send-off this morning, but a number of friends gathered at the station to say goodbye. Representatives of the Ladies' War Fund Committee were on hand to present each departing soldier with a parcel containing Balaclava Sleeping caps and knitted wristlets, while Major Eastwood, paymaster of the 57th Regiment, gave each man a gift of $2.00 from the Regimental Funds. Mayor Buller was present to shake hands with the recruits.

Following were those who left this morning: Geo. Mehew, Sidney Spooner, Wm. H. Saxby, Jas. E. Jobe, Robert G. Gardiner, Jas. M. Greene, Walter G. Batley, Wm. W. C. McKim, Herbert C. Brown, Jas. M. Connelly.

THE DEATH OF MRS. HAYES

In regard to the death of Mrs. (Judge) Hayes, a Guelph Exchange has the following:

With startling suddenness, death came yesterday, shortly after noon, to Margaret Maude Macdonell, wife of Judge Hayes. The late Mrs. Hayes had been subject to heart attacks quite frequently, from which she would rally in a few days, and when she suffered from the fatal attack on Thursday last, little the family thought of her poor condition, until finally she grew so weak that a doctor was called for the first time. All that medical aid could do was done for the deceased, but without result, and she passed suddenly away at the family home, 38 Suffolk street.

The late Mrs. Hayes was born in Toronto, and was the fourth daughter of the late Angus D. Macdonell. She resided with her parents in Toronto, until 22 years ago, when she was wedded to Lewis M. Hayes, at that time barrister-at-law in Peterborough, now Judge for Wellington County. The deceased lived in Peterborough all of her married life, until about a month ago when she took up her residence in Guelph. Besides a sorrowing husband, and heartbroken mother, who still lives at the family home in Toronto, she is survived by five children, Stuart F. Hayes, eldest son, now serving with the 57th regiment, at Peterborough, with the first Canadian Contingent at Salisbury Plains, England; Nano, Pauline and Margaret, at Home; Master Frederick (Bobs) of Lakefield, and three sisters, Mrs. W. M. German, of Welland; Miss Macdonell, of Toronto, and Sister Helen of the Loretto Community, also three brothers, J. D. Macdonell, Esq., of Toronto; A. C. Macdonell, M.P., K.C., member of the House of Commons in South Toronto, and Lieut.-Col. A. H. Macdonell, D.S.O., of London, Ont., now serving with the Canadian Contingent in England.

The sincerest sympathy of the community will be extended to Judge Hayes and his family. Their bereavement, with the eldest son of the house at the front, is particularly distressing. Although only in the city a few months, Judge Hayes has formed a large circle of friends, who will feel keenly the loss that has so early marked his residence in this city.

Blacklister Paid Usual Penalty

Said He Got His Liquor In Lindsay Was Arrested Last Saturday

Matthew Edwards, who is on the Indian list, pleaded guilty in police court this morning to being found drunk on Saturday last while on the black list.

"You know that it costs you $10 to get drunk," said the Magistrate. "Any one of us can get drunk for a quarter." Edwards was fined $10 and costs or 30 days in jail. When questioned by the Chief, he said he got his fire water in Lindsay. He did not get any or even ask for any in this city.

"Audacious" Story Not Yet Confirmed

Nothing Published in England About Loss of Battleship and All That United States Can Learn Over the Cable is That Warship is Being Repaired.

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, November 16. — Whether the British super-dreadnought Audacious is now at the bottom of the sea, or is being repaired by the British Admiralty and may again see service, is a mystery connected with the reports of the vessel of the first line of England's naval defence falling a victim to a German mine or torpedo in the North Sea. Owing to the fact that the British censors will permit no reference to the accident to the Audacious to be cabled or printed in the London papers, it was only through most carefully worded messages that the United Press was able to convey to London the information that was desired. The message so framed was passed by the censors and the following came in reply: "Best information is that the Audacious is repairing." The message also indicated that there had been one fatality.

PETROGRAD, November 16. — With the continued withdrawal of the Austrians from Central Galicia, the Russian advance is developing with continued success. It is declared to-day that there is a general exodus from Cracow and judging from the lack of resistance shown the forces advancing upon it, it is believed that the Austrians may have decided not to defend this city. An official statement declares the Masurain lake region had been all but cleared of the enemy. The advance along the line toward Koenigsberg has reached Angersburg, 35 miles inside the East Prussian frontier. Fighting is in progress in the Soldau region. In the movement upon Thorn the fighting continues between Plock and the River Warthe. The Germans are said to have withdrawn from the vicinity of Kalisz.

LONDON, Nov. 16. — Addressing the House of Commons to-day, in moving for an additional vote of credit, Premier Asquith declared that up to Saturday the war had cost between $4,500,000 and $5,000,000 a day over normal expenditures.

In consequence of the heavy week-end rains, says a Rotterdam correspondent, it is rumoured that a big force of Germans around Dixmunde have been cut off by the floods.

BERLIN, via wireless to Sayville, Long Island, Nov 16.—A report received here from Geneva declares that the British cruisers Falcon, Brilliant and Rimaldo have been disabled by the German guns along the Belgium coast, according to an official statement issued to-day.

ADJOURNED SINE DIE

Material Witness Failed to Appear--Goods Seized By Sheriff

The case of Malcolm Maconomy versus Mrs. J. Allan, that was to have been heard this morning before His Honour Judge Huycke, in the County Court, was adjourned sine die, owing to the absence of a material witness. The material witness in this case happened to be the defendant. The latter was represented by Mr. J. E. L. Goodwill. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the plaintiff.

Action was instituted to recover certain monies which plaintiff claims to have advanced to the defendant during her stay in the city.

Mr. Goodwill in asking for an adjournment, submitted documentary evidence to prove that the defendant, who is now residing in the United States, was indisposed and therefore unable to appear in court.

On the other hand, Mr. Gordon contended that the witness was unwilling to appear. It was alleged that she had absconded and made a false declaration under an assumed name, and attempted to remove a quantity of furniture after it had been seized by the sheriff. The latter, however, managed to secure possession of it after it had been removed to the C.P.R. station.

ASSESSMENT APPEALS HEARD

A meeting of the Court of Revision was held on Saturday afternoon. The following appeals respecting the assessment for 1915 were taken up.

W. J. Henry, assessor, called attention to a manifest error by which lot 72, plan 119 was assessed for a building, while there was no building upon it. The assessment of $800 for building was struck off.

City Clerk Armstrong called attention to the omission from the rolls of part lot 18, Downie Street, which had in the three previous years been assessed to Mrs. Jessie Hamilton at $1,140. It was ordered that this be added to the roll with Mrs. Jessie Hamilton as owner and assessed for $1,140.

Mr. D. O'Connell, appearing for Mr. C. G. Graham, said that he was over assessed for property on Charlotte Street. Assessment was confirmed.

Mr. O'Connell also claimed a reduction in the taxes of the "Empress hotel" owing to the fact that business was suspended for several months to facilitate repairs. Judgment was reserved.

The assessment of Mr. J. E. Middleton was confirmed. Mr. B. D. Hall appeared for appellant.

SATURDAY, NOV. 14, 1914

THE LATE LORD ROBERTS.

Full of years and honours and, above all, of service, Lord Roberts, the revered of the Empire and the world, and the beloved of the army, Field Marshall Lord Roberts died as, if he could have ordered his passing, he doubtless would prefer to die—in harness. For the space of two generations he has been the idol of the army as Bobs, and it can well be believed that soldiers who had fought under his command, lying in the trenches on Sunday, wept at the news of his death. His heart as well as his hand, was with the defence of the Empire. The story of his services in arms, would be too long a story here, but it will form one of the bright pages of the Empire's history. His heart was in the army as one of the bulwarks of the Empire. For years he has been preaching the gospel of military preparation, and his last days were sacrificed—all too literally—to the duty of heartening the British soldiers in the field. Though "Bobs" has died and his fighting days are ended forever, his spirit remains and his last visit to the trenches, may prove that his last fighting has not been the least effective of his career. The British forces have been heartened and the spirit of "Bobs" will be in every charge. His body may rest alongside those of Nelson and Wellington in Westminster Abbey, but his soul goes marching on. What gives special significance to the death of Lord Roberts is the fact that he was the home commander-in-chief of the Canadian contingent now at Salisbury, and it is an added element of regret that he did not live to see our Canadian soldiers prove on the field, in France, as they nobly did in South Africa, that they were boys of the British breed. Good bye, "Bobs" your frail body is dead, but your soul lives in the bodies of British soldiers whom your example has inspired for two generations, as your name will live forever in every page where the deeds of gallant and faithful soldiers are written.

THE APPEAL OF SUFFERING.

At this distance, among the scenes of peaceful prosecution of our daily duties, we cannot and do not realize, nor even faintly imagine the stress of conflict in the war zone, nor the indescribable suffering it brings. If a workman breaks a leg in Peterborough he is carefully conveyed in a comfortable and, comparatively luxurious, ambulance to a hospital, and is at once surrounded with surgeons and gentle-handed nurses. Contrast this with the experience of a soldier who was placed in the French hospital at Paris, provided by the loyal enterprise of La Presse, Montreal, through the liberality of the municipalities of Quebec. The man who had faced without blenching shot and shell on the battle field, was overcome with emotion when he found himself on a soft mattress, between spotless sheets, the first taste of bed since the war broke out—something that seemed to him a miracle. He had had his thigh broken by a shell and lay at the bottom of a trench five days and five nights, under cold drenching rains, surrounded by dead comrades, disembowelled horses, suffering untold torture frim his wound, from hunger, thirst, and hopelessness of succour. One can imagine the emotion of such a man when he found his head on a soft pillow and his martyred body between clean linen and surrounded by tender care. When one thinks of these things multiplied by the thousand—when we think that our own soldier boys, may be exposed to similar conditions, we should take a new attitude towards the Red Cross work whose function is to give relief and comfort to the wounded soldier and perhaps save his life. Shall we not be moved to a new sense of duty if we think on these things. Shall we when the appeal comes, be as the "priest" and "Levite," who "passed by on the other side," or like the Samaritan who poured oil and wine into the wounds of the man who fell afong thieves, put him on his beast and took him to an inn and paid for his care? By putting ourselves in the place of the wounded soldier lying battered and helpless on the battle field, we shall put ourselves in the place of the Good Samaritan, imitate his spirit, and translate it into action by having a more practical and sympathic attitude towards the holy work of the Red Cross brigade.

GIVING EMPLOYMENT.

A correspondent writes—his letter is found elsewhere—referring to the necessity of employment for many of our citizens who are out of work, and will be out of work this hard winter unless employment of some kind is provided; for there is no prospect for dependable work unless the opportunity is made.

The pavement and street work generally is over; and it seems that not as many men are employed in the sewer outlet work as might be employed if the work were differently arranged. There is, however, more work that could be done by the city—work that needs to be done, work that will be in the interests of the citizens outside the relief of unemployment it gives. A few of the streets have been cleaned and the generous deposit of silt and leaves removed from the gutters. Why not at this time when employment is so badly needed, extend work of this kind to all the streets? The city will have to expend money in relief if something of this kind is not done. As far as results go money spent in relief, is wasted—there is no tangible result and it is worse than wasted when self-respecting men, anxious and willing to work, are compelled to take charity, which many of them will have to do or starve. Money spent in cleaning the streets, and opening the gutters will be well spent and leave the streets in good condition for the spring when money can be spent on construction.

The more employment we can give the less we shall have to give in relief. If money is wanted, the short-term bond, can be brought into play. This is a time when our city authorities can do good work. This is an extraordinary time, when extra-ordinary measures are called for. "Sharp's the word"—if anything is done, and something should be done. Now is the time to do it.

The correspondent suggests that men be employed in guarding public works, etc. This or an equivalent might be done with good results. We are to be called upon to provide more soldiers for the war field. Why not advance recruiting and put men under pay and under training, giving them some duty that will represent providing for defence. From these forces periodical drafts, could be made for overseas service. Coincident with defence service, military training could be vigorously prosecuted and the men receive a needed training. In any event these men would be under pay, a point of the first importance, especially when their being under pay would involve preparation for actual overseas service, for which we shall from time to time have to provide contingents.

Those in authority must not only enlist men but enlist their brains and their hearts, and bring themselves to doing things with a maximum of promptness nad energy, and a minimum of talk; for where there is much talking there is, generally, little doing.

A HOUSEHOLD SLOGAN.

The point of view changes. No longer do we gasp with admiration at the woman who tells us that the things she had in her house came from more than half the civilized countries in the world. It's all very well for the hunter to point to the heads on the walls of his den and tell you that he shot them in nine provinces, or on three continents, in lands of almost eternal snow and lands of tropical heat, on mountain, moor and plain over a whole atlas of maps. It's very interesting to listen to the aged athletes tell you from how many sporting associations and under how many flags he gathered his great mugs and shields and illuminated addresses. But the man or woman who strikes a thrill into us nowadays is the man or woman who can take us over the house and demonstrate that from garret to cellar from front verandah to the steps at the back kitchen door, and even out into the woodshed, the things which make that house a home were made in Canada, the land of homes, and under one flag, the Union Jack. There should be in every home a "Made-in-Canada" society, whose business it is to increase the number of things in that home made in Canada. Some may call it patriotism. It isn't. It's only common sense and the best kind of selfishness.

OUR UNNEUTRAL NEIGHBOURS.

Commenting on the problem of feeding the starving Belgians, the New York World remarks that Great Britain and France have gone to the support of Belgium with rifles in their hands, and it asks: Is the United States, which appears with money, food, clothing and medical supplies, any the less an ally? It proceeds:

If we feed and clothe the Belgian as patriots, we prolong their defence and strengthen the allies. If we feed and clothe the Belgians as German captives, we relieve their conquerors of a mighty task task properly chargeable to them by all the laws of war.

Our contemporary winds up with the question, "What is neutrality?" It seems to us that it has already supplied the answer, and that the question now should be, not "What is neutrality?" but "Why not go the whole hog?"—Montreal Herald Telegraph.

THE GREATER IMPERIALISM

EKFRID, Nov. 12.—As lately as last week I received a letter asking if there really is a place called Ekfrid. For some reason many people seem to think it is a made-up name, such as writers sometimes use when wishing to hide their location. To all such doubters I wish to say that Ekfrid is one of the most fertile townships in Middlesex county. Moreover, Ekfrid has just done something that places it definitely on the map. At a meeting of the Township Council yesterday afternoon it was decided unanimously to buy a carload of the best grade of flour and send it to the suffering Belgians. This spontaneous and praiseworthy action gives Ekfrid a place among the communities that have recognized their duty in this time of national trial. This action makes me feel proud of Ekfrid, proud of its generous ratepayers and of its public-spirited Council. The right thing has been done, and it has been done in the right way. Previous to this there had been contributions to the Patriotic Fund and the Red Cross Fund, through the efforts of the Women's Institutes, but there had not been any notable public enthusiasm. Now the situation has changed. Having commenced to give in the proper spirit, we are awake to the needs of the hour. Next week we are to have a patriotic concert in Appin, to gather money to buy clothing for the Belgians, and the indications are that the response will be generous. Many citizens have announced that they intend paying $5 each for their tickets of admission, and if that spirit spreads Ekfrid will have a still better right to be regarded as a real place. The township is not only doing its duty in a proper spirit, but it is setting an example which, if followed by every other township in the Dominion, will redound to the credit of all Canada. Let the good work go on.

Contributions to the Patriotic Fund and the various funds for relief work have a value far beyond the money and products that are contributed. They are doing invaluable service in educating us to our responsibilities as citizens of the Empire. To most of us the Empire is something vast and vague, which inspires no true emotion. We understand Canada and are passionately loyal to it as the land of our birth, the land of our heriоc pioneer fathers and mothers. This spirit of Canadian loyalty was never better expressed than in the words of the late Agnes Kihgston:

"My love for Canada is bound up with my respect for the commandment, 'Honour thy father and thy mother.' My father and my mother hewed out a home for themselves in Canada, they are laid at rest here, and I ask that my days may be long in the land."

But this sentiment, admirable though it is, is not broad enough in its scope. Canada is not a separate and independent nation whose future is confined within her own borders. She is part of a world-wide Empire, and it is high time that we were beginning to cultivate a world outlook. This war is showing us that our destiny is involved in the tragedy now being enacted in Belgium and France. To safeguard our rights as Canadians we must face our responsibilities as citizens of the Empire. There is no longer any place for little Canadians or little Englanders or little adherents of any of the nations that comprise the far-flung British Empire. The Empire must now be regarded as something vital and homogeneous to its farthest bound, of which we are all citizens and in whose fate we are all involved.

It is not enough that we should make an end of little Canadianism and all other forms of little nationalism within the Empire. We must also avoid a spirit of little Imperialism. It is perhaps unfortunate that we have not heard much of Imperialism except in the heat of partisan conflicts, when the greater conception was clouded by local issues. What we need now is a conception of an Empire, "one and indivisible," with all its citizens equal in authority and equal in responsibilities. The constituent nations would then be organizations within the Empire that would make it possible for every citizen to be at all times conscious of his rights and place. Each citizen would be loyal to his own nation, but would not confine his loyalty to its boundaries. He would also be loyal to the Empire in the greater issues of world progress. Such an Empire, rightly understood by its citizens, and rightly inter-related by its national Governments, might be truly symbolized as "An eagle renewing her mighty youth and kindling her undazzled eyes at the light of the midday sun." Every step we take to support the Empire at the present time hastens the hour when this Greater Imperialism will become a vital force. When the people once realize their destiny and responsibilities they will be willing to press the world-shaping issue of the war to "the last man and the last dollar."—Peter McArthur.

VALOUR OF THE FRENCH.

The French Army has always enjoyed an incomparable reputation for intrepidity in attack. Since this war began it has earned fresh and even greater fame for its unshaken tenacity and its indomitable doggedness. The British nation watch with the profoundest admiration the ceaseless struggle which the French army is maintaining with so much skill and success. It retains entire confidence in the strategy of General Joffre, and is proud to know that the British Army is fighting under his direction, side by side with his brave troops. It discerns in the stern courage of France a determination equal to its own. Shoulder to shoulder, the Allies in the west will continue to wage this war with unflinching zeal until France is cleared of the foe, until the Belgian nation is restored to the possession of its own country, and until the menace of Prussian domination, which has so long brooded over Europe, is sattered for ever.—London Times.

AUSTRALIA, NOT CANADA, DID IT.

The war vessel which finally disposed of the annoying and destructive German cruiser Emden was herself a cruiser, and was the property of the Australian Government. These are two facts which call for very careful consideration by the Canadian people, and possibly also by Sir Robert Borden, who must even now be pondering in his leisure moments upon the nature of the "permanent naval policy" which his party is some day to lay before the electors.

That the achievement of the H.M.A.S "Sydney" is a very large and conspicuous feather in the cap of Australia, nobody can deny; nor that it is a feather which practically all Canadians would like to see in the headgear of this Dominion. As the result of a squabble of politicians for which the Canadian people were in no wise responsible, ending in the inexcusable assumption of veto power for party ends by the Senate majority, there is not the slightest prospect of any such feather being secured by Canada in the present war.

The war has proved also that when it comes to the day of the big guns it does not make any very great difference whether a boat belongs to the British Government or to the Government of Australia or the Government of Canada: she is placed at once under one general control, becomes part of one vast defensive system, co-operates with every part of that system and seeks out the common enemy wherever he may be found. That is a very useful and salutary lesson. When the Empire is at war Canada's war vessels, few or many, large or small, are at war; and quarrels over the wording of laws for settling that point are futile foolishness.—Beck's Weekly.

"I should like to have your opinion of my picture," he said to the critic.

"It's absolutely worthless," the other replied, shortly.

READY FOR RETREAT.

Germans Have Prepared Three Formidable Defence Lines on Rhine.

GENEVA, Nov. 16. — (Via Paris.) —The German army staff has prepared three formidable defence lines from the North Sea to Rhine, to be used in event of a retreat, according to a high Swiss army officer, who recently returned from Germany.

The first line of defences extends from Antwerp southward to Namur and Sedan, he says. The second is on the frontier between Maestrich, Luxembuag and Metz. The third is on the Rhine itself, extending from Basel to Cologne, and even further. The officer didn't visit Alsace or Lorraine.

The Swiss officer predicts that long battles similar to those of the Marne and the Aisne will be repeated on each of these lines unless Russia attacks strongly meantime.

IE MILITARY AUTHORITIES' ATTITUDE TOWARDS FOOTBALL

e No Objection to the Game as an Occasional Recreation But Feel That It is More Desirable That Professional Football Players Should Find Employment in His Majesty's Forces.

ONDON, Nov. 16.— Followers of essional football in England are tly agitated over a statement is- l to-night by Under-Secretary . H. J. Tennant, relative to the tude of the military authorities to- rd this sport.

ked whether football should be ed in time of war Under-Secretary nant is reported to have replied: e military authorities have no ob- ion to the game as an occasional ation, but professional football is within that category, and it is e desirable that professional foot- players should find employment in Majesty's forces."

he secretary of the Football Associ- n declares that the stopping of the e would mean a loss to Worces- of $10,000,000 yearly.

his new expression of opinion is lly different from that given by powers that be at Whitehall when d for their advice on this identi- point very early on in the season. y then advised that the sport ld go on as usual and help keep mind of the people as much as sible from the tragedies attendant n war. The different clubs then red their grounds for centres of l, but when the War Office could no use for the fields players in y centres banded themselves into itary corps of a kind and under rvists and Territorial officers be- to learn the rudiments of military l. Of discipline they knew plenty obedience to orders is the first les- a well trained footballer is taught. re, in many of the grounds they e miniature rifle ranges erected not y for their own but public use as l.

he opinion of the Under-Secretary War will doubtless come as a sur- e to followers of the game in gen- l but the footballer is not lacking patriotism and will willingly bow knee to the inevitable. Should en- ment of professional players of the e become general, as doubtless it l if the spirit of the new opinion be ed upon, the fighting ranks will be led to by thousands of the best nditioned men in the Old Country lay.

Worcester's loss will doubtless be vy, as it is in that quarter that bulk of the uniforms sported by players are manufactured. But the s to club managements and individ- l players will also be extensive.

For the first time in twelve league mes, Manchester City on Saturday d to taste the bitters of defeat, but disgrace attaches to the perform- e of the Hyde Road men at Hills- rough, for in Sheffield Wednesday y were up against the eleven that m early on seriously menaced their nces of securing championship nours. Oldham Athletic also, with ly one def it on their calendar, now the premier league, with Sheffield dnesday in third place, a point be- nd and a game more played. These e rare days for Oldham, and a vision the present leaders fighting it out th Manchester City for the cham- onship makes enthusiasm in and ound county Palatinate bubble over th hopes.

Hearts still lead the way in the prin- pal Scottish league, and are the only am in the combination with one de- at on record so far, but with the ughty Celts hard after them, the omise of a rousing finish is visual- ed unless there is a general col- pse somewhere.

Junior Business Men And Excelsior Five Were Winners

There were two classy games of basketball played in the "Y" gymnasium last Saturday night. The games were fixtures in the Y.M.C.A. League for the Cressman Trophy and a good crowd present indicated that considerable interest is being taken in the various matches.

The first game was between the Bankers and the Junior Business Men. In this encounter the latter five succeeded in wiping the earth with the Bankers to the tune of a 21 to 7 score. The Junior Business men showed splendid form, not only outplaying their opponents on defensive tactics, but also being more successful and effective in their offensive game. Cranfield for the winners and Bartlett for the Bankers, scored the most points for their respective teams which lined up as follows:

Bankers — Jeppson, Smythe, Bartlett, Morrow and Weller.

Jr. Business Men—M. Turner, F. Turner, Cranfield, Johnston and M. Motheral.

Second Game.

The second game resulted in a decided win for the Excelsior Club over the Pirates. The score at the finish stood 25—13 in favour of the Excelsior five. Neither team shone in team play, though the Excelsior aggregation have the appearance of the makings of a first-class team and should make a good bid for the season. Long secured the most baskets for the winners and W. English was high man for the members of the skull and cross-bones brigade.

The teams were

Pirates—W. Rew, A. Austen, W. English, T. Gilchrist and E. Brown.

Excelsior—H. Long, H. Lewis, C. Stewart, B. Hamilton, A. Darling.

THREE MEN SAVED AN ENTIRE BATTERY

Comrades Were All Killed or Wounded But They Heroically Continued to Work Their Solitary Gun Until Germans Fled, Leaving Ten Guns Behind

Amidst the heroisms of the war, one of the most thrilling incidents is the exploit of the L Battery, an exploit now famous throughout England and probably unsurpassed in warfare. For one of the three heroic figures was Driver Frederick Alick Osborne, L. Battery, R.H.A., of Leicester, and a member of the Wesley Hall Brotherhood of that city.

The story has been slowly imparted. In September the gloom of the long and terrible retreat from Mons was lifted by the announcement of the capture of ten German guns by the English. Then fugitive paragraphs made reference to three men who had fought alone, wounded, but undaunted. Only now can the whole story be pieced together, and it is a veritable romance — tragic, heroic, glorious, says the Methodist Times.

It was on September 1, 1914, in a village near Compiegne, that the L Battery of six guns limbered up on reveille at 2:30, waiting for a missing order to retire. The French cavalry they were supporting retired unnoticed in the mist, and at 4:25, as the light grew, the Germans were perceived, but were thought to be the French. At 4:37 their battery of eleven guns and two maxims opened fire. The first shell killed Driver Osborne's horse, and in three minutes the gun teams of 286 horses were destroyed, only six horses being left.

Men Fell In Droves.

Men fell in droves, but Captain Bradbury and the men available strove to unlimber the guns, and in five minutes three were ready for action. One was instantly disabled by a German shell, and Driver Osborne was thrice wounded. A shrapnel bullet deeply grazed his cheek, another caught his shoulder, a third grazed his ribs and inflicted a nasty chest wound. The second gun was shattered in ten minutes, and then for another hour and a quarter one gun fought the German battery. It was an inferno. The screaming dying horses, the shattered groaning men, the shells in hundreds digging holes of four to five feet deep, and shrapnel bullets by thousands searching the ground made it a Gehenna. Men fell fast. The officers were killed or wounded, but the one gun fought on. Driver Osborne, thrice wounded, fetched the ammunition from fifty yards away amidst showers of shrapnel. One shell dropped within six feet, but did not burst, another hit a gun muzzle, but the fragments missed him. He was running behind a shattered gun for ammunition, when a shell hit the wheel, and the concussion of the broken wheel knocked his knee up, and he could go no more. An officer started for ammunition instead and was instantly killed. Osborne holds Captain Bradbury in high honour. "He was a hero and a gentleman." His courage, promptitude, and resource inspired his men.

German Guns Silenced.

One by one the German guns were hit, shattered, silenced, and their gunners fell, under the terrible accuracy of that one British gun. Ten guns ceased fire, and the Germans fled from the other. The Middlesex Regiment of infantry arrived at this point and found three men wounded, covered with blood from horses and men, but working their one gun with their ebbing strength.

Dashing forward, they captured the German guns, brought out the English battery and rescued the wounded men. The three men, with their fallen comrades, had saved the battery, destroyed the German attack, saved the village beyond, and secured the English rear. And how they fought! !

One account of the action gives an extract from the diary of Driver Thatcher, R.F.A., which states: "Only a few gunners were left, but they stood by firing and singing 'Onward, Christian Soldiers,'" but Driver Osborne says they did not sing. "We could not think of anything but firing. We were insane. When the shells came we went mad, we forgot to be afraid."

Recommended For V. C.

Driver Osborne was sent to hospital in Paris, but soon recovered. At Le Mans a month later he caught a severe internal chill whilst sleeping out on damp ground. They fought for his life for a day and night. The doctor gave him ten minutes to live. He took them and more. He is living still and in good health, though weak. He wrote home as follows:

"I have good news to tell you. I have been told officially that I am getting the French V.C., the Medaille Militaire for distinguished conduct, and it is also thought that I'll get the V.C. as well."

Actually the three survivors have been recommended for the Victoria Cross, and, if it is granted, will receive it at the hands of His Majesty the King in due course. It carries with it a valuable pension. Driver Osborne has won the Medaille Militaire, as he said. It is the private's equivalent to the Legion of Honour in France and carries also a pension of 100 francs a year.

At a reception given him in Leicester, Driver Osborne stated that he was going to the front again as soon as he had recovered.

'VARSITY AND M'GILL PLAY OFF SATURDAY

TORONTO, Nov. 16.— Toronto will have one play-off here next Saturay and contrary to the general belief last week, it will be the Intercollegiate who will decide their championship here. Captain Charlie Gage and J. C. McClelland of 'Varsity met President Haslett at the Intercollegiate and "Pep" Paisley of McGill at Montreal Saturday and by the toss of the coin 'Varsity secured the play-off here.

"Pep" Paisley won the toss for who had the right to call the coin, and when President Haslett flipped it called 'heads," but it came "tails" to the gratification of the 'Varsity representatives.

Previous to tossing for where the final game was to be played, it was agreed that the visiting team should have the right to name the referee and the home team the umpire, so therefore McGill named Silac McEvenue, a former McGill player, and coach of McGill II. and M.A.A.A. as referee, while 'Varsity named Dr. W. B. Hendry of Toronto as umpire.

The gate will be equally divided after all expenses in connection with the game are paid.

Will Warn South American Republics About Breaches of Neutrality.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16. — The American Ministers to Ecuador and Colombia have been instructed by Secretary Bryan to investigate the charges of the French and British Governments of the alleged violations of neutrality in aiding German naval vessels by coaling them and permitting them to communicate with the shore through radio stations on neutral ground.

This action was announced by Secretary Bryan last night. It is stated here that it is in complete compliance with the request of Great Britain and France that the influence of the United States Government be exerted to bring these South American countries to a realization of the responsibilities in permitting breaches of neutrality, and to remind them of the terms of the neutrality proclamations published by both. The matter will not be taken up in any way with the Ministers of these countries in Washington, it was learned at the State Department.

Corn finished ⅛c to ⅜c under last night, oats with a gain of ¼c and provisions varying from unchanged figures to a decline of 10c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 14.—Liverpool cables were firmer than anticipated, considering the weaker markets on this side on Friday, which was responsible for the steady opening. For some time following there was quite a lot of selling, causing a decline of ⅝c to ⅝c under Friday's close, but nearing the close shorts covered and prices advanced to previous high points. Oats showed extremely weak, declining to the extent of 1⅛c to 1⅛c, recovering in sympathy with wheat. Flax opened ½c to 2c higher, and previous to noon had advanced 5c to 5½c higher. Trading was active the greater part of the session. Winnipeg futures closed ½c lower to ⅛c higher. Oats closed unchanged to ⅛c lower. Flax was strong, closing 1⅛c to 1⅜c higher.

The demand for cash wheat was again excellent for all grades, and a fair volume changed hands. Millers and exporters were buying extensively in this department. Cash oats and barley were quiet, while there was a good enquiry for cash flax.

Inspections Friday were 564 cars, as against 1373 last year, and in sight were 400 cars.

Deliveries thru the clearing house were: Oats, 8000 bushels; flax, 12,000 bushels, and barley, 4000 bushels.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Nov. 15.—There was no improvement in the demand for Manitoba spring wheat from foreign buyers today, and what few bids were received were unchanged to 2d lower. The tone of the local market for coarse grains is steady. The demand for oats in carlots was better today and a moderate amount of business was done. The demand is principally for Ontario and Quebec grades, owing to prices for such being much lower than Canadian western grades. The tone of the market for flour is firm, but business on the whole is rather quiet. Demand for millfeed is good, and the market is active, with a very firm undertone.

There is an easy feeling in the butter market. Cheese is firm under a good demand. Export demand for eggs continues good, and the market is active.

Corn—No. 3 yellow, 58c to 64c.

Oats—No. 3 white, 45⅝c to 46c.

Flour and bran unchanged.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

WILL ASK THE CITY FOR A FRANCHISE

Mr. Paul Schlicht, an English Financier of London, New York and Frankfort-on-the-Maine, is in the City--Will Found the City of Schlichtholm Near Lindsay.

Mr. Paul Schlicht, international engineer and exponent of high finance. He is a fact and Peterborough enfolds him. Last night he sat in room No. 76 of the Empress Hotel, and to an Examiner representative and a well-known legal light, propounded the science by means of which he proposes to revolutionize the landscape in and around Lindsay. Mr. Schlicht claims to have purchased large tracts of peat lands in the vicinity of Lindsay, in addition to having secured options on the visible supply of peat in Ireland. His next move was to discover a process to dewater the peat, or, in other words, separate the water from the peat without sacrificing the ammonia and other valuable by-products which it is said to contain. Having accomplished this Mr. Schlicht proposes to erect a number of towns or cities contiguous to Lindsay and such other towns as will grant him a franchise. This will enable him to utilize his vast resources of peat and "manufacture electric power at one hundred dollars less than cost." The City of which Mr. Schlicht will form the nucleus will be called Schlichtholm."

Flat-Bottomed Boats.

Among other things, Mr. Schlicht proposes to manufacture flat-bottomed boats for use on the Trent Valley Canal. He calls himself an English financier of London, New York and Frankfort on the Main. To-day, Mr. Schlicht intends to visit Ottawa for the purpose of securing from the Government, stumpage rights for all the available timber lands in Eastern Ontario. From this he will manufacture a wood fibre product that will enter largely into the manufacture of piping that will convey the electricity from Schlichtholm to all parts of the Province. From within the confines of his potential city the proprietor of Schlichtholm will view the world through his Slavonic eye. The inauguration of his first city adjacent to Lindsay is scheduled for January 1st, next. Before this he will wait upon the City Council of Peterborough and with a view of securing a similar franchise whereby he might establish a plant to produce heat, light and electricity.

Wanted a Guarantee.

The following extract from a Lindsay exchange refers to an interview which he had with the Town Council of Lindsay:

Mr. Paul Schlicht," a gentleman who has been residing in Lindsay for several months past, eloquently addressed the august body of town aldermen last night, requesting a franchise from the town whereby he might be enabled to establish a plant to produce heat, light and electricity.

The speaker portrayed in glowing terms the great future of such a plant and the necessity of the town grappling with his scheme. In part he said he had lived in Lindsay 42 years ago and after travelling in various countries concluded that he would return to the town which in youth he loved the best and give the people the benefit of the knowledge he had acquird while away and which would be a civic benefit.

Cobourg and Port Hope offered his company 42 acres of land free if he would establish his plant in either of the towns, but he would give Lindsay the preference. The firm is known as the Light, Heat and Power Co. of America.

The Company would install a large coke oven from which heat, steam and many other benefits could be derived:

The speaker said: "Cheap power is what you want and you have not got it. The possibilities for this plant are great in a town the size of Lindsay and with its surroundings. Electricity is one great factor to promote a town's growth, and this is what our plant will furnish and give it cheaper than the hydro-electric.

Natural gas may give out, but coal mines never will. All wires will be placed underground to convey electricity and the work I purpose going on with will cost $600,000.

"What Do You Want?"

Mayor Beal—"What do you want the Town to do?"

Mr. Schlicht—"Nothing, only grant a franchise that will pass the scrutiny of our solicitors."

Ald. Nicholls—"Where are your plants operating now?"

Mr. Schlicht—"Principally in Europe."

Mayor Beal — "What will your company give in exchange for the franchise?"

Mr. Schlicht—"Anything that you desire which will be agreeable to the town and our Company. In the smallest plant we build 6,000,000 feet of gas per day is manufactured."

Dr. Irvine—"Have you plants in the United States?"

Mr. Schlicht — "No, but we have them in Belgium and England."

Through peculiar circumstances the speaker said he could place the initils F.R.S.A. after his signature and his daily fee in Germany for information in connection with his own business was $250 per day.

Ald. Nicholls put some sharp questions to the speaker who replied that the bull dog of the council was away, (meaning Ald. Chambers) and if he, (Nicholls) was wanting information it would be freely given.

Ald. Irvine—"Would your plant run a shoe factory?"

Mr. Schlichtt — "I will run anything."

On motion of Ald. Sims and Clark a committee will await upon Mr. Schlicht and deal fully with the matter.

It is probable that the Town will ask a guarantee of $50,000 from the petitioner before granting a franchise.

DEATH OF LORD ROBERTS

Sudden Attack of Pneumonia Claims Life of Great Soldier

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Field Marshal Earl Roberts died Saturday night in France from pneumonia. A telegram from Field Marshal Sir John French, commander of the British expeditionary forces on the continent, apprised Earl Kitchener, Secretary of State for War, of the death of Britain's great soldier. The telegram reads:

"I deeply regret to tell you that Lord Roberts died at eight o'clock Saturday evening."

Field Marshal Roberts, who was colonel-in-chief of the Indian troops had gone to France to give them his greeting. Soon after his arrival he become seriously ill. He suffered from a severe chill on Thursday, and pneumonia rapidly developed. His great age, 82 years, militated against his recover, the crisis in the disease coming quickly. He was recently given an honorary command in connection with the stay in England of the contingents from the overseas Dominions.

The death of Lord Roberts, which occurred Saturday at the headquarters of the British expeditionary force in France, was extremely sudden. He was in his usual good health when he left England on Wednesday with his daughter, Lady Aileen Roberts, and his son-in-law, Major Lewin. The party had a rough trip crossing the Channel, but the aged general felt no ill-effects, and went through with his program on the continent. In fact, he was about to return home when his death occurred.

Earl Roberts had motored to the British bases and camps, had reviewed the Indian troops, and had conferred with the leading officers. It was not until about dinner time Friday evening that he complained of a chill. His condition grew steadily worse and death came Saturday evening while he slept.

The passage of the great warrior has created profound grief throughout the country. At all churches and in the camps where the soldiers are training, touching references were made yesterday to his death and the "Dead March in Saul" was played.

Lord Roberts' devotion to the interests of the army, his hard work in this connection, and his seeming good health had been the subject of comment since the beginning of the war. He was the most popular military figure in Great Britain.

Field Marshal Earl Frederick Sleigh Roberts of Kandahar, Pretoria and Waterford, was born at Cawnpore, India, on Sept. 30, 1832. He was a son of Gen. Sir Abraham Roberts, G.C.B., and Isabella, daughter of Major Abraham Bunbury, of the 62nd Foot. He was educated at Eton and Sandhurst, and entered the Bengal Artillery in 1851. He became a lieutenant just before the Mutiny. He served throughout the siege of Delhi, where he was wounded, and won the Victoria Cross at Hodagunge in 1858. During the campaign he was mentioned seven times in despatches. Ten years later he was made Quartermaster-General of the Abyssinian Expedition and the became Q. M. G. in Bengal, where he attained his full colonelcy. Lord Roberts commanded the column in the Afghan war, and it was he who captured the enemy's positions at Peiwar and who occupied Cabul. He then led the dash on Kandahar, for which exploit he was made a Baron. He rose steadily in rank until he was made commander-in-chief of India, during which time he commanded the Burmese expedition and took Mandalay. For four years he was commander-in-chief in Ireland, and then took command of the British forces in the Boer War. In 1901 he became commander-in-chief of the British army, retiring in 1904.

Canada Expresses Sorrow.

OTTAWA, Nov. 16.—The Duke of Connaught cabled the following message to Premier Asquith: "In my own name, and that of the Canadian Government, I desire to express our deepest sympathy with the British nation and army at the loss they have sustained by the death of the distinguished field marshal, Lord Roberts, whom we are proud to remember as the colonel of the Royal Canadian Artillery."

Messages were also sent by Sir Robert Borden and Acting Premier Sir George Foster.

Big Victory Near Arras

Wedge is Driven Into Enemy's Line and Important Position is Gained on a Plateau Which Commands Roads to the North

LONDON, Nov. 16. — Finding the pressure exerted by the allies more than the Germans could withstand, the Kaiser's troops blew up yesterday all the culverts on the Leopold and Schipdonck canals in Belgium, flooding a large area and temporarily halting the advance of the Franco-British soldiers. The allies have assumed the offensive in that section with fresh attacks.

Latest advices from the French capital add that the attacks made by the Germans were repulsed at every point of conflict from the North Sea to the Vosges Mountains.

The Franco-British armies, as a result of their offensive throughout France and Belgium gained ground yesterday at several points of strategic importance especially in the region of Arras where the enemy had to give way on a wide front a wedge being driven by the allies between two detachments of the Kaiser's army. One German section was completely cut off and isolated and several other sections were forced to retreat. The allies have captured positions on a plateau where they have mounted heavy guns and control the roads leading north.

Strong counter attacks by the Germans were repulsed all along the line notably in the Verdun region where the Teutonic troops fought desperately to cut a path through the French field army defending the approaches to the Verdun fortification. Furious efforts proving unsuccessful the Germans were ultimately compelled to retreat to their trenches.

In a violent attempt to recapture ground lost by the Germans in the severe fighting of the last three weeks along the line of the River Aisne the Germans made temporary gains only to be driven back by withering artillery fire.

Couriers from the battlefields near Verdun reported that another large German army is being concentrated north of that place probably for an attack on the Verdun fortifications.

A large French field army is guarding the fortress, and it is said all onslaughts of the Germans in that region have been defeated.

The fact that the Germans have attempted advances at widely-separated points indicates, in the opinion of military observers, that the German general staff is seeking to discover a weak point in the Franco-British lines, with the chief object of preparing a new concentrated aggressive campaign against the allies in France. The revival of general activity on the French battlefield included a resumption of the fighting at Dasigny. For the last six weeks the Kaiser's men have attempted to break through the French defence at that place, and each attempt has failed.

The opinion prevails here that the German campaign in western Belgium has passed its high-water mark, and that both the allies and the Germans will seek other ground on which to bring the long-drawn-out battle to a decisive issue. The slackening of the German attacks has given the allies a welcome rest. The trenches are filled with water or mud, the weather is cold and damp, and fogs conceal the enemy's movements. The forces which have successfully borne the brunt of the German works have been reinforced, particularly near Dixmude. It is believed the Germans will not be able to longer withstand the assaults of the French and British troops, and that the Germans will be driven from the town.

According to despatches from Amsterdam, German troop movements in the last day or two in Belgium were unusually active, but it is not known whether they were reinforcements to strengthen the battle line or reserves being brought up to replace the exhausted men on the firing line. Landwehr regiments have been moved from Ostend to Blankenberghe. New troops have entered Bruges, and German soldiers are constantly moving toward and from Roulers. Landsturm soldiers in the German forces in Belgium are reported as being disgusted with the failure of the Germans to advance to the coast. It is said many have been imprisoned through their unwillingness to go the front, and that some of them have attempted to desert at Dixmude after having seized civilian passports.

Meanwhile, one discerns no weakening in the line of the allies. Reinforcements are coming forward regularly and marching to battle with amazing cheerfulness. Now and again the French, the British or the Belgians are accepting the insistent challenge of the Kaiser's hordes and striking out desperately against them. When they do attack the Germans aggressors, the latter seem almost invariably to yield.

Mr. "R" You "R" "In Wrong"

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir.—In reply to "R's" letter of Friday, where he states that the Prince of Wales' fund is the only war fund in Great Britain, I beg to contradict that statement, as I have recently received a newspaper from my home town which states that the local war fund had reached the sum of 1,096 pounds, not dollars, and that is a town of 14,000 inhabitants, and in addition to that they are providing for 50 families of Belgian refugees, and I expect other towns are doing as much.

I remain,
A WOMAN READER.

Local Anglican Clergymen Are Attending Session

The Revs. Canon Davidson and R. B. Grubb of St. John's and All Saints' Anglican Churches, respectively, are in Port Hope to-day attending the 16th Annual Conference of the Archdeaconry of Peterborough. The Rev. F. J. Sawers, Pastor of St. Luke's Church, leaves to-morrow and will attend the remaining sessions of the Conference. During this conference, which is now in progress, the Rev. C. W. Holdsworth, B.A., of Harelock, Secretary of the Archdeaconry, will deliver an address on "The Effect of Rubrical Lawlessness upon the Life of the Church."

Kipling and Begbie Poetize Upon "Bobs"

The following verses are taken from Kipling's famous ode to Lord Roberts, which was so often quoted and published during the Boer war:

"There's a little red-faced man,
Which is Bobs,
Rides the tallest 'oss 'e can,—
Our Bobs,
If it bucks or kicks or rears,
'E can sit for twenty years,
With a smile round both 'is ears—
Can't yer, Bobs?

"If you stood 'im on 'is 'ead,
Fightin' Bobs,
You could spill a quart of lead
Outer Bobs.
'E's been at it thirty years,
An' amassin' souvineers
In the shape of slugs and spears:
Ain't yer, Bobs?

"What 'e does not know o' war,
Gen'ral Bobs,
You can arst the shop next door,
Can't they, Bobs?
Oh, 'e's little, but 'e's wise,
'E's a terror for 'is size,
An' 'e does not advertise,
Do yer, Bobs?"

"'E's a little down on drink,
But it keeps us outer clink,
Don't it Bobs?
So we will not complain,
Though 'e's water on the brain,
If 'e leads us straight again,
Blue-light Bobs!

"Then 'ere's to Bobs Bahadur,
Little Bobs! Bobs! Bobs!
Pocket Wellington an' 'arder,
Fighting Bobs! Bobs! Bobs!
This ain't no bloomin' ode,
But you've 'elped the soldier's load,
An' for benchts bestowed
Bless you, Bobs"

Harold Begbie, in March, 1900, wrote a poem for the London Chronicle on Lord Roberts, who had just succeeded in wiping out the bitter memories of Majuba Hill by capturing on the anniversary day of that defeat to British arms, General Cronje, "the lion of Africa." Following is one of Mr. Begbie's verses:—

"You put you heart into the squadrons when they stand in grim array,
You gave heart to England's Empire
when you kept Majuba day;
And the cheer that gives you answer rolls its thunder from afar—
From the muddy streets of London, from the heights of Kandahar."

IS AUDACIOUS GONE?

Story of Loss of Super-Dreadnought Published in New York.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The Sun has a story to-day relative to an earlier report in various papers from a news association that the British super-dreadnought Audacious had been sunk by the Germans off Ireland. The British Admiralty refuses to deny or confirm the reported disaster to the Audacious, which ranked third in the British navy.

"Absolute confirmation that the British super-dreadnought Audacious was sunk 20 miles off the coast of Ireland on Oct. 27 was received in this city yesterday in letters from English correspondents, who had not been permitted to cable the news," says The Sun.

"As the Audacious was going down, she flashed a wireless call, which was caught by the ocean giant Olympic, which was steaming cautiously toward the coast of Ireland, only a few miles away.

"Almost at the moment that the wireless message was caught, the hazy outline of the battleship was seen by all the passengers on the Olympic's deck. Full steam was put on, despite the fact that the captain of the Olympic had been warned to look out for mines, and the race to rescue the crew of the Audacious was begun.

"Half an hour later the Olympic was standing by, and the Audacious was rapidly settling. A very rough sea was running. The work of rescue went on without a hitch, except that several of the small boats were capsized by the heavy seas. Before the crew of the Audacious was transhipped several vessels of the British squadron in th Irish Sea came up and aided in the work. The crew was finally transferred to the Olympic at noon, within three hours after the accident.

"At first it was thought possible to tow the Audacious to the Irish coast, and a hawser was stretched, but it snapped. Late in the afternoon the hope of rescuing the vessel was abandoned, but the Olympic, the cruiser Liverpool and some submarines stood by to wait for the end.

"This came at nine o'clock at night. It was preceded by a terrific explosion, caused, it is thought, by some shells, which were shaken loose. Immediately afterwards the Audacious began to go down, stern first, and at nine in the evening it finally dropped out of sight."

CONDITIONS AS AT PRESENT IN MEXICO

Former Canadian Agent at Mexico City Visits Peterborough

Mr. A. W. Donly, former Canadian agent at Mexico City, is in Peterborough for a few days the guest of Mr. F. D. Kerr, and in conversation with The Examiner this morning spoke of conditions in that country. Mr. Donly has been a resident of Mexico City many years, and is well acquainted with affairs there. Mexico City is a place of half a million people, and of great natural beauty. At the present time business there is very bad, the trouble of the past four years having greatly upset the progress and development of the country. Mr. Donly had no complimentary tributes for President Wilson's government attitude towards Mexico, but on the other hand rather strongly denounced its uncalled for military interference brought about by an imagined insult to the American flag. From the best information obtainable Mr. Donly stated, it would appear that there never has been any insult.

The supposed grievance was the result of the arrest of some of the crew of an American vessel that had put into port at Tampico for supplies. These men who had been seen in uniform crossing between the Federalists and Constitutionalists who were in conflict, were taken prisoners at the instigation of the officers in command of the Federalists. They were taken to Tampico where they were placed in custody. However, when the identity of the men was learned, they were released. An apology was sent to Admiral Mayo for the arrest of his men by the Federal commander, and also by Huerta, at that time President. That was the real cause of the trouble. The American Government lining up with the opponents of Huerta, who were rebels of the worst order, was one of the worst crimes ever perpetuated. This resulted in Huerta being forced to resign. He was the one man whose tenure of office would have proved a benefit to the country. At the present time things are at a standstill, and President Wilson is doing little or nothing to bring about better conditions.

NO FRIEND BUT THE PLUMBER

A good joke is being told on a steam-fitter of the city who is working on the installation of bathtubs in the Cereal works for the soldiers. He was working all Thursday trying to finish up his job. On various occasions he had to go outside for materials. The guard on the door, as soon as the plumber would return, would say: 'Halt, who goes there?" The plumber answered this question every five minutes for an hour and each time he answered "Friend," but at last got disgusted. He came and knocked at the door and the question was immediately put to him. He did not answer and the guard repeated the question. Thoroughly disgusted, he replied in a deep voice: "I'm no friend, I'm the plumber."—Kingston Whig.

More Peterboro' Boys Who Make Good at Rugby

Peterborough is usually represented on some of the big Canadian Rugby teams, and this year proves no exception. Harold Hill on the half for Queen's and Wilfrid Stratton starring at quarter for 'Varsity, have already been referred to. When St. Michael's won the Intercollegiate intermediate championship on Friday by defeating McGill's second team there were two Peterborough boys in action. Frank Hickey on the win line, cinched a position last year and has proved himself a capable defence man and good all round player. Kevin Corkery on the half line has found himself out in big company for the first time, and has more than made good. Press reports speak highly of the manner in which he handles himself and of his resourcefulness in action. He promises to equal and probably surpass the work of his brother, John, who in his Arts course days at Ottawa College a few years ago won distinction by his Rugby qualities as a running and kicking half. While studying at Osgoode Hall he played with Argonauts. A third member of the Corkery family, Vincent J., of the Bank of Ottawa, also showed rugby qualities, and in his playing in Peterborough developed as much as the facilities here permitted.

GERMANS EVACUATING TWO IMPORTANT CITIES

Berlin Advices Say Population of Cracow Are in Flight and Austrian Army Will Not Defend City—Germans Will Defend Frontier From Two Bases at Thorn and at Oppeim Says Writer.

LONDON, Nov. 16. — A despatch to The London Telegraph from Stockholm says:

"A diplomatic despatch from Vienna states that the German army is evacuating both Breslau, in Silesia, and Koenigsberg, in East Prussia.

Berlin reports the flight of the population of Cracow. It is expected the railroads will be cut and that Cracow will not be defended.

"On the East Prussian front, at Stalluponen, around Angerburg, and near Johannesburg, our troops are making successful progress in the fighting. The action continues in the region of Soldau and Neidenburg, where we have progressed, notwithstanding the desperate resistance of the enemy.

"On the left bank of the Vistula the battle proceeds, developing along a front from Plock (Poland) to the River Warta. On the front between Kalisz and Wielun the enemy has withdrawn. In the neighborhood of Czenstochowa and towards the south the enemy has attempted an offensive, but this has failed.

"Our march on Cracow continues.

"In Galicia the Austrians are seeking to organize a defence on the San river, in the Dounajetz region, west of the front comprising Zabno and Tarnow, and on the Wisloka, on the Jasio front.

"In the region to the south of the Galician front our troops are advancing towards the passes across the Carpathians."

Leaving the defence of Cracow mainly in the hands of the Austrians, and attempting to hold the Russian advance along the Polish frontier only by desultory rearguard action, the Germans, according to the view of the situation held in Petrograd, are to-day withdrawing their main forces into Silesia, whence many are being sent north to the region between Thorn and the River Warthe. In this territory the Germans, taking advantage of the small numbers of Russian troops, are attempting an energetic advance at the same time as they move forward on both banks of the lower Vistula.

The Petrograd correspondent of The Daily News says:

"The German eastern army will conduct the home defence from two bases. They are organizing their northern forces at Thorn, using the back belt railways to maintain towns with their East Prussian army. The new southern base is Oppeln, on the Oder, fifty miles southeast of Breslau.

"A quantity of guns are being brought to Oppeln from Cracow, and the latter place evidently is to be abandoned to the Austrian garrison.

"In the last stages of the retreat from Poland the Germans covered twenty-five miles daily. Their column, which fell back on Kalisz, lost 80,000 men, of which 20,000 were killed."

The Morning Post correspondent at Petrograd says:—

"Another big battle is developing on the Polish frontier, the Germans having drawn forces from the East Prussian front for these operations. The German object in turning back from its retreat and again advancing on Poland is plainly an attempt to relieve the pressure on East Prussia. The failure of such diversion, however, is a foregone conclusion."

HINDUS CAN STAND COLD

Rev. J. Smith in Letter to His Brother-in-law Here Says Only Those From North Have Been Taken

AN INTERESTING LETTER

Mr. John Nugent has received the following letter from his brother-in-law, Rev. J. Smith, Secretary of the Bombay Tract and Book Society, Kalbadevi P.O., Bombay, India:

P.O. Kalbadevi, Bombay, 16th Oct.

Dear Brother,—We are now in the midst of the bustle of war here as you are in Canada, but we pride ourselves on having landed our contingent in France, 6,000 miles away, quicker than you were able to land yours, although so much nearer, as according to your War Minister, the redoubtable Sam Hughes, you ought to have delivered your contingent in 24 hours at least!! It would do you good to see the activity displayed just now in Bombay in the despatch of troops for the front. A stream of men, horses, mules, guns, carts and other war material has been passing through our port for many weeks past, and by this time everything that we can possibly spare must have been despatched to the front. About a fortnight ago, I myself saw 33 ships sail in line out of our harbour, from the back verandah of our house, which is near the lighthouse. India has responded wonderfully to the call of the government at home for recruits. You have no doubt seen it stated in the papers that every Rajah in India has offered not only his personal services, but all the resources of his State. While this is true of the tributary and feudatory States, it is also true of wealthy mill owners, merchants and other men of means and influence throughout the Empire. If India were offered her independence to-morrow, she would reject it with the alacrity that would do credit to Canada. India's interests are apparently bound up with the Empire forever, and a great question of statesmanship lies before our higher officials of government when the war is over; though India may not demand a larger measure of self government as a reward for her loyalty in this crisis, it will be recognised, I hope, in Great Britain that she is deserving of a larger measure of independence, and that nothing but will result from putting authority and power in the hands of her leaders in the future. The only danger is from agitators and demagogues who, in the past, have been able to stir up sedition amongst irresponsible, hot-headed, half-educated college students and school boys. That age has now gone by; sedition is no more, and we have entered upon a new era, and it will be a task worthy of the best statesmanship so to guide the new current of thought that it may flow into the channels for the betterment of India, and for the closer union of India with the colonies and the Mother country.

A very regrettable incident occurred a few days ago on the arrival of the "Hindus" who went to British Columbia in the "Komagata Maru." The Government of India brought them back from Hong Kong to Calcutta, where special trains were in readiness to take them to their homes in the Northwest. This arrangement, although at the expense of the government, did not suit a few of the leaders, who were very sore over their disappointment, and determined upon marching from the port, several miles through the streets of Calcutta so as to make a "demonstration." The police got wind of their intentions in good time and a large number of the resident police officers, including the chief police official of Calcutta, went down to the port accompanied by a large number of native police, and tried to persuade them, part to go by their homes. Some did so, but in a moment, when everything seemed to be settled, the rest began to fire at the police, killing two officers and wounding a large number of others. There was the danger for a few days that this might upset things in Calcutta and elsewhere, but the loyalty of the Sikhs (these men were Sikhs) has been equal to the occasion, and this morning's papers say that the Sikhs in several places in India have held meetings and expressed their deep regret and severe condemnation of the action taken by their countrymen in Calcutta, so this incident may be considered as closed.

We are getting on as usual in the Tract Society; forging steadily forward, business reviving in spite of the war, which has put a damper on many industries and much trade in Bombay. We are publishing a steady stream of new books and tracts and succeed generally in securing advance orders for nearly everything we produce. I am a little tired; have not had a holiday since I arrived here two years ago, not even Sundays, but I am hoping at the end of the cold season next April that I may be allowed to go away for two or three months and have a change in the Himalayas. This reminds me that perhaps some misapprehensions may be held with regard to the powers of endurance of men of our Indian troops. I may tell you that only North India men are being sent. I know them well, and have tramped with these men for ten days in succession over deep snow in the Himalayas when I found the cold as hard to endure as in Canada, and was very glad of warm shelter at night. These men, however, refused to come inside and preferred to sleep on verandahs and under trees, although there was a hard frost. It is amazing to see how hardy they are and how capable of enduring exposure and hardship.

I shall be glad to hear how things are going with you at home.

With very kindest regards to all,

Yours very sincerely,

J. SMITH.

PUT UNEMPLOYED ON HOME DEFENCE

Dear Mr. Editor,—Allow me a small space in your valuable paper. On reading last night's issue, I read of the Rifle Association being formed into a regiment; that is a credit to our city, and it deserves every support. But in the meantime, I see an appeal for work for 300 men. Now, could not the Government do something in this line? We have two members, one for the Upper House and the other for the Lower. Could not these two gentlemen suggest a scheme that would benefit both the city and the country—that is take up arms to fight against her enemies. Now, the winter is here, and those who have not got work—well, it's up to the city. Why not suggest a Home Defence Force. In the case of any man who has no work, as long as he is British or French-Canadian let the Government find him work protecting railways, canals, on the border, or on the sea coast. We should have our coast and border lined with men. Don't wait till something is done, but guard your coast line and border line more than ever, because you are now fighting a nation with the greatest spy system in the world. Hoping that our two hon. members will try and bring it before the house, I remain yours. LIVERPOOL.

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Many of us have been thinking of forming a league for the suppression of free advertising. I am sure your excellent journal will agree with that idea. It is all very well for public men or people generally to air their views on public matters. That is the way communities develop. That was the life and soul of the greatest city of ancient times, Athens. But private parties are sometimes too fond of advertising themselves at the public expense, in Peterborough at any rate and not for its good or for the newspapers' good either Mr. Editor. Now for example what is the good of long screeds about cases in the police courts where lawyer So-and-So appears to be a great criminal counsel or a man of parts? He defends some beast who ten to one ought to be in gaol or get the lash and all the nasty business is brought before the public. I don't want my growing children to read such stuff. It counteracts all the good their parents can do them. Indeed more. It does them great harm and frequently all because lawyer So-and-So wants some advertising at an extra cheap rate. Well!, It's too cheap Mr. Editor, altogether too cheap and too nasty. A committee lately brought a very clever man here to teach the grown-ups how to behave themselves in ordinary matters of every day life, sort of how to hold their knife and fork don't you know. Dr. Gordon is a fine speaker and I think did good. But what would he say to the drunken filthy drivel "brought out" by lawyers who ought to wait to shine in more elevated circles in the upper courts if they can. It ought to be decent anyhow. If lawyers' names did not appear in these cases much of the "need" of long reports would not arise, and we would have fewer such reports. The criminals or drunks when punished get what's coming to them without being dangled from Tyburn before the eyes of the community and when innocent, instead of getting off they are still pointed at by the gossips as "havin' bin in court" all because of the advertising. I have heard it. It is no good and I can tell you it ought to be stopped. And while I am at it, Sir, it is all wrong for people to shoot in the newspapers from behind hedges, the way they used to do at home (you haven't any hedges in this country) at our public men. It's cowardly and doesn't give the man attacked half a chance. It does no good, for no self-respecting man would read such stuff and not say: "Well! If that is true why don't he put his name to it?" That kind of attack is never resorted to by self-respecting people. It's only the "niggers" that get behind the fence or the woodpile, Mr. Editor, and the public knows it.

SOUTH END.

"South End" may mean all right, but those he criticises with more energy than boldness, will naturally inquire, why he, himself, "shoots from behind the hedge"—does precisely what he condemns others for doing—withholds (from the public) his real name, which evidently isn't "consistency."

THE AUSTRALIAN CRUISER "SYDNEY."—The Australian cruiser which, after many weeks of weary watching, rounded up the raider Emden which had done so much damage to the allies' commerce, and destroyed her on the beach of Cocos Island.

Death of Wm. Templeman

Former Liberal Minister Passes Away at Home in Victoria

VICTORIA, Nov. 16.—Hon. William Templeman, former Minister of Mines and of Inland Revenue in the Dominion Government, and proprietor of The Victoria Times, died at three o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Hon. William Templeman was born at Packenham Village, Ontario, Sept. 28, 1844. He was, therefore, 70 years of age. He established The Almonte Gazette in 1867, and he moved to Victoria, B.C., in 1884, establishing The Times, which he has since published. He was an unsuccessful candidate for the House of Commons in 1891 and 1896, and was called to the Senate in 1897. He entered the Laurier Cabinet in 1902 without portfolio. He became Minister of Inland Revenue in 1906, and Minister of Mines in 1907. He was elected to the House of Commons for Victoria, B.C., in 1906, and was elected by acclamation in Comox-Atlin in 1909, when he was defeated in Victoria. He was defeated in the Dominion general election of 1911.

HON. WM. TEMPLEMAN.

ANTI-GERMAN TURKS THREATEN DISORDERS

Declare That German Officers in the Country Must be Withdrawn.

LONDON, Nov. 15. — The Daily News' correspondent at Petrograd says: "Messages continue to reach Bucharest from Constantinople describing a widespread anti-German movement among the Turks. Proclamations thrown at Enver Pasha declare that disorders will only cease when the German officers withdraw.

Protest From Prof. Leacock

He Says Pro-German Leaflets Are Pouring In Through Mails

MONTREAL, Nov. 16.—Prof. Stephen Leacock of McGill University, the well-known humorist and author, has written to The Montreal Star protesting against the distribution by the postoffices in this country of mail matter calculated to prejudice public opinion against Great Britain and her allies in the war. He states:

"The Canadian postoffice has been, and is still, deliberately handling and distributing news matter posted in Germany, with German post stamps, and intended to influence public opinion against the British cause. German newspapers are folded up, and inside them are placed leaflets, printed in English in Berlin, for Canadian consumption. False accounts of German victories, English piracies and French atrocities, are thus prepared in Germany and despatched. The Canadian postoffice does the rest."

Prof. Leacock states that he has made private protest to the Government and to the Montreal postoffice, but without avail.

Forger Has Been Arrested

Believed to be Ray Who Operated in Lindsay and Peterboro'.

GUELPH, Nov. 16—Chief Randall has received word from the Toronto police informing him that they have under arrest in that city a man who answers to the description of Phillips, who has been working a defrauding and forgery game in Western Ontario.

When placed under arrest the man gave his name as White, but the police had a thorough description of the man Phillips, and at once identified him. Photographs of the prisoner have been sent to all the cities and towns where Phillips has carried out his money-making scheme, and when Chief Randall received the photo he identified the culprit immediately.

As the photograph showed that the man known as Phillips had a resemblance of the well-known defrauder, James Ray, who got away with a large amount of cash from several branches of the Union Bank, the Chief at once took the matter up with Mr. Anderson, the local manager.

The Toronto police have Phillips there and as they will not let him come to Guelph for identification at present, the local police will have to work on the photograph.

Ray operated in Lindsay and also attempted to operate in Peterborough.

Good Shooting By Local Boys

57th Contingent at Kingston Pleased the Commanding Officer—Church Parade Yesterday

Special Cable:

The Peterborough boys are all well again and feeling much better after the innoculation. On Saturday morning our Company went to the Armouries for shooting. We had the miniature rifles and the whole Company did good shooting. The Instructor was very pleased with the first attempt and the O. C. of the Battalion, Col. Hughes, remarked to several of us that we did well. We had five rounds each. Col. Hughes said we would be able to hit the Germans all right. He saw my paper target and said: "That's good shooting; they are well grouped. They were all in the space of one inch, all five of them."

During this afternoon the right half of the Battalion met the left field on the Cricket Grounds and we all marched off for a route march around by the large house, "The Pen." We halted close to one of the fields and saw the prisoners busy at work. On our march we met several others in their Prison garb, driving the Prison farm carts. They have their numbers on the front of their coats and on their backs as well as on their caps. We marched on again till we struck the main street (Princess street). It was just at a busy time of the day, and crowds lined both sides of the street and saw us all march by. I guess the distance would be about 5 to 6 miles.

It has been raining very hard all day and has not let up. We had Church parade this afternoon in the Armouries with an address from the Bishop of Kingston, which was very inspiring. In spite of the rain the gallery, which was reserved for the public, was crowded. The rest of the day has been spent in letter writing, the boys not being able to go anywhere. Our Club Room in the City Hall has been open all day and many have taken the advantage of the use of the room for writing and games. The Mayor of Kingston came in last night and was delighted to see the boys enjoying themselves. They expect to have the place properly fitted out by the end of the week and everything made comfortable for the boys.

BANDAGES WANTED FOR WOUNDED HORSES

The committee for necessaries for wounded horses, of which Mrs. Lally McCarthy, Toronto, is convener, hopes that the following bandages will be sent in as soon as possible to the office of the Toronto Humane Society: To be made (by order of the Royal Army Veterinary Corps) of white flannelette or factory cotton, 2½ inches wide, 9 feet long, and rolled as tightly as possible. Thousands are wanted, and young schoolboys and the Scouts could help immensely with these.

Mrs. J. E. Middleton, 4 Grand Central Apartments, is looking after bandages for the Humane Society here. They are made in three-yard lengths and the material is good factory cotton. Those making them are asked to send them into Mrs. Middleton as early as possible.

FUNERAL OF MR. GEO. WILLS

The funeral of the late Mr. George Wills took place at 2 o'clock on Saturday from his late residence, 470 Dovercourt Road, Toronto, with his sorrowing wife, sons and daughter, and his brother, Henry, in attendance.

The funeral service was under the direction of the Rev. Mr. Oak of Chalmer's Church, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Speer, who was a cousin of the deceased. The funeral was under Masonic auspices.

The magnificent floral tributes showed the esteem in which the deceased was held by his friends and by the members of the different societies with which he was connected. The Masons and Sons of England each sent beautiful wreaths, indicating the reward they had for their departed brother.

Among those present from a distance was his brother, Mr. Henry Wills of Peterborough, who had been in constant touch with him throughout his illness; Mr. and Mrs. Dexter Holcomb, and Mr. Wm. Holcomb of Niagara Falls; Miss Ruth Holcomb of Ancaster. Among those in attendance was Mr. W. D. McPherson, Grand Master of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Canada, Hon. Thos. Crawford, M.P.P., the Master of Georgina Lodge, of which deceased was a member, and the Masters of other Masonic Lodges. Miss Mabel Pratley, a niece of the deceased and an especial favourite of his, who lives at a distance, showed her esteem by sending a wreath.

Singing "Tipperary"

21st Battalion Use Famous Song all the Time at Kingston

KINGSTON, Nov. 16. — When it comes to singing, "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary," the men in the 21st battalion, who are being recruited in Kingston "take the cake."

How often have you heard this simple little song, just like you would hear in any music hall, in the streets of Kingston during the last few days? The men of the 21st battalion have been singing it ever since they came to Kingston, on the march and in barracks, and it is now ringing in the ears of every citizen. Citizens in all walks of life are singing it. Little boys in the street whistle it, in the offices and factories girls hum it, and men everywhere have taken up this tuneful refrain. But after all it takes "Tommy Atkins" to sing it the way it should be sung. Friday afternoon the boys when parading down Princess Street started up the song, and in a short time nearly everyone was taking part in the singing.

"The song is contagious," said an old war veteran to a Whig representative Friday afternoon as the boys marched along the street singing for all they were worth.

The men who are here to help make up the second contingent have been warmly praised for their smart appearance. As each squad makes its way along the street at various times in the day, citizens stand on the curb and watch them pass on their way, as if paying a tribute of respect. Every man appears to have the stamp of a soldier and swings into the march just like veterans of the war game.

"On to Berlin," is the motto of the men. They are very anxious to get to the front, and they will be a happy lot when the order comes to cross the ocean.

Woad, the plant from which ancient Britons made a famous blue dye, still is cultivated for that purpose in some portions of England.

VICTORY OVER TURKS.

British Forces Capture Two Forts In Gulf of Aden.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The Secretary of the Admiralty announces the success of the operations against the Turkish forts at Sheikh-Said, on the Strait of Babe El Mandeb, at the entrance of the Gulf of Aden, and of the occupation of the Turkish forts at Turba by Indian troops, assisted by the British cruiser Duke of Edinburgh.

The Turkish forts of Turba, says the Admiralty report, is situated on the rocky heights close to the boundary of Turkish territory and the Aden Protectorate. The guns of the fort command the isthmus connecting the peninsula of Sheikh-Said with the mainland.

Three battalions of troops were landed in the face of opposition, but under cover of the Duke of Edinburgh's fire, which had previously disabled the Turba fort. The Indians attacked the enemy's positions, being opposed by well-concealed artillery and infantry fire.

When the hills commanding the forts were taken the defenders weakened and 200 of the enemy escaped over the isthmus on camels or by boats. Six Turks were killed, the remainder being wounded or taken prisoners.

Mysterious German Under Probe.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—A mysterious individual known as Horst Von Dergoltz and Bridgman Taylor, described as a major in the Mexican army and suspected of being a German spy, was remanded in the police court on the charge of failing to register as an alien enemy. The prosecution said that although the prisoner was charged with this minor offence he was under the very grave suspicion of the Foreign Office, the Admiralty and the police, and that he might have to answer more serious charges when the inquiry into his career had been completed.

Had Too Many Already.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The British steamship Royal Sceptre, which arrived here yesterday, laden with coffee from Santos, Brazil, reported having been held up by the German cruiser Karlsruhe on the afternoon of Oct. 27. The Kaiser's great commerce destroyer had three captives in tow at the time, one of them the Van Dyck of the Lamport and Holt line, which she afterward sunk. Not wishing to burden herself with additional prisoners of war, the Karlsruhe released the Royal Sceptre and allowed her to go on her way.

Revolt Fomented By Germany.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 16. — A secret agreement with Generals De Wet and Beyers was secured by the German Government prior to the war that the insurrection in Cape Colony and the Transvaal would take place, according to advices from Berlin. It is hoped in Germany that the revolt in South Africa will compel the British to divert territorial troops from India or Australia to South Africa and keep them from the conflict in Europe.

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY'S WAR PRIMER

LA BASSE— A town of northern France, 13 miles southwest of Lille, on a canal by the same name. The canal is connected with a series of canals and rivers which gives the town water communication with the coast. La Basse's hobby for many years has been the holding of fairs. Four general fairs are held there annually and a linen fair every month. The town produces oil, sugar, chicory, brandy, pottery, hosiery, soap, bricks, tiles, and cotton goods. Formerly a place of considerable strength it sustained several sieges, was taken by the French from the Spanish in 1646, and was dismantled a year later. It has a population of about 5,000.

YPRES— The home of the Belgian cavalry training school and at one time one of the most important cities in Belguim. From a population of 200,000 in the 14th century, when the city was in its prime, it has dwindled until to-day it has only about 20,000 inhabitants. The town is 24 miles south of Ostend, and 17 miles west of Courtrai, on a small branch of the Yser River. Ypres is a great butter market and has a brisk trade in linen and lace.

THOUROUT — A Belgian town of great antiquity, 12 miles distant from Bruges and Ostend, southwest of the latter and southeast of the former. Dagobert I is said to have founded an abbey here, which Louis-de-Debonnaire gave to the Bishop of Hambourg in 830 and which the Normans ultimately destroyed. Earthenware, linen, lace, carding machines, hats, chicory, and oil are products of the town. It has about 11,000 inhabitants.

WETTEREN—A Belgian town, seven miles east of southeast of Ghent and nine miles west of Termonde, on the right bank of the Schelde River. With the regeneration of Waasland, in which the town is situated, Wetteren has kept pace, and has increased in population from 3,000 to about 18,000 in the last 50 years. Silks, fabrics and laces are manufactured and farming commodities are actively traded in there.

WAASLAND—(Pays der Waes)— A district in Belgium between Ghent and Antwerp, bordered on the north by Holland, which is one of the most densely-populated, highly-cultivated and productive districts in Europe. Waasland was a sterile marshland at the time of the civil wars in Flanders; to-day there is not a square yard in the district that is not under cultivation. In touring through the district, pastures, woodlands, gardens, plantations and arable land are seen in rapid succession, interspersed with prosperous villages and home-like farmhouses. As much care is given by the tillers of the soil to every field as is usually devoted to a garden or flower bed. There are more than 700 persons living on each square mile in the province.

LOKEREN—A manufacturing town and important railway junction on the road from Ghent to Antwerp and also on the line from Brussels and Termonde to the northeast. It is 18 miles from Antwerp, on the Durme River, a tributary of the Schelde. Its Church of St. Lawrence is known through its ancient and modern paintings and famous pulpit by Verhaghon, built in 1736. In the neighbourhood are extensive bleaching grounds. The town has a population of about 25,000. It is in the southern portion of Waasland.

ST. NICHOLAS—The busiest manufacturing city of Waasland in northern Belgium, 11 miles south of west of Antwerp and 19 miles northeast of Ghent, on the main line between those cities. The town is the distributing point for the vast and varied productions of Waasland, formerly a barren tract but now the most fertile and productive district in Belgium. Its Church of St. Nicholas was completed in 1686, and the Church of Notre Dame, built in 1844 contains the first attempt at frescoes in Belgium.

MUNKATCH—(Munkacs)—A Hungarian town, 30 miles from the Gallician border and 68 miles south of east of Kaschau, on the Latorcza River, and on the fringe of the East Beskides Mountains. The town is noted chiefly because of the famous and strong Munkatch fortress two miles away, situated on a steep rock and now used as a prison. The fort was defended against the Austrians by Helene Zrinyi from 1685 to 1688, and has otherwise figured in Hungarian history. The town manufactures hosiery, saltpetre and alum. Nearby are mines of iron and a species of rock crystal, locally called Hungarian diamonds. The population is approximately 15,000.

RAGUSA— An Austrian city, on the southern coast of Dalmatia, on an arm of land jutting into the Adriatic Sea, beneath the towering Monte Sergio. The town's fortifications rise up from the water's edge, and a huge tower stands guard from a high hill. Beyond are beautiful villas, surrounded by gardens, shrubbery and trees. The march of progress has rendered Ragusa's once useful harbour inadequate for the vessels of to-day. The city produces oil, silk leather and liqueurs. In the middle ages Ragusa sought to side-step all disputes with other peoples, frequently resorting to "stanicus," a system of arbitration. By its peaceful attitude it became one of the principle mercantile powers of Europe. The overthrow of Hungary in 1526 freed the city, and for two centuries art and literature flourished there. The French seized the town in 1805 and Austria annexed it in 1814.

TOOK HIS CULTURE BACK

A Canadian student had completed his three years' post graduate course in a German university and received his doctor's degree about the time war was declared. He was allowed to leave the country by way of Switzerland. Before he crossed to the frontier someone mentioned to him that Japan had intervened. The student made a reply which a German who overheard it believed to be an expression of approval. Whereupon he was arrested and imprisoned. The university authorities expelled him from the university and cancelled his degree. He has thus for one alleged remark not only lost his personal liberty, but has had all his "German culture" cancelled at one stroke. — Vancouver News.

GERMANS ABANDON HOMES BEFORE RUSSIAN ADVANCE

Silesia Expects Devastation by Fire and Sword--Indication of Swiftness of Russian Progress--Recent Fall of Snow Has Not Been an Obstacle to Troops--Methods of Collecting Aid in Petrograd.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Russia's invasion of East Prussia, Posen and Silesia has sent a wave of panic over the eastern provinces of the German Empire, if reports from Copenhagen and Stockholm are to be credited. These reports are chiefly significant as indicating that the Russian advance is progressing more rapidly than has been asserted even by despatches from Petrograd.

A correspondent of the Daily Telegraph reports from Stockholm that all Eastern Germany is upset by the menace of Cossack raids. He hears that a diplomatic despatch from Vienna contains information that the civilian inhabitants of Koegnisburg, East Prussia, and Breslau in Silesia, are abandoning their homes, and that only the military will remain in these strongholds.

From Copenhagen it is reported, allegedly from German sources, that Silesia expects devastation by fire and sword, and that the wealthy Prussian landholders, whose immense estates cover Silesia, are leading the exodus towar the west.

Despatches received from Berlin to-night, and passed by the German censor, admit freely that inhabitants of the border regions are leaving their homes for the interior, and state that in Berlin itself a certain amount of disquietude is being manifested in civilian circles.

The Russian advance in East Prussia, according to advices received in Petrograd from the front is being assisted materially by cold weather, which enables the troops to move more rapidly. In the swampy lake region of East Prussia movements of the army have been retarded by soft roads. This condition has now been remedied by the cold weather, which has frozen the roads. It is said that the Russian advance guards have pushed 40 miles over the frontier and occupy strong positions.

A fall of snow during the last two days is reported over the entire field of operations, but not to a sufficient extent to prove a serious obstacle in extent to prove a serious obstacle to the movement of troops. French troops now being sent to the front are supplied with short coats of tanned sheepskin.

Relief societies in Petrograd and other Russian cities are bending every effort to collect woollen garments. To this end many vacant stores are being utilized for the work of collectors. Dummies clothed with the uniforms of captured Germans are stationed before the doors for the purpose of attracting attention. These efforts are augmented by barkers, who hail passers-by and by martial music from player pianos. Here and there on the streets small tables are set up for the receipt of contributors and the distribution of war literature.

GERMANS ARE EXHAUSTED BY ATTACKS

Losses Are Staggering—Dead Arriving at Brussels for Cremation Almost Beyond Counting

STRESS OF WINTER FELT

PARIS, Nov. 16.—The Germans were so savagely repulsed along the River Yser yesterday that an entire regiment was annihilated near Bixschoote, while near Ypres two attacks failed signally, and the Germans in retreat surrendered positions gained in previous days at terrible sacrifices.

This is the official report from Gen. Joffre, who informed the Government to-night that to-day had brought no change in the general situation. It is assumed here that the Germans are exhausted, temporarily at any rate, and need time to draw breath and fill gaps in their torn lines. There can be no doubt that their losses in the past week have been staggering. It is reported from Switzerland that the dead arriving at Brussels for cremation are almost past counting.

The grip of winter is falling on Flanders. Snowfall followed by cold rains is flooding the trenches and increasing the sufferings on both sides. Influenza and pneumonia are the inevitable results of such exposure. Fields have become swamps, and roads are dangerous for motor cars and cavalry. The area of inundation has spread three miles south of Dixmunde, halting the operations of Germans and allies.

Opportunity Gone.

The German strength in Belgium may not yet have begun to ebb, but the news seems to show that they have let their great opportunity pass. The growing strength of the allies, the coming of winter, the Russian menace, are all factors in the situation in Belgium and France. The official reports of the past few days show that the allies have been taking the offensive more and more, and that the Germans have attacked seriously only in the restricted area of fighting between Dixmunde and Ypres, a battle line of about fifteen miles.

Along the west flank the Germans appear to have weakened their lines. The allies have been able to make some progress here and there, and to drive the Germans from advanced trenches. Along the Champagne hills, siege operations have slackened so far as infantry operations are concerned, but there has been a continuous artillery duel without important results. In the Argonne the Germans have shown some activity, but have made no progress.

In an attempt yesterday to relieve the strain on their position at St. Mihiel, where they have maintained a wedge between Verdun and Toul for many weeks, they attacked the French at Apremont, eight miles east of St. Mihiel, and were driven back. Verdun seems to be as safe as at any time since the war began. In Alsace also the pinch of winter is being felt, and military operations are practically suspended.

THOUSANDS OF MEN RETURNING TO WORK

Mills at Gary, Ind., Reopen for the First Time Since War Broke Out.

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.— —Five thousand men, who have been idle since the outbreak of the European war, returned to work to-day, at the mills of the United States Steel Corporation at Gary, Ind. The force, it was announced, will be increased as business conditions warrant.

During the last week several thousand men who have been idle for two months returned to work in the steel mills at Indiana Harbour, Hammond and East Chicago.

RUSSIAN FLEET SHELLS TURKISH LAND FORCES

Battle in the East is a Duplication of the Struggle in Flanders---Turks Have Suffered Severe Losses---Aid of Fleet Has Been Great Help to Russians--Naval Battle Imminent in Baltic Sea.

Special Morning Cable.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 17.—Official reports of the fighting in the Caucasus indicate that the struggle between the Russian and Turkish troops is practically a duplication of the battle of Flanders.

Russian warships in the Black Sea are aiding the land forces, and have inuicted heavy losses in the Turkish ranks. To-day's official statement declares: "On the Black Sea the Turkish offensive on the coast road near Liman has failed. Attacked on theor flanks by the fire from our warships, the Turkish suffered heavy losses. Their reserves were annihilated. Our troops operating in the Klytchgaduk pass near Khamur completely routed the Ottoman forces and numerous bands of Kurds.

FIGHTING IN FACE OF BLIZZRRD

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 17.—The German losses during the last few days' fighting in Flanders are estimated at 100,000 by the correspondent of the Daily Mail at Dunkirk.

Despite the blizzard which has prevailed, fighting has continued. During Monday the Germans directed a fierce attack upon the Allied lines near Ypres. This was repulsed and the Allies in turn assumed the offensive. Casualties in the Allied ranks were heavy, but favourable progress was made.

RUSSIAN FLEET TO ENGAGE

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 17.—A naval battle is believe imminent in the Baltic sea. Unofficial advices received to-day from Copenhagen declare that the German fleet in those waters is about to be engaged by the Russians. The Russian fleet has left Helsingfors. The squadron was steering southeast.

PRINCESS PATRICIA'S TO THE FRONT.

Zeppelin Ruined By First Storms Collapses Near Holland Frontier

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The Amsterdam Telegraaf learns from Maestricht, Holland, that yesterday a badly damaged dirigible airship flew over Limburg, Holland, coming from the direction of Belgium. It was evident that the airship had been damaged either by artillery fire or a storm. When over Maestricht the airship disappeared in the direction of Germany.

Another dirigible was observed yesterday from Sittard, 13 miles northeast of Maestricht, coming from the south-east, and flying in a northerly direction along the Holland frontier.

The correspondent of the Evening News at Rotterdam give the following version of the Zeppelin airship reported in distress near Maestricht:

"A storm-tossed Zeppelin passed near Maestricht yesterday afternoon. It was flying low in an almost vertical position, and making erratic, jerky movements. The crew were clinging to lines to save themselves from being thrown out.

"The airship was badly damaged in the rear, but by desperate efforts managed to reach the German frontier, where it collapsed, a total wreck.

"THE DEVIL WILL EAT FLIES" SAYS THE CROWN PRINCE

"We had advanced rather rapidly and gotten out of touch with the commissary waggons," writes the wounded man. "As we passed a turnip field we soldiers took advantage of the opportunity and filled up on turnips.

"For a time the Crown Prince observed us, showing considerable amusement at our activity. Then he stepped from the circle of his officers and came toward us and laughingly called to us:—'When in need the devil will eat flies—hand me one of those turnips.

"I just then had a nice fat one in my coat which I had cleaned and, being nearest to the Prince, handed it to him. He heartily bit into it and remarked:—'Not so bad after all.'"

IRISH GUARDS LOST HEAVILY

LONDON, Nov. 16.—A casualty list dated Nov. 8, issued here to-night, gives the names of twenty officers killed, 34 wounded and 15 missing. In this list the Irish Guards are heavy sufferers.

Capt. the Hon. A. E. S. Mulholland of the Irish Guards, eldest son of Baron Dunleath, is among the dead. His widow is a daughter of the Earl of Strafford.

In the list of the wounded appear the names of Lieut.-Col. Lord Ardee of the Irish Guards, who married Lady Aileen Wyndham-Quinn, the daughter of the Earl of Dunraven; Lieut. the Earl of Kingston of the Irish Guards; Lieut. Sir Geo. Duckworth-King of the Grenadier Guards; Lieut.-Col. A Martyn of the Royal West Kent Regiment; Captain the Hon. Thomas E. Vesey of the Irish Guards, son of Viscount De Vesci, and Lieut. the Hon. Harold R. L. G. Alexander of the Irish Guards, brother of the Earl of Caledon.

ALGERIA LOYAL TO FRANCE

Moslems Continue to Oppose Acts of Ottoman Government.

BORDEAUX, Nov. 16.— Manifestations of loyalty continue to flow in from all sections of the Mussulman population of Algiers. Influential religious bodies are now declaring the solidarity of the military and civil authorities, particularly in reference to the attitude of the Turkish government, calling the latter usurpers, whose action is causing grave evil to Islam.

Bobs' Bier Near the Firing Line Within Sound of Guns

NORTH OF FRANCE, Nov. 16.—To-night, within the battle area, an army pays homage to the great dead. Where the guns boom faintly in the stormy weather lies the body of Lord Roberts, the idol of the British army. The Prince of Wales arrived to-day from London to pay homage in the name of the King. It is said that the Prince will stay at the front as a member of General French's staff. Prince Arthur of Connaught also spends many hours at the bier. British Generals, staff officers and subalterns, whose duties are not vitally pressing elsewhere, watch the coffin clad with the Union Jack and listen to the prayers, which, punctuated by the music of the guns, marks this most glorious and impressive of lyings-in-state. At daybreak to-morrow our guns will fire a farewell salute, and the last journey will commence. In simplest grandeur the road to the coast will be taken, and along that road the armies guarding the allies' lines of communication will be drawn up and an endless guard of honour to that sea upon which the allies base their power from this war-stricken land, where all is clash and destruction, and where the reservoirs of human misery are unfathomable, the remains of the grand old man of the British army will pass to the peace and quiet of sea-girt Britain.

PEACE NOT IN SIGHT

Story of the Kaiser and Italy is Generally Discredited.

LONDON, Nov. 16. — Inquiries made by the World to-day in official quarters failed to elicit anything confirmatory of the report that the Kaiser had sounded Italy on the question of peace.

"Italy is hardly the medium Germany would choose for such a purpose," said a prominent M.P. "Italy's position at the moment in regard to this war is one of extreme delicacy. She hopes and expects to get some [illegible] but manifestly the Kaiser could not possibly offer terms on behalf of Austria and at the expense of Austria which would allow for Italy's expectations.

"In fact, peace now—if it were possible, and I know no one here entitled to speak who thinks it is possible—would be inimical to Italy's interests in the post-war settlement.

"There have been very persistent reports that the Kaiser has been looking for some means of buying off Russia, so that Germany may be free to deal with Great Britain, France, and Belgium alone, but Russia is the least buyable of all the allies, though none of them is open to an independent deal.

"It is inconceivable that Germany could yet consent to the only terms on which the Allies would grant her peace, and it is known especially that the Tsar has sworn to persevere to the end until the Prussian menace is absolutely crushed.

"Our feeling here in Britain against Germany is bitter, but in Russia it is implacable. We don't talk of peace here, nor do the French, and this war is going to be fought to a finish by all the Allies.

"Perhaps about next Easter there may be serious peace proposals from Germany, and the Allies will see that they are discussed in Berlin."

TAX MOVIE TICKETS FOR ITALY'S WAR FUND

ROME, Nov. 16.—With the object of meeting the extraordinary expenditure involved in the preparation of the army and navy, which, including the additional appropriation made yesterday of $80,000,000, now totals $240,000,000 an increase in taxation is inevitable, pending the extensive tributary reform in the new tax. This tax varies from one to four cents levied on entrance tickets to moving pictures, an increase in stamp duties, both inland and foreign; bills of exchange levies, registration fees on the sentences of tribunals, and a special tax on statistical lists of imports and exports. These increases are now sanctioned by special decrees signed by the King.

EX-PREMIER AND WIFE HAVE LEFT FRANCE.

Cries of "German Spy" When Joe. Caillaux Appeared on Paris Streets.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Despite "officially permitted" explanations that Joseph Caillaux, ex-Premier of France, has left for Brazil to arrange for the purchase of foodstuffs and clothing that formerly were obtained by France in Austria and Germany, the belief was strong here to-day that more is behind the affair than appears on the surface.

Through discussions of the departure of Caillaux from France at such a crisis in his country's history there are repeatedly heard mention of intimations which came out at the trial of the wife of the ex-Premier.

It is remembered that statesmen of Germany have termed Caillaux as Germany's "best friend in France." Less than ten days ago the appearance of Caillaux with his wife on the streets of Paris brought forth demonstrations from the populace in which cries of "German spy" were heard.

During his wife's trial it was frequently hinted that Caillaux failed to exhibit his customary firmness in combatting German demands during the settlement of the Moroccan question.

OLIVE OIL AS FOOD

ONE of the most sensible things he suggested of late is the taking of Olive Oil as Food and Medicine. Physicians have advised each user of the oil, but it has only been of recent date that it has become a "fad." It has been proved in many cases to be not only a corrective of the liver, but a food for the system as well, and is of great benefit for weak stomach and bowels. The dose is usually a teaspoonful of oil to be taken half an hour before breakfast and half an hour after supper. The oil may be freely used with vegetables and on salads, as it is harmless and beneficial. In use many be continued for years, and in restoring the liver to do its work (it is in most cases mildly cathartic), the complexion is cleared of the ugly brown spots and leathery yellow appearance due to torpidity of the liver. The taste is not unpleasant, although a liking for it has, in most instances, to be acquired. But very few effective medicines are really fairly flavoured, although any medicine, taste can be disguised. Many physicians strongly recommend to users both internal and external. It is excellent to use after the bath, and many delicate persons—especially children—are greatly benefited by being massaged with it. The best quality oil can be procured in 25c & 50c bottles.

BOMBARDING THE TURKISH FORTS

LONDON, Nov. 16.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Athens says:

"The Turks lost 260 men and two guns destroyed in the bombardment of the forts of the Dardenelles.

"The former German cruisers Goeben and Breslau, which now fly the Turkish flag, have re-entered the Bosphorus."

Aden in Danger.

Despatches received at Berlin by way of Constantinople set forth that the British seaport of Aden, in Arabia, at the southern entrance to the Red Sea, is in danger for the reason that the leader of the local Bedouins is calling on his people to rise and liberate the country from the British yoke.

25,000 MORE INDIAN TROOPS.

PARIS, Nov. 16. — Twenty-five thousand Indian troops, cavalry and artillery, passed through Paris to-day from Marseilles to the front. They included the cream of the British Empire's mounted forces in India.

The Indians, who arrived in Marseilles on 12 transports on Thursday, were given a day to get rid of their "sea legs" after having spent twenty-three days upon the water during the voyage from India.

During most of the voyage the transports were beset with raw foggy weather, but their arrival at Marseilles was marked by bright sunshine and soft, balmy breezes.

An enthusiastic reception was given to the Indians by enormous crowds and the dark-skinned soldiers could not conceal their pride at being picked to "help to save the Empire."

They were to have been reviewed this week by Field-Marshal Lord Roberts, who died in a military hospital in Northern France from pneumonia on Saturday.

A YEAR INDOORS.

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were wasting, the heart bad and smothering feelings came on till I thought I would choke. Doctors treatment failed me, so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten."

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Cos. Allan England

The character of the country, however, had begun to change. The valleys had grown deeper and the ridges higher. Allan felt that they were now coming into a more mountainous region.

"Well, that's encouraging, any how," he reflected. "Any time, now, I may sight the double-peaked mountain. It can't heave in sight any too soon to suit me!"

There was need of sighting it, indeed, for already the party had begun to suffer not a little. The perpetual tramping through ashes had started cracks and sores coming on the men's feet. Most of them were coughing and sneezing much of the time, with a kind of influenza caused by the acrid and biting dust.

The dried food, too, had started an intolerable thirst, and water was terribly scarce. The canteens were now almost always empty; and more than one brook or pool, to which the men eagerly hastened, turned out to be saline or hopelessly fouled by fallen forest wreckage, festering and green-tinged in the cooking sun.

In spite of the eye-shields and pigments, some of the men were already suffering from sunburn and ophthalmia, which greatly impaired their efficiency. Their failure to take fish was also beginning to dishearten them.

Allan pondered the advisability of suspending day travel and trekking only by night, but had to give over this plan, for it would obviate all possibility of his sighting the landmark, the cleft mountain. Though he said nothing, the pangs of apprehension were biting deep into his soul.

For the first time that night the idea was strongly borne in upon him that, after all, this might be little better than a wild-goose chase, and that—despite his desperate need of the Pauillac engine—perhaps the better part of valour might be discretion, retreat, return to Settlement Cliffs while there might still be time.

Yet even the few hours of troubled sleep he got that night, camped in a blackened ravine, served to strengthen his determination to push on again at all hazards.

"It can't be far now!" thought he. "The place simply can't be very far! We must have made the best part of the distance already. What madness to turn back now and lose all we've struggled so hard to gain! No, no,—on we go again! Forward to success!"

Next morning, therefore—the fourth since having left New Hope River—the party pushed forward again. It was now a strange procession, limping and slow, the men blinking through their shields, their hands and faces smeared with mud and ashes.

Painfully yet without a word of complaint or rebellion, they once more trailed over the fire-blasted hills on the quest of the wrecked Pauillac.

Hour by hour they were now forced to pause for rest. Some of the impedimenta had to be discarded. During the forenoon Allan commanded that most of the fishing-gear and part of the cordage should be thrown away. Toward mid-afternoon he sorted out the tools, and kept only an essential minimum. Now that they had seen no possible need for ammunition he decided to leave half of that also.

The tools and ammunition he carefully cached under a rock-cairn and set a tall, burned pole up over it, with a cross-piece lashed near the top. The position of this cairn he minutely noted on his map. Some day he would return and get the valuables again.

Nothing could be spared from the provision packets, but these were much lighter, anyhow. This helped a little. But Allan could see that the strength of his men, and his own force as well, was diminishing faster than the burden.

So, with a heavy heart, now half inclined to abandon the task and turn back, he surveyed the horizon for the last time that night in vain search for the landmark mountain of his hopes.

Morning dawned again pitilessly hot and sun-parched. By five o'clock the party was under way, to make at least a few miles before the greatest heat would set in.

Allan realised that this must be the crucial day. Either by nightfall he must sight the mountain or he must turn back. And with fever-burning eagerness he urged his limping men to greater speed, chafed at every delay, constantly examined the horizon, and with consuming wrath cursed the Horde which in its venomous hate had brought this anguish and disaster on his people.

Just a little past eight o'clock a cry suddenly burst from Zanganon, who had left the line during a pause to look for water in a near-by hollow.

Stern heard the man's hoarse voice unmistakably resonant with terror. To him he ran.

"What is it, Zanganon?" he cried, thickly, for his tongue was parched and swollen. "What have you found? Quick, tell me!"

"See, O Kromno! Behold!" exclaimed the man, pointing.

Stern looked—and saw a human body, charred and distorted, face downward on the blackened earth. Up through the back something projected—something hard and sharp.

He stooped, wide-eyed, staring at the thing.

"A spear-head, so help me!"

Then he realized the truth. They had found one of his slaughtered companions of the terrible flight from the Horde!

Stern recoiled. Shocked though he was, yet a certain joy possessed him. For now he knew he could not be far from the path of success. The wrecked machine, he knew, could not lie more than one or two days' march ahead. If the party could only last that long—

The others came hobbling. When they, too, saw the mournful object and knew and understood, a deep silence fell upon them. In a circle they surrounded the corpse of their murdered comrade, and for a while they looked on it with woe.

Allan realized that he must not let inaction, thought and fear prey on them, so he commanded immediate burial of the body.

They therefore dug a shallow grave in the baked soil, and, taking good care not to touch the poisoned spear-head, carefully laid their companion to rest. Over the filled-in grave they heaved rocks.

"Does anybody know his name?" asked Allan.

"He was called Relzang," answered Frumuos. "I knew him well—a metal worker, of the best."

"That's so—now I remember," assented Stern. "What was his totem?"

"A circle, with a bird's head within."

"Let it be placed here then."

Their best stone-cutter roughly hewed the mark in a great boulder, which was set on top of the pile. Then, nothing more remaining to do, the exploring party once more pushed forward.

But Allan could sense that now even its diminished strength had greatly lessened. Discouragement and forebodings of certain death were working among the men.

He knew he could not hold them more than a few hours longer at the outside.

During the noonday halt and rest, under a low cliff, he made a charweg, saying:

"O my people, barring the matter of the patriarch's death, I have always spoken truth to you. Now I speak truth. This shall be the last day. Ye have been brave and strong, uncomplaining in great trials, and obedient. I shall regard ye greatly. But I am wise. I will not drive yet too far. The end is at hand.

"Either I see the cleft mountain by to-morrow night or we return. I shall push no farther forward than the march of one day and a half. After that I shall either have the flying boat or we shall go quickly to our safe home at Settlement Cliffs.

"Be of good heart, therefore. The return will be much easier and shorter. We can follow the picture of the way that I have made. Despair not. All shall be well. I have spoken."

They greeted his promise with murmurs of approbation, but made no answer, for body and soul were grievously tried. When he gave the order to advance again, however, they buckled into the straps with a good heart. Their morale he plainly saw, had been markedly improved by his few words.

And, now filled with hot, new hope, once more he led the painful march, his binoculars every few minutes swinging round the far horizon in a vain attempt to sight the longed-for height.

But other events were destined and were written on the book of fate. For, as they topped a high ridge about five o'clock that afternoon — dragging themselves along, parched and spent, rather than marching—Allan made a halt for careful observations from this vantage-post.

The men sank down, eager to lie prone even for a few minutes on the ash-covered soil, to hide their eyes and pant like hard-run hunting dogs.

Allan himself felt hardly the strength to remain upright; but he forced himself to stand there, and with a tremendous effort held the glass true as it slowly scoured the sky-line to north and west.

All at once he uttered a choking cry. The glass shook in his wasted hands. His eyes, staring, refused their office, and a strange purple blur seemed to blot the horizon from his sight.

With the binoculars he stared at a point N. N. W., where he had thought to see the incredible apparition; but now nothing appeared.

"Hallucinations, so soon?" he muttered, rubbing his eyes "Come, come, buck up! This won't do at all!"

"My God! but I do see them—and they're real—they're moving, too!" he exclaimed. "No hallucination, no mirage! They're there! But—but what— What can this mean? Who can they be?"

Tiny and clear against the dazzling background of the afternoon sky he had perceived a long line of human figures trekking to southeast over the distant hill-top, almost directly toward the point where his exhausted troop now lay inert and panting.

The Medicine Hat News is now in its new quarters, and without a doubt can boast of the most magnificent printshop in western Canada for a city of the size. Though the various departments are given plenty of floor space, windows in plenty, high ceilings and pleasant surroundings being situated on the river bank and overlooking the park), the management was easily prevailed upon to install a good ventilating system. A NEGLECTED COLD
WILL VERY OFTEN TURN TO CONSUMPTION.

Never neglect what at first seems to be only a slight cold. Perhaps you start to cough, a little irritation in the throat ensues, then it gets lower down, settles on the lungs and bronchitis sets in, and you start to raise phlegm of a greenish, yellowish color, and you cough persistently.

If you let the simple cold run it will surely develop into something very serious, and perhaps consumption.

On the first sign of a cold or cough go to your dealer and procure a bottle of
DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

A few doses will convince you that it is just the remedy you require.

Mrs. J. W. Pearsons, Amherst, N.S., writes: "Some time ago my daughter had a very bad cough which settled on her chest. She had no rest day or night. I gave her everything I could think of, but without doing her the least bit of good. At last I thought of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so I got a bottle for her. She had not taken half of it before she got relief, and with the remainder she was completely cured. Now when any of the family have a cough we always know what to get for it."

Dr. Wood's is 25c and 50.

The Joy of Good Health Is Now Experienced

Nervousness, Dizzy Spells and Sleeplessness Are Now a Thing of the Past.

This is a cheerful letter from Mrs. Peacock, and it should bring joy to the heart of many a reader of this paper. Dizzy spells and sleeplessness are symptoms of exhausted nerves, and are the bugbear of many women, who do not know just what treatment to use.

MRS. PEACOCK.

You can read Mrs. Peacock's letter and take courage, for she has proven that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a complete cure for these troubles. So pleased was she with the results obtained that she wants other women to know about this food cure.

Mrs. Thomas Peacock, 23 Hiawatha street, St. Thomas, Ont., and whose husband is conductor on the Wabash Railway, states:—"I was quite run down in health, was very nervous, did not sleep well, and had frequent dizzy spells. Believing this to be the result of an exhausted nervous system I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and can say that this medicine did me a world of good. It entirely freed me of the symptoms stated above, built up my health generally, so that to-day I feel that I am quite well again."

In a more recent letter Mrs. Peacock writes:—"Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done me a world of good, and I would be pleased to tell everybody so."

In nearly every issue of this paper you will find letters about Dr. Chase's medicines. If this one does not describe your case watch for others or write to us. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

GERMAN BUSINESS MEN COMING BY THOUSANDS

Great Exodus to This Continent, Where There is No War, Has Already Begun—Many Who Have Lost All Will Make New Start—Others Will Bring Considerable Money

(By Herbert Corey)

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 12—"In America," said the head waiter, interrogatively "you have no conscript army?"

"No," said the man at the next table, "in America we have no conscript army."

"When this war is over," said the head waiter, stifling a yawn, "I am going to America."

He was a shockingly rumple-headed waiter. He needed a shave worse than any other waiter ever did at 9 o'clock in the morning. He couldn't have hidden that yawn of his in a barrel. When he brought over the eggs and bacon he accomplished the difficult feat of limping perceptibly on both sides. If you don't think that is hard try it some time.

"Blisters," he explained. "The heels on. I was called out at half-past two this morning for a practice march, and we marched until day-break."

One can't blame the head waiter for determining on emigration when this war is over. There are a lot more like him. I miss my guess if the United States does not suddenly come into possession of a large body of young and athletic men who have been violently disgusted with militarism. They will come from Holland and Belgium and Germany and France, and they will stay. I've met scores of them.

"I belong to one of the reserves," said the head waiter. "Three times a week we march. About once a week they wake up in the middle of the night and we have to hike over country roads for hours. That is to accustom us to responding to night calls, if Holland is drawn into the war and we are needed in a hurry. What a life for a family man."

There are 250,000 like this chap in Holland. The Dutch maintain a standing army of about 40,000 men. The remainder belong to the various reserves. When the army was mobilized on August 1st they were all called to the colours. Most of them are there yet. The oldest class of reserves are permitted to stay at home, on condition they drill with their units a stated number of times a week. Night marches are an essential part of this training. If Holland goes into war she will go ready for business.

Business Men, Too.

Wherever you go in Holland you see regiments of soldiers marching. After the first few weeks they have been tramping 25 miles a day. That nice little round front which one thinks of when the word "Dutchman" is mentioned doesn't exist in Holland any more. Her men are as straight-fronted as any Parisienne. Their faces are brown and their eyes bright. And they march like veterans. It will trouble any ordinarily good walker to keep up with these chaps over a route.

This emigration to America which I believe will take place will not draw all its recruits from the chaps who object to being called to the colours. There are literally thousands of solid, substantial business men—at least they were solid and substantial before the war—who propose to settle in a land at peace. I met one on the train the other day. He owns one of the leading factories of fine leather goods in Holland. He made it all himself. He began as a workman. Now he speaks five languages and maintains agencies in as many countries.

"I was rich before the war," said he. "My only debts were those of current business. In addition to my Dutch factory I had one in Belgium."

German shells took the roof off the Belgian factory. Then the French happened along and shot the walls down. That enterprise is out of business.

"I've been trying to collect some of the money that is due me in France and Belgium," said he. "I didn't try hard. I knew it was of no use. But I thought some one might be willing to pay."

They laughed at him, these bills-due customers. His request sounded positively funny to them. None of them had any money or any chance of getting any. Besides, a moratorium had ben decared.

"They will pay when they can," said he, positively. "I know them all. I also know that just now they cannot pay."

There is a warehouse man in the hotel where I have been living. Four months ago his prospects were as bright as those of any man in Amsterdam. His floors were cleared of their wares—he deals in rubber—by a hurry order from Germany just before war was declared. The incoming cargoes consigned to him were held up by the English men-of-war, for rubber is contrabnad. He was paid for this rubber by England at market prices. He and the leather manufacturer are going to America as soon as they can realise on some of the debts due them.

"There is a very rich man in San Francisco who knows my work," said the leather man. "He offered to back me once before. I'm going to accept that offer now. I've had enough of countries where there is war."

The rubber dealer doesn't know any one in the United States. He says that doesn't make any difference. He has money, even if his business is gone.

"I'm Dutch," says he. "We get along anywhere—if there is no war."

Leaving Germany Also.

Three Hamburg Germans — solid, substantial, business-like chaps — were on their way to London. Oh, yes, Germans get to London. They only have to know how and to have a knowledge of the English language.

"We sold our business and had the money—all in gold—a month before war came," said they. Now Hamburg is almost dead. Not more than 20 per cent. of her factories are still open. Many of these are running on part time. The harbour is crowded with dead ships. It will be years before Germany recovers. Why should we stay?"

So they are going to the United States. They were not able to get out of the country with all their gold. But they have enough to keep them going until they find an opening in America, and enough to take advantage of that opening when they find it—if it takes a year. They've had enough of war.

There are thousands more like them. The leather man said five of his personal acquaintances plan to remove to the United States as soon as they can gather together the scraps the war has left them. The rubber dealer knew of others. The three Hamburg Germans said there will be an exodus of men with money from that part of Germany.

"We could get along under the burden of taxes for keeping up our armies," they said, "but when the war came and destroyed every one's business—what's the use. We'll go where peace is apt to last."

It may be this army of immigration will not be recruited largely from the day labouring classes. Many of them, when the war is over, will not leave enough money to get to the States. Many will be so crippled and diseased that a remove from their old homes will be folly. Many will take advantage of the rising market for labour which will certainly accompany the re-building process of the belligerent countries, and which will operate under forced draught because so many of yesterday's workmen are now dead in unmarked rows on name less battlefields.

But there will be a surprising influx of business men to America. Most of them will have some money. Others will have only introductions in a country in which conditions are not to be shaken now and then by some frantic fear of war. They are tired of saber canking.

"We are business men," they all tell you, "War is foolish."

INDIVIDUAL AND GENERAL.

Habits, especially bad habits, easily become an element in our actions, but if we take a little pains to cultivate food habits, their acquirement is easy, too. Once a man gets the habit of buying things made in his own country, he gets a satisfaction that he never enjoyed before. It's a good bit of human nature not to care where things are made so long as they fit the case. But it's a better and a bigger part of selfish human nature to figure out how one's purchases help along the general movement of prosperity in his own country. In this co-operation between the individual and the general welfare, the personal effort of every man and woman counts when it comes to the big national push that gets the country out of the rut. Canada has a large army of workers to keep busy. The workers depend for their subsistence on thousands upon thousands of factories. The part played by one community in keeping up this great empire of business depends precisely upon how many individuals take hold of the movement. In all greater popular movements it is the five and ten cent purchase multiplied by the thousands upon thousands of people that register the popular good will. A big subscriber may write himself down for thousands and forget it. A thousand other people may go down for a few dollars each and the world can never forget the result they get for it.

THE NEXT NAVAL BATTLE

The German cruiser Dresden which was not in the battle off Coronel has joined the cruiser Leipzig and put into Valparaiso Harbour. Despatches say that six warships, probably German, were seen steaming southward at a point 475 miles south of Calparaiso. Powerful allied squadrons are gathering on the Atlantic sides of the Straits of Magellan, and British and Japanese squadrons are on the trail of the Germans in the Pacific. A great naval battle may be fought near the Straits.

Can We Afford To Build Concrete Roads?

ESSEX county, Ontario, considered expending a great sum of money on concrete highways that would connect all parts of the county. Concrete roads are expensive. Was Essex county wise in the choice of materials for construction? No one questions the wisdom of its decision for good roads. We will have to go to the United States to determine just how the concrete road is meeting the demand for a durable highway in actual practice. In Connecticut, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Delaware and Pennsylvania, both state and local communities are turning to the concrete road as the solution of their problem and with excellent results.

Taking a 16-foot concrete road as a basis, highways of this character have cost on the average about $12,000 a mile, while maintenance costs have been practically nothing. For example, in Bellefontaine, Ohio, a concrete road put down 20 years ago has cost less than $25 a mile a year for maintenance, while the average maintenance cost of macadam roads in five eastern states in 1912 exceeded $800 a mile a year. The farmer, in adopting concrete, has figured the matter in this way:

A road is an investment. The most conservative estimate of maintenance cost on macadam a mile a year would be certain to reach $800 if the road is subject to motor-driven traffic and kept passable at all seasons. An equally conservative estimate for construction is $6,000 per mile. The $800 maintenance cost represents interest on $6,000 at five per cent, thus making the real investment $12,000 a mile, or the cost of a mile of indestructible concrete road. As a matter of fact, taking New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania costs, the investment would be some $25,000 a mile.

From considering a single mile of roadway it became interesting to figure costs on many miles to see what would happen in the case of macadam as compared with concrete. For example, let it be assumed that 500 miles are to be built during a period of five years at the rate of 100 miles a year, and that repairs will not be required on either type of road for two years. Beginning, then, at the third year, and estimating maintenance costs for concrete at $25 a mile a year, the Bellefontaine figures, the total maintenance costs on 500 miles of concrete road would, at the expiration of seven years, be only $87,500. In the case of macadam, basing costs on New York and New Jersey figures for 1912, repair costs would reach the enormous total of $1,960,000. Where concrete roads are very narrow, say nine feet wide, and have a dirt road at the sides, they could be built for $7,500 a mile. Maryland has built excellent concrete roads of standard width for a little less than $12,000 a mile.

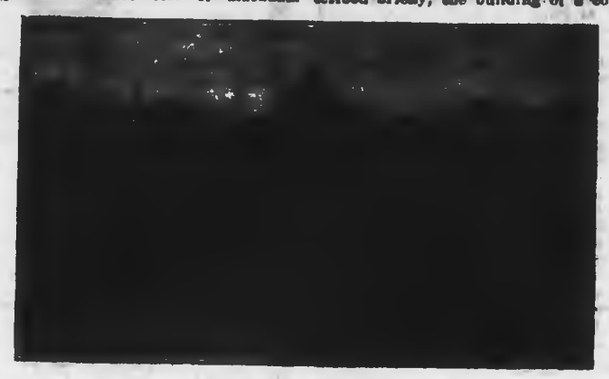
But aside from moderate first cost and practically negligible maintenance costs, the popularity of the concrete road is rapidly growing in rural communities due to the experience of those who have used it. For the farmer it is the ideal highway. Described briefly, the building of a concrete road consists of putting a wet and mushy mass of Portland cement, sand and stone in the centre of a highway, where it hardens into imperishable rock. The accompanying illustrations give a very good idea of the building of a road and its appearance when finished. The first picture shows the construction of a concrete road near Mason City, Iowa. The concrete has been placed between rigidly staked side forms. The road is then troweled with wooden floats. The view of the finished road in Maryland shows its admirable surface.

This type of road appeals especially to the farmer and his family, because it provides them at all seasons with an excellent place to walk as well as a thoroughfare for vehicles. It is a fact that in Wayne county, Michigan, children go to and from school on roller skates over the wonderful concrete roads of that locality. Horses never slip or fall upon these roads and will draw twice or three times their accustomed load. It is needless to say torrential rains cannot wash through these roads.

—Farm and Dairy.



A Type of Road That is Being Widely Adopted Where Traffic is Heavy

This 22-foot concrete road has been giving good service in the State of Maryland, and while its first cost was heavy, maintenance charges have been practically nil. Essex county, Ontario, has been considering the construction of roads of the same material. Were it not for motor cars travelling through country districts, such expensive roads would be neither necessary nor advisable. Question—What proportion of the cost, therefore, should be borne by motorists?

A GIRL WHO WANTED A MAN.

A group of girls were recently shocked when one of their number, a recruit from the country, said, quite candidly: "I've come to town to get a man."

There wasn't a bit of reason why she shouldn't get one, and a good one, for she was a fine looking, healthy, whole souled miss, fit to be the mother of fair women and brave men and to be an inspiring partner in a successful home.

The other girls, no doubt, had often looked forward to love, marriage, motherhood and home management, including the inevitable man. But when she spoke her thought frankly they recoiled.

"It was so indelicate," one afterward said. "Even if a girl thinks that way it isn't nice for her to say it."

Yet none of them thought there was anything indelicate about learning to teach, to keep books, to typewrite or otherwise to equip for the pursuit of a career in business. That has become quite conventional.

It was only the supreme interest in a woman's life, the thing for which nature through all the ages has been fashioning her, the function without which there would come a swift end to the race, that could not be spoken of directly.

How about it? Was the girl from the country at fault? Or is coyness really preferable to candor?

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood-forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by its use flood the system with rich, red, vitalizing blood. This is Nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefits.

The Limitation of Art.

The head of a certain Washington family was recently approached by his son, just nearing his majority. "Father," said he, "I want to talk with you concerning my future. I have decided to become an artist. Have you any objections?"

"Well, no, son — provided, of course, that you don't draw on me."

A DISTRACTED BARD

I wooed her in iambic feet,
In flowing measures anapestic.
I sang her praises, called her sweet,
In dactyls dainty yet majestic.
I tuned a choriambic lyre
And hymned her till my throat was choky.
I told her of love's ardent fire
In lines where danced the tripping trochee.

Then the grave spondee I essayed,
Yet in it made my passion graphic.
Last I besought the cruel maid
In many an adoring sapphic.
Behold the climax of my woes!
My eyes with tears of sorrow glisten.
She writes, "If you'll come down to prose,
Perhaps"—'tis underscored — "I'll listen!"

TO-DAY.

Think of nothing but the day.
Yesterday is dead and gone,
And to-morrow will not stay
Longer than another one.

Why should time that cannot mar
One triumphant rose's scent
Stint our joys because they are Blossoms fair, not permanent?

Any joy, like any flower,
Has its instant blossoming.
How can even time have power
Over either perfect thing?

HE COACHED TURKEY

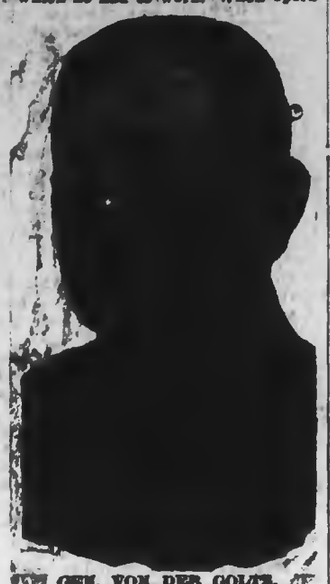
But Von Der Goltz Is Still a Bi Fellow In Germany.

Germany's military governor of Belgium—for a little while—is Field Marshal General von der Goltz.

He was the organizer of the worst beaten army in modern history. Kirk Kilisse and Lule Burgas were assumed almost to have buried Goltz Pasha's reputation.

But a different opinion prevails at the German General Staff. Von der Goltz is in his regular capacity Inspector General of the Second Army Inspection.

Field Marshal von der Goltz's reputation as an organizer rests in his own country on his work as General of the First Army Corps—the Russian border legion—at Konigsberg, which he commanded between 1902 and 1907. The assignment to the command of the corps of his native East Prussia was particularly agreeable to him and to the material with which he had to work. When operations began, however, he was put in charge of the Belgian section of the campaign and is one of the men who will have to answer for the atrocities committed there by German officers and soldiers.



GEN. VON DER GOLTZ.

At Konigsberg Goltz had full play for his tactical genius. He devoted his energies to developing the strategic training of the First Corps, which will be called upon to bear the brunt of the early fighting with Russia. He inculcated relentlessly in officers and troops the doctrine that soldiering is all work and no play, and himself served as a tireless example of the theory. His critiques of manoeuvres were extraordinarily instructive. New points of view were constantly being revealed by him. An officers who served in Goltz's corps was looked upon as having studied the art of war at the fountain head.

Goltz is 70 years old, and has been writing, fighting, and working for more than 50 years of the time.

An Old, Family Cough Remedy, Home-Made

Easily Prepared—Costs Very Little, but is Prompt, Sure and Effective

By making this old-time cough syrup at home you not only save about ½, as compared with the ready-made kind, but you will also have a much more prompt and positive remedy in every way. It overcomes the usual coughs, throat and chest colds in 24 hours—relieves even whooping cough quickly—and is excellent, too, for bronchitis, bronchial asthma, hoarseness and spasmodic croup.

Get from any drug store 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Full directions with Pinex. Keeps perfectly and tastes good.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. It quickly loosens the dry, hoarse or painful cough, and also heals the inflamed membranes. It also has a remarkable effect in overcoming the persistent loose cough by stopping the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes.

The effect of pine on the membranes is known by almost every one. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements.

There are many worthless imitations of this famous mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and do not accept anything else.

Vera Cruz Occupation Cost $5,000,000

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—A high official of the War Department last night estimated that the occupation of Vera Cruz by the American Government had cost for the army alone, close to $5,000,000. In addition to this cost, merely for quartering and feeding the army, the protection and feeding of Mexican refugees, who fled to the United States after the battle of Ojinaga, cost in the neighborhood of $500,000, for which there have been no returns. This cost is exclusive of the money required to keep the fleet ready for action on both coasts of Mexico. No attempt has been made to figure the cost of this expenditure.

To Protect Arabs.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Britain, it is announced, has no intention of undertaking any military or war operations in Arabia, except for the protection of Arab interests against Turkish or other aggression, or in support of any attempt of the Arabs to free themselves from Turkish rule.

WAR'S EFFECT ON "ADS"

Tragedies and Heartaches Reflected in Columns of London Papers

The advertising columns of the London daily papers tell their own story of the war. If the censor went so far as to block out every other line of information, so long as he left the "ads" intact the reader would still not lack instruction as to what the war means to England. He would still find a great deal of pathos and grim humor.

Fears at first entertained by the newspapers and periodicals that advertising might be abandoned on account of the war's effect on business appear to have been groundless. There have been losses, indeed, in one line, and gains in another, with the net result that there is seemingly no serious diminution of the amount of space sold at the usual rates for advertising.

The most notable change has been in the character of the advertising. It is distinctly war advertising. Of that sort it is more extensive than has ever been known in the history of British journalism. The greatest space gain is probably in the "small ad" line. Two or more pages of the leading morning papers are crowded with fine print announcements, with only a bold initial letter to relieve the monotony.

The conspicuous new feature is the "Killed in Action" or the "Roll of Honor" section. Alongside the familiar string of "Births, Deaths and Marriages," it is now a daily occurrence to find in many of the papers a good part of a column taken up with such announcements as this:

Read: Killed in action, Arthur Beddome Read, Sec. Lieut. Somerset Light Infantry; the dearly loved son of the late Robert R. Read and Mrs. Read, Avalon, Sutton, Surrey, and grandson of the late Col. R. H. Beddome and Mrs. Beddome, Shapira, Putney.

There is not a column and hardly an advertisement among the hundreds on the page but that directly or indirectly suggests some phase of the war. The "Personal" columns, as ever, are enigmas except to those who have shared the secret of communication by this means, but they often savor of patriotism. When one reads: "Dearest: Am praying for you. Always loyal. Love," he may easily imagine it to be some sweetheart's possibly vain attempt to get a word to her soldier lover, she knows not just where.

But one needs to exercise no imagination to see the effect of the war in other instances. Taking a personal column haphazard, one finds near the top such an appeal as this:

"I want to buy a German helmet. What offers?"

There are many suggestions of how one may help the troops in training such as this:

"Will anybody lend a pack of harriers or beagles to a regimental mess to be hunted by the officers until ordered abroad?"

There are those who want to locate wounded relatives, such as this: "If anybody has news of Major A. F. Haig, the King's Own Scottish Borderers, wounded at Le Chateau, will they please communicate with ——."

"Gentlemen, idle through the war," appears frequently in the appeals for employment. One such says he would like to take a party of three touring anywhere through Great Britain.

An "advertiser holding post under military authority" asks if "a kindly disposed lady or gentleman will lend him £15 for special family provision; will repay by instalments of 10 shillings a week."

Commando Kaiser's Eastern Army

GEN. VON HINDENBURG

General Von Hindenburg is the quiet, forceful man of the Kaiser's general staff. He was the leader chosen to check the Russians in East Prussia.

Capable and resourceful, a stern disciplinarian, this German general retains wonderful control over his army and is his ability to move his men quickly lies the secret of his popularity with the Kaiser and his immediate military advisers.

Boxed the Kaiser's Ears

There is at least one British woman who has boxed the ears of Germany's self-styled War Lord. That lady is the widow of Sir Hugh Macdonnell, the great diplomatist.

The incident is described in her book of reminiscences by Lady Macdonell. It took place when she was living in Berlin, and when the Crown Prince—now the Kaiser—was a frequent visitor at her house.

"He liked our English teas," writes Lady Macdonell, "and afterwards used to claim me for a game of draughts. In the salon there was a big window with a deep seat that he especially favored. To this a small table was drawn up, and fine battles ensued over the board. I shall never forget one occasion when he accused me of cheating.

"He was so apparently serious that I became infuriated, and, unmindful of his high estate and my duty as hostess, I impulsively leaned across the table and boxed his ears!"

Indian Troops

PARIS, Nov —Before the Indian troops can go on the firing line they must be acclimated. It was a strange sight which met my eye on visiting this encampment—a bit of the East set down in the West . .

There were rows upon rows of little low, ridge-pole tents, with great heaps of stores at one end—chests of biscuits, sacks of flour, and bundles of compressed hay. Everywhere are swarthy faces, gleaming brown eyes, pearly white teeth, and shining black hair. The different types are easily distinguished. Here is the tall Sikh with his braided hair and beard, which he never cuts. Hardly a man is less than six feet high, and the tallest is nearer seven feet. Here are the little Gurkhas.

Besides the British officers of the battalion each Sikh company of several which are starting out for a route march have a native subadar marching at the head. The native officers wear turbans like the men, but you single them out at once by the swords they carry—curved black leather scabbarded tulwars with clumsy steel hilts that must be, many of them, the identical sabres that the officers of the old East India Company bore.

The men are all in khaki, but their turbans are marked in ways to distinguish the different bodies. Here appears a line of brilliant yellow or crimson, and there a dark blue tassel.

Alongside the lines of tents was a row of tiny little wood fires, built in the shelter of a small trench scooped out of the ground. The cooks crouch by the side of them, squatting on their heels in the position that immemorial habit has made an attitude of repose for Orientals, though a European finds it after a few moments one of extremest discomfort. Around them on the ground are set out pots of beaten brass and strange cooking implements of different kinds, common enough in Labore, but which seem fantastic here. Sometimes it is a piece of goat's flesh that the cook is preparing—the head seems a favourite part—a black goat, an old one for choice, for they like the flavour strong. They have brought a certain number of goats with them from India; when these are finished they will perhaps have to fall back on sheep, which is an acceptable substitute, though hardly as tasty as the goat.

But the chief work of the cooks is to prepare the pancake-like chupatti, which is the characteristic food of India. They squat there, usually with their shirt, of sometimes two of them, hanging loose around their spindle legs, and somehow on an Indian a garment seems to hang better and to flap more than it ever does on a European. With lean, brown hands they scoop up dough out of a pan by their side. Rubbing this between the palms they flatten it out to about the size of a dinner-plate into an earthy-coloured disc of dough. Then it is put on to a frying pan or an iron plate and left to bake over the little fire. When several of them are ready, a group gathers around the fire, huddled up together, squatting on their heels, and the chupatties are handed round and eaten, sometimes alone, sometimes with a little clarified butter, called ghi, to help them down.

It is a simple but plentiful food-supply—dried vegetables, rice, flour, butter and a little meat. Beef and pork are, of course, excluded by religious prejudice—the cow being too greatly venerated by the Hindu and the pig too much despised by the Mussulman. But caste difficulties seem to interfere very little with the routine of the contingent. While some of the battalions are made up entirely of Sikhs, others are composed of companies belonging to different Indian races — two Afridi companies, two of Pathans, and so on. All of them are from the mountainous north, and for the greater number this is by no means their first campaign. Indeed, some of those grizzled old native officers, whose bodily vigour still continues though their crisp beards are turning grey, have been seeing fighting all their lives, and the practice of war is the one tradition which countless generations of their forefathers have handed down to them.

As you walk through this native camp down the long lines of tents, with their tasselled curtains and the strange native characters upon the sides, every single detail of the picture stands out with arresting novelty in some new reference to the practices of this west civilization connected so closely with us, but of which we understand so little. Over there is a shapeless heap of grey blanket crouched on the ground, that is hardly recognizable as a human form until you notice the long, lean, brown hands that hold close to the swarthy face a pipe made of a cocoanut shell with a high bowl sticking out above its rim. Further on is a solemn group of [illegible] round a fire [illegible] it is fun to pull at a large Bedlah [illegible] vivid coloured leather. By the side of them stands a Sikh sergeant, whose black beard is [illegible] grounds dyed a vivid red. This is a little trick of vanity. A few grey hairs had begun to show at the edge and to hide them he had stained them with henna to a brilliant purple which has now faded to a brick-red.

"If they are well fed, they'll keep the winter as well as European troops," say the officers. They know all about the cold and wet upon the frontier."

For years it has been the fain longing of the Indian army officer to lead his men in a big Continental war.

Embarassing Hairs Can Be Quickly Removed

Beauty Culture

Hairs can be easily banished from the skin by this quick, painless method. Mix into a stiff paste some powdered delatone and water, spread on hairy surface and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be free from hair or blemish. Excepting in very stubborn growths, one application is sufficient. To avoid disappointment, buy the delatone in an original package.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—A despatch Petrograd to the Times says:

"This decision was taken because drinking among officers quartered at remote places had not ceased."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

NEVER AGAIN!

A Narrow Escape

By FRANK CONDON

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

It's a very strange thing about women.

Education, training, youthful surroundings, companions, home influence and other conditions or circumstances of the past will generally present to the observer of a man at least an inkling of what that man will do under certain conditions.

In the case of a woman you may have the history of her entire life at your finger tips, and when you attempt to prophesy her actions or to explain them after she has acted—well, if you're over seven you know precisely how many thousand miles wrong you'll be.

Young Mrs. Madeline had a fine home, a French bulldog, imported Persian rugs, an eighty-eight note piano player, a maidservant of ebony hue, money in the bank and a private check book.

Robert—that was Mr. Grant—caught the 8:46 each morning and made money until the 5:40 at night.

Then he went home to Madeline with a box of bonbons, a bundle of flowers or a book.

The Grant sky was blue and serene. Robert was so happy that he with difficulty restrained himself from cheering each time he reflected upon it, and so was Madeline for a long time.

On an unlucky afternoon a lady called to visit Madeline, and when she went away she presented her hostess with a new book called "Marriage as a Fine Art."

That was the beginning of considerable trouble in the erstwhile happy family of the Grants. Nothing happened upon which one could put one's finger, but it became apparent to Robert that Madeline was troubled.

On a sultry, unpleasant afternoon Robert returned from New York worn out, wilted of collar and ready to take a cool bath and forget the worries of the city.

He entered his home, walked into the dining room and stopped very suddenly. Madeline was sitting before the table with her head on her arms, and she was weeping in long sobs that shook her entire body.

"What's the matter?" Robert asked simply.

"You know very well what it is," Madeline said.

"I do not know what it is," he retorted. "I'm asking you because I want to know. Has somebody poisoned the goldfish?"

"Make a joke of it if you like," she said coldly, "but I assure you it has gone beyond the stage of jesting. Haven't I been a good wife to you?"

"You surely have, my dear. You're the best wife a man ever had. But what has that to do with it? Haven't I also been a good husband to you?"

"You have not!" she declared bitterly. "Who is the woman—the woman?"

Robert, who had been standing, sat down abruptly.

"The woman!" he gasped. "Madeline, would you be kind enough to sit down and tell me quietly what on earth you are talking about?"

"You carry it off very well," she answered, eying him coldly. "I have been suspecting that a good wife could be. I have tried to make your home happy, and I only thought of you and your happiness. Everything that I could do in an effort to make myself as perfect a wife as possible I have done, and you repay it all, how? By forgetting me—by casting me off for another woman."

"That isn't the truth, Madeline," he answered gently. "You are the only woman I care for. There is no other woman anywhere in the world except you. You have made a horrible mistake of some kind, and I can't understand it."

"WHO IS THE WOMAN?"

"Perhaps you can understand this better, then," she continued.

Madeline, tragedy in her step, walked to her husband and placed in his hand a folded sheet of paper.

"What is it?" he asked without looking at it.

"Read it," she said.

He slowly unfolded the paper and read.

"Dearest Bob," said the paper, "you are the only man in this world I shall ever love, and I shall always love you more than any other man, and I am the only woman—and of this I am certain—whom you will always love, no matter what other woman may come into your life."

It was signed "The One Woman."

"Is it a joke?" he asked uncertainly.

"That letter I found in the pocket of the suit you wore yesterday to New York, and I am not surprised at finding some evidence of your guilt. I am not very observing, but I have seen the change that has slowly come over you, and I suspected its cause. Do you think that a loving wife can be blind to such things, no matter how unsophisticated she may be? No; she feels things she cannot explain, and of late I have felt that your love for me has dwindled and that some other woman has taken it from me."

Madeline began to weep softly.

"It is all a mistake," Robert said. "It is either a joke or a trick, and I can't understand it. I know no woman who could send me such a letter. I do not know the handwriting, and I cannot explain how the letter was in my pocket. All I can say, Madeline, is that I love you, and you only. You must not distrust me, because there is not the slightest reason for doing so. Suppose we tackle this intelligently and try to find out whether some deluded friend is playing a practical joke on us or whether an evil minded mischief maker has sought to bring trouble to us both."

Madeline wept afresh.

Robert moved over and sat down beside her. He placed his arms around her, and she did not repulse him.

He spoke to her gently and soothingly, and after a time she dried her tears and smiled.

"You don't believe it?" he queried, stroking her hand.

"Now," Madeline said, "I am positive that you care for no other woman but me. I am sure of it because you have proved it to me, although for some time I have been miserable with doubts and suspicions."

"How," Robert said wonderingly—"how have I proved it? You are convinced that I know nothing of 'The One Woman?'"

"Yes, dear," Madeline purred sweetly. "I am sure you do not know such a woman because I wrote the note and put it in your pocket. Rather, I had Helen, our girl, write it at my dictation."

Robert suddenly rose from his couch. He was very stern.

"Why," he demanded coldly—"why did you do such a thing as that?"

"Listen, dear," his wife pleaded. "In the book called 'Marriage as a Fine Art' there are chapters which tell a wife how to know the state of her husband's affection for her. Invariably, the book explains, a husband who is disloyal to his wife will when accused by her break into a violent storm of indignant denial. He will deny everything in the bitterest, harshest tones—if he is guilty. If he is innocent he will be kind and gentle. You are innocent, dear Robert. I ask your forgiveness for ever having suspected you, but I love you too dearly to bear the thought of losing your affection. Say that you forgive me."

"I will forgive you upon one condition," her husband answered in his sternest voice. "Where is the book called 'Marriage as a Fine Art?'"

"It is in my room, Robert," Madeline meekly replied.

"Bring it to me," he commanded. "Upon that condition I will forgive you for everything you have done."

"But it belongs to Mrs. Tewksbury, dear."

"Bring it to me!"

Madeline went upstairs and returned with the mischief producing volume. She handed it to Robert.

"This is a fine, worthy little book," he said, skimming rapidly through the tome. "It will serve a good purpose."

Then Robert walked into the kitchen, followed by his wife. Helen Murphy was preparing the potatoes, and at the moment Robert entered her domain a steaming pan was in her hands, and the lid of the stove was off.

For the next half hour "Marriage as a Fine Art" blazed merrily among the coals, accompanied by the fraudulent letter Madeline had written and placed in his coat.

At the end of that time Robert came warily into the kitchen, having heard Helen Murphy stirring in the coal cellar.

He removed the lid from the stove.

Then he reached into the pocket of his coat and took therefrom another letter in a small envelope, addressed to him in fine, feminine handwriting and odorous with the perfume of violets.

He looked at it as one looks at something from which one has had a narrow escape, and, raising his hand in an attitude of never again, he dropped the letter upon the still smoldering ashes of "Marriage as a Fine Art."

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally if You Eat Meat Regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clog the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a teaspoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralise the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

STORY OF SOUP.

No one but a hotel proprietor understands all that this responsibility means. The great hordes who profit by it realize it least of all. There probably is not one of them who has any personal realization that what he left in his soup tureen a few months ago is now paying a valuable percentage of the cuisine charges of one of the greatest hotels in this city. The man who figured out that waste and eliminated its profit without deterioration of service is one of the rising geniuses in hotel efficiency. He went to the medical men and the dieticians before he made his final report. They told him that to take too much soup is one of the best ways known to their profession to boggle up one's interior. He already knew that most men—90 per cent. of them—leave enough soup in the ordinary tureen to make a meal.

He installed a measuring device which automatically ladles out the exact quantity of soup that suffices and is good for any one. The next kitchen check showed that the cost of hundreds of gallons of soup had been saved without detriment to the service and without one protest from the dining rooms.

RUSSIAN INVASION OF GERMANY.
The fortresses upon which the Kaiser will partly depend to stem the swift tide of Russian invasion, are Danzig, Gaudenz, Thorn and Posen. Russian cavalry is at pleschen, inside the German border, after driving the Germans from their trenches along the Warthe river.

Conspicuous Uniforms

PARIS, Nov. 7.—When I see the bright sunshine breaking through every morning after chilly evenings and nights I wonder how many lives it is costing. The French are beginning to awaken to the fact that a dazzling uniform may be rather an expensive luxury. All the Dragoons I have seen come into Paris the last few days have had their shining brass helmets shrouded with a loose khaki covering.

I am inclined to think that more lives are lost in the field by neglecting little things that matter than by any small newspaper indiscretion which takes its time to filter through to the enemy, who in these days of aeroplane scouting probably know as much of moving of troops en masse as our own commanding officers.

I put this in as a rough proposition, though there are times when I know that the mention of the fact that Private Dupont of the 800th Regiment of Senegalese has been wounded at the village of St. Just-le-Voleur, might lead the enemy to rub his eyes and say:

"Hello, we know they have been reinforced there, but we didn't know they had brought General Chose's division round. We will just see how the line is held where he was supposed to be, and if it has been weakened by the removal of this division."

At a critical moment in Belgium I had occasion to point out how perfectly interviews with privates of what to the civilian might appear to be an unimportant visit at an unimportant village might furnish an indication as to where a whole force was operating, and I told them how a Belgian retired officer joined a group of journalists waiting outside the Ministry of War and offered by the aid of three or four newspapers publishing these innocent interviews to reconstruct the whole of the Belgian front at that moment.

It is perfectly true that the most harmless interview in which the number of a regiment and the place where it has been engaged is indicated may lead to the unmasking of a place which headquarters has been elaborating for days.

The British know from their experiences in South Africa that an alert enemy will have a number of marksmen told off on the special task of bringing down officers. That the Germans are making a feature of this I gather from the statement of a German prisoner.

In the first place, he said, they always spotted a French officer by the way he gesticulated when giving orders to his men, and then he said they added to their bag by keeping a careful eye on the reflection thrown off by the sun from the mica transparency that covers the maps they carry in small frames.

Probably the flash of a sword has cost many an officer his life. I recollect in South Africa how the glint of the sun on a biscuit tin gave away a position in which the British had men lying in waiting for the development of a movement that might eventuate a few days later. For days they had been as happy as sandboys in their sangar until one night an empty biscuit tin was thoughtlessly thrown away outside the position. When the sun got fairly high in the heavens a pitiless rain of shells started to fall on the spot where they had been so carefully hidden away.

"They've mistaken that bloomin' biscuit tin for a 'eliograph," exclaimed a Tommy drily as he and a few companions escaped the shrapnel and sought safety on the leeward side of the spur. And he was right. The biscuit tin had given the show away.

After Elandslaagte the Scottish Highlanders had to be provided with khaki aprons because of the target their sporrans provided. I recollect my friend, G. W. Stevens, being pelted with clods of earth because he persisted in riding a white horse into the firing line, and my still older friend, Melton Prior, being obliged to cake his white Egyptian helmet with mud because it had become a target and was drawing fire not only on us but on the troops who lay behind the ant hills around us.

The question of distinctive uniform for special employment is a very serious one. For instance, the French formed a corps of office interpreters to join the British Army in the field to translate for them. They wear a bluish uniform quite distinguishable from khaki, and already one-half of the number attached to the British cavalry and infantry have been killed. No doubt, too, their uniform has led to the officer they have been assisting becoming a marked man.

It is needless risk of life to send some of the French Colonial troops into action with their white pantaloon and vivid red fez. I notice the most of the French troops coming back wounded or invalided from the front have their red kepi's enveloped in a dirty blue cover, which, however inartistic it may look, certainly does not present such a target to the enemy.

How these little things that matter are being studied in France is evident by the way that soldiers' letters and postcards are coming from the front. No address, no postmark, and if you want to send a letter to your boy fighting on the Aisne you are ready a group gathers around or some other place one hundred miles from the Battle of the Rivers, where somebody who knows will see that it reaches its destination.

MYSTERY OF THE STOMACH

"Why does not the stomach digest itself?" is a question often asked. The Journal of the American Medical Association confesses that the reason has not yet been found. There are many theories but not one of them is entirely satisfactory, and we are still unable to say more than Hunter said more than a century ago, "that these living cells remain intact under such circumstances 'because they are alive.'"

Method of Constructing a Typical Sixteen-Foot Concrete Road
The template used to strike the crown is shown against the concrete in the foreground. Back of this are the installing devices for expansion joints. They are holding steel protecting plates in position and will be removed before the concrete hardens. Beyond, men are trowelling the surface.

WOMAN REFUSES OPERATION

Tells How She Was Saved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Logansport, Ind.—"My baby was over a year old and I blessed till I was a burden to myself. I suffered from female trouble so I could not stand on my feet and I felt like millions of needles were pricking me all over. At last my doctor told me that all that would save me was an operation, but this I refused. I told my husband to get me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I would try it before I would submit to any operation. He did so and I improved right along. I can now do all my work and feeling fine.

"I hope other suffering women will try your Compound. I will recommend it to all I know."—Mrs. DANIEL D. E. DAVIS, 110 Franklin St., Logansport, Ind.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering in a like manner?

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

A NEW WISCONSIN IDEA.

Wisconsin comes forward with a new idea in dealing with prisoners held for minor offences. It originated in the desire that had found expression in some other States, Pennsylvania included, to avoid visiting the penalty upon the wife and family of an offender by depriving them of their breadwinner.

Under a new act in Wisconsin when a prisoner is sentenced for a minor infraction, instead of being committed to the workhouse or the rock pile while his family suffer for the necessities of life, he is compelled to continue at work on his usual job, if he has one, or if he has not, is put to work at some job outside found for him by the Sheriff, but is required to report at the prison for his meals and at night, while his earnings are turned over to the court and paid to his dependents during his term of imprisonment.

The innovation is said to be working successfully not only in avoiding suffering to families, but in reforming the offenders. It has been applied chiefly in cases of drunkenness, of non-support, and the familiar routine of police court cases. It has been endorsed by a president of the Wisconsin Police Chiefs' Association, and is at least worthy of consideration by those interested in improving the far from satisfactory methods of dealing with minor offenders, under which the heaviest punishment has fallen so often upon innocent victims.

Was Troubled With Choking Spells and Shortness of Breath.

When the heart becomes affected, there comes a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation, and dizziness and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

Many men and women drag along with weary step, and become worn out and haggard, when otherwise they could be strong and healthy if they would only pay some attention to the first signs of heart or nerve trouble. On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills should be given a fair trial and you will find that they will soon correct both these organs.

Mr. James Leard, Tryon, P.E.I., writes: "Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I had choking spells, and was troubled with weakness of the heart and shortness of breath. I tried three doctors but they all failed. A neighbor recommended me to try your pills, so I got a box and they helped me so much I have taken six boxes. I highly recommend them to all who are troubled with their heart and nerves. I was not able to do any work for over two years; now I can do quite a bit."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Worth Saving?

A bar of N.P. SOAP costs 15¢. It takes from four to five 5 cent cakes of other soaps to come near the same weight. That's a difference of at least 5¢. On a dollars worth of soap it amounts to from 25¢ to 40¢. And N.P. SOAP is better soap. Try it and see.

To Put On Flesh And Increase Weight

A Physician's Advice

Most thin people eat from four to six pounds of fatty-solid fat-making food every day and still do not increase in weight one ounce, while on the other hand many of the plump, chunky folks eat very lightly and keep gaining all the time. It's all bosh to say that this is the nature of the individual. It isn't Nature's way at all.

Thin folks stay thin because their powers of assimilation are defective. They just absorb enough of the food they eat to maintain life and a resemblance of health and strength. Stuffing won't help them. A dozen meals a day won't make them gain a single "extra there" pound. All the fat-producing elements of their food just stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste. What such people need is something that will prepare these fatty food elements so that their blood can absorb them and deposit them all about the body—something, too, that will multiply their red blood corpuscles and increase their blood's carrying power.

For such a condition I always recommend eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is not, as some believe, a patented drug, but is a scientific combination of six of the most effective and powerful flesh-building elements known to chemistry. It is absolutely harmless, yet wonderfully effective and a single tablet eaten with each meal often has the effect of increasing the weight of a thin man or woman from three to five pounds a week. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere on a positive guarantee of weight increase or money back.

THROWN BACK OVER YSER.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—The French War Office issued the following report last night:—

"The most notable incident of the day has been the throwing back of the enemy on the right bank of the Yser Canal. That part of the left bank which the Germans previously held has been completely evacuated.

"We have retaken to the south of Steenbeeke a small wood, which had been lost following a night attack.

"At the end of the day the enemy had shown, without success, an offensive to the south of Ypres.

"On the rest of the front there is nothing to report."

The afternoon report was as follows:—

"Yesterday, relatively a quite day on the whole front, was characterized principally by artillery combats. The Germans, however, again attempted several attacks to the north, east and south of Ypres. They were all repulsed with considerable losses.

"To sum up: All the efforts made by the Germans during the last several days have resulted only in the capture of the ruined village of Dixmude, whose isolated position on the right bank of the canal rendered its defence difficult.

"Between the Lys and Loise the pushing forward of approach works has continued along the greater part of the front.

"Upon all the remainder of the front to Lorraine and in the Vosges there was detached artillery firing and minor actions without importance."

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robt. Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia, or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

German Taimyrland Expedition Languishes in Siberian Prison

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 14.—A special wireless despatch to the Daily News from London to-day said:

"Information has reached London that the members of the Deutsche Taimyrland expedition of 1914 has been captured by the Russians and interned at Kirensk, with hundreds of other prisoners of war. The expedition was headed by Eden Zeeler, a German-American, formerly of Portland, Ore.

"He left Germany last spring for Siberia, equipped with many kegs of delicatessen, a moving picture machine, note paper and waggon loads of sundries. The objective was the mysterious peninsula of Taimyr, jutting out from the northern coast of Siberia. In July, having advanced one hundred miles on its way north through Irkutsk, the party was reported to have 'gone broke.'

"Backers of the expedition in Germany failed to respond quickly, and members of the party obtained loans from friends in Siberia. When the war began the Russian government requested the members of the party to define their status. The government then shipped them 1,000 miles north of Kirensk, which is an unpopular place of banishment. The daily allowance of each member of the expedition for food is said to be equivalent to four cents."

Russians, Days Without Food, Charge Foe With Amazing Dash

They Endure From Five to Eight Days in Vain in the Trenches Without Revealing the Slightest Loss of Spirit.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Professor Bernard Pares, the British official correspondent with the Russian army, writes another review, in which he describes the spirit pervading the Russian army. After referring to the confidence of the Russians in their artillery and their lack of respect for the rifle fire of their opponents, Professor Pares continues:

"But the most impressive thing of all is the extraordinary endurance of the men in the trenches. It is an ordinary experience for a man to be from five to eight days in a pouring rain, almost or sometimes altogether without food and then perhaps to hurry on the enemy, to fall and see half of his comrades fall, but the rest still going forward. Or perhaps he lies on the field through the night and then is carried to a hospital, to lose a limb. In spite of this, such men are not only patient and affectionate to all who do anything for them, but really cheerful, contented and often literally jovial, and in no doubt of the ultimate issue.

"The spirit of the Russian army draws everything to it, and that no one seems to feel he is living unless he is getting to the front. The talk of all those who are already at work, whether officers or men, is balanced and confident, and all the little comforts are shared up simply, as among brothers.

"All the life of Russia is streaming into the war, and never was the Russian people more visible than it is now in the Russian army."

Contrary to the general idea, Professor Pares says that the cavalry played only an insignificant part in the fighting in Galicia. He says the Ruthenian troops in the Austrian army were in a very difficult position. In several cases they fired into the air, and the attacking Russians sometimes did the same, whereupon, he says, numbers of the Ruthenians would come over to the Russians, who considered themselves at home in this part of Galicia. The Cossacks, who were preceding the army, offered little violence in this field, says Professor Pares, though sometimes they were led to adopt drastic but not necessarily violent measures in dealing with certain hostile inhabitants of the district.

"I Shall Have Served My Country," Wrote Spy About To Die in Tower of London

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 14.—Carl Hans Lody in a last letter to friends here before he was shot as a German spy in the courtyard of the Tower of London indicated that he foresaw his fate. A translation of parts of the letter, dated "The Tower, London, October 31," reads:

"My feelings run riot when I can permit myself to review the dramatic events of the last three years and what is to be the probable climax of it all. I am prepared to make a clean breast of all his trouble, but I must protect my friends in the Fatherland and avoid as much as possible humiliation for those who have been near and dear to me.

"I am in the Tower. Hourly while I am confined here an unfriendly guard paces the corridor. My counsellor is an attorney of standing, but ofttimes feels that he is trying to do his duty to his country rather than defend his client. Next week I shall know my fate, although there can be hardly a doubt as to what it is to be. I have attended to such legal matters as were necessary. But whether my wishes ever will be carried out I do not know.

"You may have an opportunity to say a word to some of those for whom I feel an interest. Ask them to judge me not harshly. When they hear of me again doubtless my body shall have been placed in concrete beneath this old tower, or my bones shall have made a pyre. But I shall have served by country. Maybe some war historian will record me among the despised class of war victims. A spiritual adviser already has been to see me. It was his presence, after that anything else, which made me realize that what your own General Sherman said of war as true. * * *

"Doubtless my demise shall be heralded as that of a spy, but I have spiritual consolation. Others have suffered and I must accept the reward of fate.

"I am still your affectionate friend,
"CARL HANS."

SPECIALIST EXPLAINS CAUSE OF STOMACH TROUBLE

VALUABLE ADVICE TO SUFFERERS.

"There are many different forms of stomach trouble," said a well-known specialist recently, "but practically all are traceable to excessive acidity and food fermentation. That is why the results obtained from the use of drugs are usually so disappointing. Admitting fermentation, and consequent acidity of the food contents to be the underlying cause of most forms of indigestion, it naturally follows that the use of a reliable material, such as pure bisurated magnesia which is so frequently prescribed by physicians, will produce better results than any known drug, or combination of drugs. Accordingly I almost invariably advise those who complain of digestive troubles to eat three disintegrated tablets (note the name carefully, as other forms are unsuitable for this purpose), from their druggist, and take from one to two teaspoonfuls of the powder, or two 5 grain compressed tablets, with a little water after meals. This immediately neutralizes the acid and stopping the fermentation, removes the cause of all the trouble, and insures normal and healthy digestion."

FRENCH SAID TO HAVE ARMY OF 6,000,000

This is the Story of Correspondent, But Perhaps He Sees Double and Estimates Accordingly.

PARIS, Nov. 14—(By mail to New York to escape censor)—The French army consists not of 3,000,000 men, but double that number. Of these 6,000,000, one-half have been under fire. The remaining 3,000,000 have not left their garrisons. Very few people in France realize that General Joseph Joffre holds this tremendous army in reserve. Every man of this 3,000,000 is under 30, and is fully trained and adequately equipped for battle, ready to march at a moment's notice.

Opposed to the French 3,000,000 that have been under fire are not 1,500,000 Germans, but 2,500,000; not thirty army corps, but fifty-six.

With half a million British troops and about 100,000 Belgians, the Allies have on the western battle front 3,000,000 men against 2,500,000 Germans. But owing to General Joffre's careful nursing of his troops the forces actually upon the firing line are roughly equal.

Of the French 3,000,000 one-half are doing the fighting, while the other half relieve them in the trenches and fill the gaps caused by casualties.

The forces are stretched over a battle front which now reaches 375 miles. About one million French troops lie between the Argonne and Alsace. Of this number the army operating in the Verdun districts totals 400,000 men. In Alsace there are 250,000 men. The remainder are in the lower Vosges passes and at various points upon the Meuse. The long line from Rheims to Arras by way of Soissons and Roye absorbs most of the balance of 2,000,000, and the full 3,000,000 are accounted for when it is stated that French troops are also co-operating with the British around La Bassee, Armentieres, and Ypres.

The strength of the French army, I have said, is six million. These figures are arrived at as follow:

The active army includes three classes under the flag, or 1,500,000. With these go the reserve of the active army, that is, men of the four preceding classes, or 2,000,000. This gives 3,500,00 men all under 28 years. In addition there are first class of the territorials (under 30), 500,000 in number; and the remaining 2,000,000 are made up of the 1914 and 1915 classes, already under the colours (about 1,000,000); colonial troops, Algerians, Moroccans, Senegalese, foreign volunteer corps (over 400,000), and the foreign legion.

These 6,000,000 could be expanded to 8,000,000 by a general call to arms, such as was resorted to for the revolutionary wars in 1793. The additional 2,000,000 men would be made up of territorials between the ages of 30 and 45.

The question still remains: "Why did General Joffre, with his tremendous resources in men, allow the Germans to sweep across Belgium and down to the very gates of Paris?

Briefly stated the answer is, that on the outbreak of the war the French concentrated mainly on the east, leaving the northern forts of Maubeauge, Lille, Laon, La Fere, and Rheims inefficiently manned.

When the Belgian army delayed the German army at Liege, General Joffre took advantage of the respite and moved an army to the valley of the Meuse and the Belgian frontier, but in the words of an official communique issued at the time the battle was "mal engage" (waged under unfavourable conditions).

General Joffre had under-estimated the German strength by about two army corps and preferred a strategical retreat to holding on and sacrificing life until adequate reinforcements came up.

The retreat involved the abandonment of the northern forts, which, owing to political reasons, never had been modernised. The mistake the French made then and which is now freely admitted, was in failing to destroy the forts because the Germans by strengthening them have been able to cling to the Aisne region for two months after their retreat from the Marne. Had the French destroyed their out-of-date forts there would not have been any battle of the Aisne.

By adopting the German tactics, by throwing huge masses of men at selected points, General Joffre might have driven the enemy from the Aisne trenches long ago, but as long as he can gain ground slowly he will not sacrifice life wholesale in the German way. As it is, the French advance here, slow as it is, would be in any case further retarded by an outbreak of typhus in the German trenches.

Similarly, General Joffre might have hurled the Germans bodily from the northern coast and West Flanders by employing big masses of men, but he is content to allow the enemy to waste his best troops in terrific onslaughts while doing no more than keeping him in check.

The general offensive of the Allies is still to come, while 3,000,000 first-class French troops still languish in garrisons.

General Joffre is the personification of patience and calmness. Nothing hurries him, nothing disturbs him. A much-quoted recent saying of his, "For the present I am just nibbling at them," means that he has not yet delivered his general attack. It will come when the Germans are thoroughly demoralised by their appalling losses and when Russia is really in a position to deliver her general attack on the Kaiser's eastern frontier.

The French military authorities are satisfied with the results of the first three months of the war, because, although northern France has been laid in ruins, the Germans have achieved none of their important strategical points.

"KAISER WILLIE'S PRAYER."

Wha, just because it pleased Thyself,
Has made the German nation swell
Wi' pride an' glory,
An' no' for a' the guid or ill
They've done afore Thee.

If twa-three jealous buddies seek
To prove that I'm never meek,
Ye're no to listen when they speak;
Ye ken I'm humble,
At times the best o' us are weak,
So let them grumble.

But, Lord, it's hard to understand
The reason folk in every land
Should think each chosen German band
Will bring them evil;
Their answers to the least command
Are maist unceevil.

Lord, help my boats that lie so neat
In what I thocht a safe retreat;
For, mind, I'll blame Ye if I'm beat;
Remember me thing—
Thae deevils in the British Fleet
Are feart o' naething.

Confound the French and Belgians, too,
Their fan'ts are neither sma' nor few;
The fearsome Russian hordes subdue
Wi' castigation;
And d——n that double-dealing crew,
The British nation.

Are your hands chapped, cracked or sore? Have you "cold sores" which open and bleed when the skin is drawn tight? Have you an cold sore, fever blister, chilblains, or a "sore" place, which at times makes it agony for you to go about your household duties? If so, Zam-Buk will give you relief, and will heal the blood-damaged skin. Ancient sore platters at night, Zam-Buk's rich healing ointment will sink into the wounds, end the smarting, and will heal quickly.

Mrs. Tellin, of Portland, says: "My hands were so sore and cracked that it was agony to put them near water. When I did so they would bleed and burn terribly. I could get no relief from anything I put on them until I tried Zam-Buk, and in a remarkably short time all the trouble departed. In short, Zam-Buk cured me completely, and I can highly recommend it to any sufferer from chapped hands."

HAZARD OF TRAVELLING IN "MINED" ROUTES

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Bennett Digby, an American correspondent, who reached London from Petrograd by way of Finland, Lapland, Sweden, Norway, and the North Sea, says:

"On my train from Petrograd were twenty-one British sailors going home. They formed the crew of the fifty-ninth of the sixty British merchant ships which have taken refuge at Petrograd. Their boat, the Marsten Moor, narrowly escaped capture at the bombardment of Libau.

"The route from Karungi is south across Sweden, west to Christiania, in Norway, and thence north-west to Bergen. I took the opportunity of questioning Swedes of various social grades on their war sympathies. These are now becoming markedly pro-British, but there is no change in the Swedish distrust and fear of Russia. Bergen harbour was never busy before. It is crowded with shipping and the Norwegian Royal mail steamers are leaving daily, not only for Newcastle, but for Hamburg.

"The voyage that ensued was exciting. No secret was made of the hazard of floating mines. Lifebelts were laid on every passenger's bed and the lifeboats were swung out, uncovered, and ready for immediate launching, well stocked with food and water. We passed southward down the coast all day and then laid a course for two nights and a day to the north-east.

"The first night out a Swedish mail steamer struck a drifting mine a few miles astern of us, was blown up, and sank with the loss of several lives. The second night was marked by a reluctance on the part of our crew and passengers to take walks further forward than amidships. Most of them slept with the cabin doors open and with clothes on.

"That night the Norwegian grain steamer Pluto, bound from London to Christiania, struck a floating mine right on the course we had taken on the previous day, and sank in a few minutes. We were relieved when we caught sight of the Scottish coast in the morning and signalled our approach, which was dead slow, to the mouth of the River Tyne.

"We were boarded outside by Admiralty pilots, who ordered every passenger below. There was a rigorous examination of every person before he was allowed to land. Cameras carried by two or three of the passengers were confiscated."

GERMAN POLES COMPLAIN.

Object to Way in Which They Are Being Used in the War.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—A Times despatch from Copenhagen says:

"Advices from Posen indicate that there is much dissatisfaction among the Poles in the eastern provinces of Germany. The Poles complain that the Germans are neglecting the frontier because most of the inhabitants are Slavs. They declare that the Germans themselves are laying the frontier to waste in order to delay the Russians. They protest that Poles are put in the front of the battle line as cannon fodder. The Germans, on the other hand, accuse the Poles of helping the Russians by espionage.

"The Germans are concentrating great armies at Thorn, Posen, and Breslau and plan to fight desperately to prevent the Russian occupation of the important part of Silesia and Posen. Only the utmost need will persuade the Germans to send any troops back to the western front at present."

STREET RAILWAY MEN LINE UP FOR HOME GUARD

Employees of Radial Railway and Light and Power Companies Form a Company for New Association

GREAT ENTHUSIASM

An enthusiastic meeting of the employees of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company and the Peterborough Light and Power Co. was held in the street car barns at midnight on Saturday and a company organized to add to the strength of the Peterborough Rifle Association. As a result over fifty of the most active and able-bodied men in the City have signed the roll as an indication of their willingness not only to forward to the utmost of their power the plans for home defence, but also to do their full duty as British subjects should further necessity arise in maintaining the integrity of the Empire at this and all other times. The entire Street Railway Employees Union is incorporated in this Company, and that fact is a further vindication of the attitude of organized labour toward those who have undertaken to shatter the institutions of that Empire which stands for the truest liberty in the civilized world.

Following are those who have joined:

J. F. Collins, J. C. Drummond, R. H. Guthrie, W. Corwell, Geo. Hetherington, P. McGrath, A. J. Burton, F. Roseborough, M. Meade, Geo. Eason, J. O. Stacey, J. Dunsley, S. Donoughue, H. Smith, A. This year's hunt was one of the most successful ever held. There were thirteen in the party and thirteen deer and a large moose were shot. Mr. J. M. Brooks had the honour of shooting the only moose seen. The weather the first week was the most favourable for the hunt. Good sleighing prevails in the Parry Sound district, over a foot of snow having fallen.

Those comprising the party were Messrs. Charles Gladman (capt.), Martin McFadden, C. Curtis, Albert Curtis, Arthur Carpenter, Archie Laing, Bert Lillie, Harry Evans, Walter Evans, Larry Steele, Sam Ray, J. M. Brooks and B. Wilson (chef.)

ACTIVITY ALONG AISNE AND ALSO IN ARGONNE

Fighting Along Coast is Confined to Cannonading While Germans Try Their Luck Further South---Fail in a Movement to Cross Aisne at Vailly.

Special to The Examiner.

PARIS, France, November 17.—With the fighting from Nieuport, through Dixmunde and on to Ypres almost entirely confined to cannonading, the German and and the allied armies on the Aisne and in the Argonne are showing greater activity.

The official communication issued to-day reports an attempt of the Germans to cross the Aisne near Valley. In the Argonne the German trenches were blown up by mines planted by the French troops.

The cannonading in Flanders has become more violent, the statement declares.

Despite repeated repulses the Germans have continued the attacks about Ypres and south of Bixschoote. All the assaults have failed and the allied line is held at all points. The attempt of the Germans to cross the Aisne near Valley was also defeated.

RAIN FILLED TRENCHES AWFUL

"The terrible weather of the last few days is playing havoc with the Germans in the trenches in the low land of Flanders. A great number have been seriously ill from exposure and some have died from that cause. The men are being relieved in the trenches far more frequently than formerly, but this has not prevented many cases of inflammation of the lungs. Several Several cases of sudden madness also have occurred.

"In order to revive the drooping spirits of the Germans the rumour has been spread that their comrades have taken Calais.

"From several sources the news reaches me of a hopeless breakdown in the German ambulance department in the face of the tremendous work thrown upon it during the last few weeks by the enormous losses in Flanders. In the lines wounded men are being left for inordinately long periods, and some have died before assistanee could reach them, while large numbers have died on the way to Belgian towns, which are still overfull of the wounded."

PARIS, November 17.—The Germans have been washed out of their trenches at many points in the inundated section about Dixmude and on toward the coast. Many have been drowned. Commands cut off by the waters have been wiped out by the allied artillery fire. An artillery battle of great ferocity is reported in the official communique, between Armentieres and Labasse. Rheims faces another fierce bombardment, as the German attack in that section developes. Shells have already fallen in the town.

Any extended movement of troops or guns is now practically impossible in Flanders.

LONDON, November 17.—The interment of Lord Roberts will take place at St. Paul's. Lord Kitchener, Secretary for War, Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, and other Cabinet Ministers, as well as members of both Houses of Parliament, will attend the funeral services.

LONDON, November 17.—A Pretoria despatch to the Reuter Telegraph Co., states that General Christian Rudolf De Wet, who headed the recent rebellion, has been wounded in the head. De Wet's followers are said to be much dejected. They are also reported to be poorly armed and lack ammunition.

Despatches states that the German auxiliary cruiser Berlin has appeared at Trondjem, a seaport of Norway. There are indications that she is endeavouring to escape from the North Sea to act as a commerce raider. The Berlin is a small cruiser of the Bremen and Leipsic type.

FINE SEND-OFF FOR VOLUNTEERS FROM LAKEFIELD

Five More Leave for Kingston This Morning and Are Presented With $5 Each by Village Council

CHEERED BY CROWD

Lakefield gave an enthusiastic send-off to five more volunteers for the second Canadian continent, who left for Kingston this morning. The five are Reginald Murdoff, Roy Robinson and Fred Baldson of Lakefield, Norman Hurl of Smith, and Fred Hall of Smith and they are attached to the 46th Regiment of Port Hope. All five are Canadian born.

Lakefield turned out to say goodbye to the quintette. The procession to the Station was headed by the Lakefield Band, playing patriotic airs. The Lakefield Company of the 46th and the Cadets of the Lakefield Preparatory School were in the parade, and the Reeve and Council were on hand to extend the official greetings on behalf of the citizens, and to present each of the volunteers with $5. As the train pulled out the Band played "Auld Lang Syne."

Lecture On Dr. Grenfell's Work

Given at Epworth League Meeting by Rev. Mr. Peever Last Evening

An illustrated lecture was the feature of the Epworth League meeting at George Street Church last evening. The subject concerned conditions in Labrador and Newfoundland, and the work of Dr. Grenfell in that district. The splendid lecture was heard by a goodly number of people, and their appreciation of it was shown by the hearty vote f thanks given to Mr. Peever, who gave the address. During the evening Miss Kemp and Mr. Browne rendered a duet in their usual pleasing style.

P. C. Kidd On Deck Again

Ex-Chief of Brampton Begins Duties as Constable on Local Force

P. C. Kidd, who about three years ago was connected with the local Police Force, is again a member of the Peterborough department. He commenced his duties this morning, his appointment to the local force having already been endorsed by the Police Commissioners. When he left Peterborough a couple of years ago he went to take the position of Chief of Police at Brampton, but only recently he resigned his position there to come back to the local force. P. C. Kidd will be remembered here on account of his unusual physique, he being well over six feet in height and proportionately broad. As already noted in the Examiner, the citizens of Brampton petitioned the Council not to accept his resignation, and when he left the town presented him with a gold watch and Mrs. Kidd with a wrist watch.

WHOLE NORTH SEA IS NOW A MILITARY FIELD

Premier Asquith Makes Important Announcement in the House To-day--Vessels Which Enter North Sea Will Do So at Their Own Risk From Mines.

Examiner Special:

LONDON, November 17.—The entire North Sea is now a military area, Premier Asquith announced in the House of Commons to-day. This means that all vessels entering the North Sea will do so at their own risk of mines and will be subject to orders and instructions of the Admiralty.

LONDON, November 17.—High tribute is paid to the valour of the Prussian Guards to-day in another eyewitness's story from the front issued by the war bureau. The report which is under the date of November 13th, vividly describes the German Guard corps' desperate but unsuccessful attempt to capture Ypres on the 11th, and break through towards the coast.

"Fighting at close quarters," the eyewitness says, "the Germans succeeded in holding our front trenches in three places, after having penetrated our lines and being driven back. We mined one of our trenches on the right, and then abandoned it. When the Germans occupied the trench the charge was exploded ,and several men were blown to atoms. The Guards Corps admittedly retains the reputation for courage and contempt of death they earned in 1870." The story cites several exploits of German spies wearing British and French uniforms. "On one occasion," it is stated, "a German disguised as a British staff officer walked along the line of our trenches, saying, 'The situation looks serious.' A general retirement was ordered. His identity was discovered too late to prevent th retirement from the trenches." A diary found on a German soldier is quoted as reflecting on the leadership of the Germans and indicating that the enemy is running short of food supplies. "Our leadership is really scandalous. The enormous losses on our side are partly from our own fire for our leaders know the location of neither our position or the enemy's. In the evening our only food is a cup of rice and one third of an apple per man. Such war is too awful. The English shoot like mad. If no reinforcements come we must retire."

INDIAN CAVALRY "CRAZY WITH PRIDE"

MARSEILLES, November 16.—At last the cavalry division of the Indian expeditionary force has arrived, and they chose a good moment for their arrival. After long spells of rain, cold, mist, and the odious wind, called mistral, there dawned a glorious Riviera day, bright and balmy and blue. The day was well chosen for the procession through the town to the camp.

Twelve transports came in yesterday and this morning, and there was a splendidly imposing procession through the chief thoroughfares which was witnessed by the natives in large numbers. The Indians are crazy with pride at having been found worthy to come to the help of the Empire.

LONDON, November 17.—Wealthy people and folks drawing fair salaries will be hit hard by the war, according to the announcement of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Lloyd George, to-day in the House of Commons. He said it was necessary to at once double the income tax to meet deficits caused by the war. Persons with incomes of more than eight hundred already pay from 3 3-4 per cent. to 8 per cent. on it, but they will hereafter pay double that.

CZAR GETS LEMBERG ART TREASURES

BERLIN, November 16.—The Kreuzzeitung prints the following concerning the National Museum at Lemberg:—"According to reports in the Polish newspapers the Russians have taken from the National Museum at Lemberg: 1,034 oil paintings, 17,000 coins, 142,000 books, 5,300 holographs, 28,000 copper plate engravings, 4,300 medals, 5,000 autographs 1,700 documents."

These together with Polish relics have been transported to Petrograd, according to information received by the Kreuzzeitung.

Remanded On Serious Charge

Joseph Tobin, a Local Young Man, Advised to Engage Counsel by Magistrate

A local young man was charged in police court this morning with procuring or attempting to procure for illegal and immoral purposes a young girl of this city. Crown Attorney Hilton conducted the case for the Crown, while the prisoner was unrepresented by counsel. This morning, if he had been allowed, he might have pleaded "guilty" to the charge against him, which is punishable by five years' imprisonment, but the Magistrate advised him to engage counsel, and at the request of the Crown the case was adjourned for a week.

This is the third case of this nature to come before Magistrate Dumble in the last few weeks. The first was dismissed, the second charge was withdrawn, but the police claim to "have the goods" without any mistake in this charge.

Promotion For Local Young Man

Mr. Wilbert Taylor, who has been on the staff of the local Dominion Express Office for the past six years, left last night for Ottawa, where he has been promoted to the position of cashier in the down town office of the company. Prior to his departure, he was presented with a pair of gold cuff links and a tie pin. Mr. A. G. Carruthers read an address, extending congratulations to Mr. Taylor on his well-deserved promotion, but also expressing regret at his removal from City. The presentation was made by Mr. Gerald Stenton, and the recipient made a suitable reply.

Mr Taylor entered the local office six years ago as a junior clerk, and has made steady progress, until now he assumes a responsible position at the capital.

A GERMAN TRICK.

The Literary Digest has become indigestable to Canadians. It is possible, probable and even certain, that German bribe money has made it an organ for the spread of German culture. While it not out and out pro-German, its German bias is all the more dangerous. Heretofore the Literary Digest has been able to commend itself as a fine summary of the best current news comment and journalistic opinion. But it has been evidently sold to German culture. Under German control the Digest is making extraordinary efforts to increase its circulation, by lavish advertising, by tempting offers of books, etc., as prizes, so that its influence in creating sympathy with German sentiments on this continent will be enlarged. The function of the Digest is to note and tabulate the most striking articles of the journalistic and periodic press. It is natural that much space should be given to articles on the present war, but when the Digest, under its German regime, almost exclusively confines its quotations to those from articles—lying articles, necessarily—glorifying the exploits of German arms and German chivalry and German "culture," its usefulness from a Canadian point of view ends. Any Canadian buying a copy is buying a subsidized organ of mendacity and hostility to British and Imperial ideals and interests. He may buy one number from curiosity, but if he buys others he is acting traitorously to the Empire in giving aid and comfort to the enemy, for the object of circulating the Digest in Canada is to poison the minds of Canadians, infect them with the vision of German ideas, in the promotion of German interests. While there may not be much danger that Canadian loyalty will be undermined by concentrated and carefully edited German lying, we need not help the process and become a party to it. We may regard German prostitution of the Digest as another evidence of the ingrained crookedness of German methods—a part of its system of lying and spying, sailing under false colours, laying mines under the flag of a neutral country, using false uniforms, prostituting the red cross device, abusing the white flag, and using every sort of trick, device, scheme, plan, plot and means, of deception in keeping with the crowning perfidy that precipitated this war—by cynical disregard of treaty obligations, by outrage of the neutrality of Belgium, and ruthless wasting of its territory.

ANOTHER CHANCE.

We have many ways of giving help in respect of the conditions created by the war; and while we have not used these ways to the full, another may be suggested, that will not only prove a help to others, but help ourselves at the same time. In another place on this page is printed an article from the Christian Science Monitor, suggesting that the funds annually lavished in Christmas giving, be diverted to funds for the relief of the wounded, suffering and destitute, the hopeless, the hungry, the naked—the ghastly handiwork of war. While we may not all agree with Christian Science doctrine, we can all and each make Christian science an art — the only real value of our Christian knowledge and sentiment.

"Christmas giving had a beautifully significant origin—it typified the great Gift to man, and involved a practical symbolism of the true spirit of Christianity. But as time went on the spirit degenerated and the practice shared in the degeneration. In these modern days when the spirit of commercialism—the spirit of barter and exchange, of giving to get—has largely gained the upper hand, Christmas giving has been commercialised; and, except in rare cases, has become a rivalry, in the matter of value, and a false standard of honour in the matter of return of gifts.

This is a denial of the spiritual and sentimental significance of Christmas gifts. So much has this spirit gained dominance that many persons regard the coming of Christmas with dread instead of delight; for it means a heavy drain on domestic financial resources, to meet the rivalry into which Christmas gift-giving has very largely degenerated. While this does not apply to children, to whom Christmas looms as a star and not a cloud, children may be taught a spiritual lesson in a new way, by a little parental preaching of the essence of Christianity—sacrifice—the subduing of human selfishness to the good of others. When the child is made to understand, that the foregoing of a Christmas gift, will give cheer and comfort, even in the form of a crust to some starving neglected child made destitute by the war, the delighted child will see the utility and beauty of sacrifice, and learn the lesson that we all are learning, and many of us have learned,—in the sacrifice of our homes, our families, our comforts, and even our lives, to the cause of Empire. This means, of course, the practical application of the spirit of Christianity in the interests of a nation and empire, which stands for, and is the greatest exponent of, the principles of Christianity upon which its civilization is founded.

One need not urge this form of manifestation of Christmas giving; its appeal is so conspicuous that it suggests itself to all good Christians. It is said that it is the intention of the Sunday school authorities of the George Street Methodist Church to vary the mode of its Christmas giving. All gifts that in other years had been given to children, will be devoted to a consignment of gifts to Belgian children. One can fancy the delight with which the children of the Sunday school will hail this chance to make a sacrifice. And we adults can do likewise, devote the money we annually squander in the purchase of costly gifts—generally sent to those who do not need them—and devote it to the relief of the distress, deprivation and cruel suffering the war brings. He—the Lord of Christmas—who had not where to lay his head, will sympathise with, approve and bless, the spirit of those who relieve those who have where not to lay their heads—the evicted and homeless, and starving, half-clad Belgian women and children; the wounded soldier lying in the sleet drenched trenches, and all who are desolate and oppressed on account of the war. If every citizen, if every Sunday school, if every church membership, would take this view of the celebration of Christmas of 1914, never since Peterborough was an inhabited place, will there have been a nobler observance of the Birthday of the Christ whose mission meant self-sacrifice in the name of the highest manifestation of Divine love and pity, and the highest exaltation of humanity.

A CONTAGIOUS THRILL.

As individuals we are isolated links of a chain, but when we become links in a chain that is drawn in one direction we become elements of real and effective strength. There used to be a familiar diversion in the High School laboratory, when the science master stuck two slabs of metal into an acid and got a whole string of boys and girls to join hands in a circuit. The more people there were in the circuit the greater the fun. With only one or two the shock seemed to hurt. With a large number it made everybody happy. It's the same way with buying goods made in your own country. At first it may seem an awkward thing to do. But as soon as a few other people get into it, and these few get each a few more into the swing and the good cheer of the movement, there begins to be a general feeling of elation that becomes contagious. Everybody catches it. Everybody is delighted. There is about this made-in-Canada movement the exhilaration that comes from being part of a great revival of home interest. Looking at it individually no man sees much in it. Looking at this and that purchase as part of a grand general movement every individual act along that line gets a snap and a determination about it that creates its own desire for more. Once this made-in-Canada movement gets going, a man or woman might as well be out of the world as out of the fashion. And the joy comes from being one of a large number engaged in the same thing.

WILL SERVE HIS COUNTRY EVEN IN DEATH.

The many who are to-day mourning the death of Lord Roberts have at any rate one consolation. Death came to him as he would have it come. He met it while at work in the service of his country, and the guns of the unconquerable army he loved so well boomed his requiem. His life was devoted to his King and country. To the very last he kept himself fit by austerious living and unremitting work, and to the very last work for the welfare of his country drew forth the best that was in him.

In death as well as in life he will serve his country well. All will regret his passing—all will regret that he did not live to see the outcome of the greatest of wars. But his death will set people by the million reading the story of his career. they will be carried back to the time of the Indian Mutiny. They will be transported in imagination to Afghanistan, to Abyssinia, and to South Africa. Always they will read of deeds and achievements that will stir the pride of all who bear the name of British and that will inspire them to the limit of their heroism, self-sacrifice and endurance.—Montreal Herald Telegraph.

"THE COSSACKS ARE COMING"

Among the Russian forces which are bearing such a notable part in the eastern theatre of the war there is no element which possesses a more picturesque interest than the Cossacks. Some of us have thought of the Cossack only as a relentless tool of a despotic government always ready for deeds of rapine and violence. Some of us know him from Tolstoi's romances as fierce and daring indeed, but as decidedly human, but to most of us the Cossack is something almost legendary in his mystery and elusiveness.

The Cossacks are usually supposed to be of mixed Caucasian and Tartar race but as a matter of fact they are all of the same stock and in different parts of Russia the Cossack type has various modifications. They first appear in history about the thirteenth century. Maurice Baring tells us that when the Tartars invaded Russia they pushed down to the south leaving a tract of deserted land between them and the Kingdom of Moscow. Herer a colony of wanderers and adventurers gradually gathered who lived a wild life, sometimes trading, sometimes hunting and almost always fighting. The name Cossack, which was given to them is said to be from the Turkish meaning freebooter.

The Cossacks showed themselves as splendid guerilla fighters. They at first often took service under foreign kings, but later became defenders of the Russian and Orthodoxy against the Poles. It was a Cossack who, in the reign of Ivan the Terrible, discovered Siberia, and with a tiny band of followers took possession of the new Empire for the Czar.

All Cossacks are liable for military service from the age of eighteen to fifty. They provide their own horses and are probably the best horsemen in the world. They live in villages of their own. The Cossack stanitza or village is usually a remote group of cottages clustering around a Church, a school, a vodka shop and a large open square for the practice of horsemanship. The Villages, it is said, are not conspicuous for tidiness but the horses are scrupulously clean. A little agriculture is carried on. They pay no taxes, their military services being taken as an equivalent.

Besides their wonderful horsemanship the Cossacks are noted for unquestioning obedience in the commands of their officers which they regard as the sacred commands of the Czar. Mr. Baring when in Manchura lived all the time iwth the Siberian Cossacks. He says that he found them a "delightful race of people, good-natured, long-suffering, and ingenious. They often told lies a transparent childish manner. They quarrelled and abused each other, but never came to blows. They were extraordinarily ingenious in "finding food and making themselves and others comfortable by building houses and making stores out of insufficient means."

In one Russian city during the revolution a fear crazed mob rushed up to the Cossacks calling: "Here we are! Strike us down!" The Cossacks answered: "Why do you taunt us? We also are men!" and they did not cut down a single man. Cossacks, when they have been plied with vodka (prohibited in this war) have been guilty of excesses, but their courage, intelligence and innate good-nature has led Holbrook Jackson to regard them as "splendid raw material for the development of good citizens." They would not know what "kultur" meant—but probably are none the worse for that.—Montreal-Herald Telegraph.

A CANADIAN NAVY.

Sir Wilfred Laurier proposed at about the time Australia was putting together a navy of her own that Canada should have one. Canada is more populous, richer, quite as loyal to Great Britain, and quite as exposed to attacks from the sea as the island commonwealth.

It was the French, upon whom Sir Wilfred depended largely for his parliamentary majorities, who blocked his plan. When Borden became Premier he proposed the gift to Great Britain of three battleships. Sir Wilfred proposed as a substitute his original plan of a Canadian naval unit, with bases at Halifax and Vancouver, officered and manned and supported by Canadians. The Canadian Parliament elected to adopt neither plan. Neither party leader could hold his following intact for a proposition involving so great an increase in the budget.

The Canadians have given liberally of men and supplies to the Allies' cause, but they cannot give ships. An army may be recruited and trained and disciplined in months: it takes years to build a navy. Had Canada done as Australia did, the Canadians might conceivably have done with Dresden and Leipsig what the Australians did with the Emden. They would also have saved themselves some anxious moments concerning their ports.

BRITISH HELP RUSSIA.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The latest instance of co-operation between the Allies, according to a well-informed American, who got here yesterday from the war zone, is the sending of experienced British officers to Russia to assist in meeting developments in the Eastern campaign.

Russia is strong in men, but weak in tacticians—"book warriors." She discovered this quickly when pitted against von Hindenburg in East Prussia, and with the energy and enterprise which has characterised her in this war, she set about remedying it.

Britain, while none too well provided with officers for the fighting line and feeling the pinch keenly in supplying the many vacant places caused by her heavy casualty list, has a fair supply of experienced leaders, who, while past the age limit permitting their inclusion in the active fighting contingent, are valuable in war councils. It is understood that it is from these that officers sent to Russia were largely selected.

According to the information reaching here yesterday, they were despatched to Russia late in October, and arrived at Russian headquarters last week.

Search For Survivors Fails.

VALPARAISO, Chile, Nov. 17.—The Chilean hospital ship Valdivia, which has been searching the seas for possible survivors of the British cruisers lost in the engagement with the German squadron off the Chilean coast on Nov. 1, arrived yesterday at Talcahuana and reports her search entirely without success. She found nothing in the way of wreckage or boats from the British vessels. The Chilean Admiralty announces that its search is now over.

Deer or Wireless?

FARMINGTON, Me., Nov. 17.—The Duke of Montpensier, a brother of the Orleans pretender to the French throne, passed through here late Sunday night, ostensibly bound for a hunting trip in the Maine woods.

But the rumor in current that he is on a search for the German wireless station supposed to be secreted somewhere in the forests of this state.

Remember the splendid remark of the clubman, who was dragged to the altar. "Marriages," he said, "are made in Heaven. Don't blame me, boys."

MAY HAVE "CAREER"

What charm there is to most girls in the word "career". There are those who place it above everything which is supposed to be desirable, and work and dream of the time when there may be fairly launched on that enviable course—their chosen career, says the Christian Science Monitor.

Careers are not nearly so unusual or impossible as they have been supposed to be, for it is very possible for every girl who desires, to have a "career." It may not be her ideal of being an opera singer or a famous painter, of which she may have dreamed when she was a child, but if she has found that either inclination or duty are in another direction and she has formed a high and noble object as a goal to work for, she has her "career". It may be of her own choice.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

COFFROTH, WORLD'S MOST FAMOUS PROMOTER, PULLED GREATEST LEMON IN PUGILISM

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 14.—"Yes, it's a great game," said James Coffroth, greatest sporting promoter in the world. "It has its humour and its tragedy as well."

"One of the most humourous as well as most tragic affairs that ever happened during my 18 years' experience in the boxing game was the famous fiasco that the Burns-Squires bout developed into.

"In my time I promoted something like 50 championship boxing contests, some of which the public and the press were kind enough to declare classics. But I think the greatest lemon that I or anyone else ever pulled was this Burns-Squires match. And it was no fault of mine.

"After Jim Jeffries retired as the undefeated heavyweight champion of the world and Tommy Burns was, after a series of elimination contests, given Jeffries' title, the problem arose as to who would be a fit opponent for the stocky Canadian.

"Finally Bill Squires was produced. The great Squires, he was called—undefeated champion of Australia who had knocked out something like 32 men. Now any man who can knock out 32 men, even if they be dubs, is to be reckoned with. Therefore when Squires landed in San Francisco in 1907 for his Fourth of July battle with Tommy Burns he was hailed by the press as something of a pugilistic colossus.

"And Squires, I must admit, carried the pose well. During his training he fooled all the sporting experts, myself included. His muscular development was marvelous and the way he handled himself when he worked was truly remarkable.

"The newspapers boosted the contest as the greatest battle in the history of the ring. I made the greatest preparations in the way of arrangements that were ever put over for a bout. There was the keenest kind of bidding for the privilege of the motion pictures for because of the advertising the papers had given the fight and also because it loomed as the greatest proposition that had confronted the sporting world, the movies promised to have an unprecedent run.

"Besides, the three greatest men of pugilism—Champion, Burns, Challenger Squires, and Jeffries, who was going to referee —were to be assembled in the ring at one time!

"Came then the contest. The crowd could scarcely wait through the preliminary matches. There was constant calmouring for Squires. When the burly Australian finally stepped through the ropes he was given a tremendous ovation. Men flung their hats in the air and literally went wild, for was not this invincible leviathan of sportdom—the man who had knocked out 32 men?

"After the introduction came the instructions and then the clang of the gong. The men stepped to the middle of the ring, Burns grim and determined. I glanced down for an instant to light a cigarette and when I looked up the fight was over! Sprawled on the clean white mat lay the unconscious, invincible Squires, the man who had knocked out 32 men—and the referee was tolling off the fatal seconds that sent him to fistic oblivion. A single punch had shown Bill Squires to be a lemon."

FAST BASKET BALL GAME AT THE Y. M. C. A.

Another fast basket ball game took place last night in the Y. Gymnasium between Cressmans and the Junior Business Men. During the first half the game was nip and tuck all the way, the half ending with the score 8-6 in favour of Cressmans. About three minutes after the whistle had blown for the start of the second period, Ford Turner met with an accident which retired him for the rest of the game. Sisson took his place and showed his ability to fill an emergency in grand style.

Early in the second half Cressmans began to increase their lead, and they were never stopped. Hunter, the new recruit on the Cressman aggregation, showed his ability, not only as a good defence man, but also as having an eye for the basket. He got down the floor and succeeded in scoring four points. Fred Cressman was again high man for his team, scoring 8 points, while Rayner came second with 6. For the Business M.—Johnson was the leader with 3 baskets and one foul to his credit. Cranfield and Metherall both played their position well, but could not seem to locate the basket.

There should be a fast game on Wednesday night, when Ross Dobbin's veteran aggregation meets the Excelsiors. Both of these teams won their first games by good margins, and they are both looked upon as runners-up for first place. What the Excelsiors lack in experience and weight they make up for in speed, while the Veterans have both experience and weight. All who are interested in this greatest indoor game should come out on Wednesday night. Game starts at 9 o'clock. Admission free. Ladies cordially invited.

Junior Business Men—Metherall, r.f.; Cranfield, l.f.; Johnson, c.; F. Turner-C. Sisson, r.g.; M. Turner, l.g.

Time, 10 and 15 minutes.

Referee, Carson.

Olympic Games May Be Held In United States

PARIS, Nov. 16—The Olympic games in 1916 may take place in the United States. Baron Pierre de Coubertin, president of the International Committee, says if any circumstances, material or sentimental, prevent their being held in Europe in 1916, they cannot be postponed until 1920 as suggested, but that they might be held in the U.S.

The war, Baron de Coubertin thinks, will not have anything more than a brief, temporary effect upon sport in France. Individual records will suffer, because such stars as Jean Bouin, the great runner, have fallen victims to the great holocaust; others no doubt will follow, and the younger element will not reach their highest form for three years or more, but eventually, the Baron thinks the war will prove to have been an additional incentive to physical training.

SEVEN DUTCHMEN KILLED WHILE EXAMINING MINE

LONDON, Nov. 16.—A mine washed ashore near West-Capelle, Holland, exploded to-day while being examined, killing three naval officers, one civilian and three sailors. This information was contained in an announcement made by the Dutch Ministry of Marine and cabled from Amsterdam to Reuter's Telegram Company.

Several mines had been taken to pieces successfully before the accident occurred. Between thirty and forty mines were seen in the Schedlt near Flushing yesterday. Some were destroyed; the Dutch officials say, by torpedo boats and others were washed ashore.

NEW LEAGUE UNDER WAY

Ottawa Professionals Are Asked to Desert the N. H. A.

OTTAWA, Nov. 16.—An important hockey conference was held here this afternoon. Something mysterious surrounded the meeting, and none of the Ottawa directors will discuss what occurred, but it is known for a fact that the Senators were invited to desert the National Hockey Association and join the proposed new league, which the Nationals, Art Ross and others are endeavouring to organize.

J. A. Caron, president of the Nationals, accompanied by E. H. Cushing and J. McKenna, of Montreal, arrived at noon, and were closeted for an hour or so it the Chateau Laurier with President McGee, Secretary Rosenthal and Directors Baskerville, Butler, Bate and Ahearn, of the Ottawas. The Montrealers left on the 3:35 train for Montreal. They also declined to make any statement. Every effort was made to have their visit kept secret.

It is said, however, that Mr. Caron informed the Ottawas that he had signed practically all of the Canadien club. He is said to have options on the services of Pitre, Lalonde, Dubeau, Laviolette, and, in fact, all the Canadiens except Goalkeeper Vizina. Mr. Cushing, it is alleged, has contracts with Art Ross, Harry Myland, Gordon Roberts and the Cleghorn brothers, of the Wanderers. Some of the Toronto and Quebec puck chasers are also said to be under contract with the new league promoters. Furthermore, it was stated that the Nationals and the new club had been positively assured that they would be accommodated in the Montreal Arena should their efforts to form a league prove successful. They endeavoured to point out that it would be to the advantage of the Ottawas to come into the fold. They were assured that they would be allowed to retain all their present players, and that some of the coast stars, including Fred Taylor, would be placed on their list.

The matter was discussed at length, and the Ottawas brought back word that they would not entertain any thought of deserting the old league. One of their directors admitted this much to-night, and said that they would stick by Wanderers, Canadiens and Quebec, no matter what it cost them. He said that they advised Mr. Caron to purchase a franchise, as they would like to have the Nationals in the league, and they appear determined to break in. Some of the Ottawa directors are anxious to get out of hockey, and it is a fact that an offer was made for their franchise last Saturday, but whether it came from the Nationals or another party is unknown. In any event, they will stick by the National Hockey Association.

It is understood that the Nationals will send men to Quebec to interview some of the hockey magnates there. The Ottawas think that Nationals will eventually get into the league.

WILL PLAY OFF IN HAMILTON

Argos and Tigers to Settle Big Four Championship

TORONTO, Nov. 17.—Argonauts and Hamilton Tigers will play off their tie for the championship of the Big Four in Hamilton on Saturay.

According to the arrangements made "Bob" Isbister of the Tigers came to Toronto yesterday, and he and Leslie Ferguson of the Argonauts went to the office of Mr. Joseph Wright, the president of the Canadian Football Union, to toss for choice of grounds.

Mr. Isbister, the Tigers' representative, probably remembering how 'Varsity won the toss in the play-off with McGill, called "tails" as the coin was thrown in the air by Mr. Wright, and "tails" it came.

The Argonauts are sorry that their supporters will not be able to see the play-off at Rosedale grounds, but they will make arrangements with the railways for the running of a special train to and from Hamilton.

AN IRISH REGIMENT SUFFERED HEAVILY

To-night's casualty list is one of the largest since the war began, containing as it does 997 men reported from the base on 17th September. Of these 600 were missing. The Royal Munster Fusiliers have 662 of that total. In the first fortnight of September heavy losses in killed and wounded of this regiment were reported, presumably in the retreat from Belgium. Altogether there must have been a very small number left of the whole battalion. The story which these figures cover must be one of the most dramatic of the war, but, although the Munsters have been mentioned for brave work in many of the soldiers' letters published, there has been no story, I believe, of the events that led to the disaster now indicated. The names of the men show that it was a true Irish regiment, gathered largely in Munster. There are seventeen Murphys, ten McCarthys, nine O'Connors, nine O'Briens, seven O'Sheas, eight Sullivans, and seven Donovans.

The missing Lancashire Fusiliers complete the total number. The extent of the missing in both regiments shows that they are not "missing" in the ordinary sense of being wounded and lost, and the relatives may have good hopes that the great majority of them are among the British prisoners in Germany. Possibly some of them have already been recognised in bearded disguise in the German photographs published in the press. —Manchester Guardian.

Long Battle Like Sebastopol Siege

Rival Trenches in Forest of Argonne Are Close Together

PARIS, Nov. 16.—A semi-official explanation of the French position in the forest of Argonne was given out in Paris this afternoon. It said:

"The fighting line has not changed perceptibly in the last two months. The French and German trenches are separated at some points by a distance not exceeding fifty yards. Infantry fire is constantly going on, while all the experience of siege operations is being utilized. This siege resembles greatly that of Sebastopol. Daily engagements occur, resulting sometimes in bending either the French or the German lines back for a distance of 150 yards.

ENEMY'S LOSS GREATER.

"The casualties have been very heavy for both opposing armies, but here, as elsewhere, the German losses certainly have been superior to those of the French."

This explanation was brought forth by the publication in the German press of a statement to the effect that the French had been completely driven out of the Argonne, while the siege of Verdun was proceeding. Regarding the latter, it is declared that the French are advancing and that they are now from five to ten kilometres (3 to 6 miles) further forward than they were a month ago.

THEY TOOK 400 MEN.

Detachment of Britons Turned Defeat Into Victory.

PARIS, Nov. 17.—A remarkable incident is narrated by a correspondent of Liberte yesterday. He says that during the desperate fighting in the south of Ypres on Nov. 12 a British infantry detachment of 80 men found itself isolated and unable to join the main body and took refuge for the night in a wood. The position seemed hopeless, but the men stood till dawn. They were then attacked by a fusilade near at hand, and found that a German column was being driven toward the wood by a force of Uhlans. Holding their fire they waited till the Germans were near and then charged with fixed bayonets. The diversion was so decisive that 400 prisoners were taken and the lost Tommies received a doubly warm welcome from their comrades.

JAPAN ACCUSES U. S.

Who Sent Message From Manila to Emden, She Asks.

TOKIO, Nov. 17.—The first allegation that the United States has failed to live up to the standard of neutrality it set, is made in a despatch received from Kobe yesterday.

It declares that the German cruiser Emden was enabled to find and sink the steamer Tsuyima as the result of a wireless despatch sent from Manilla.

The information contained in the wireless message, it is published, was secured in Kobe by a German merchant who has been arrested and will be tried as a spy.

Schaefer Pleads Not Guilty.

MONTREAL, Nov. 17. — Israel Schaefer, ticket agent and former court house interpreter, charged with high treason, in aiding the King's enemies, providing transportation to subjects of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy, telling them to represent themselves to Canadian and American authorities as Roumanian subjects, appeared before Judge Lost in voluntary statement yesterday morning. He pleaded not guilty and was remanded for trial at the March term of the Court of King's Bench.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Hostilities between the warring factions in Mexico have ceased, pending the outcome of further peace parleys.

The captain of a steamer arriving at Callao, Peru, reported he had seen the Japanese battleship Hizen and the cruiser Asama 300 miles west of the Peruvian coast.

The Montreal Star says: People living along the border are becoming genuinely alarmed over the fear of an invasion from Germans and Austrians in the United States.

Press reports from Brussels state that a British aviator dropped a bomb while flying over Courtrai on Saturday and killed fifteen German soldiers and a number of Belgian citizens.

Japanese troops yesterday entered the German fortified possession of Tsingtau in the Kiao-Chow territory. Their entrance was attended by various ceremonies, including memorial services for the dead.

Charged with assisting German reservists in getting across the border, a military guardsman at Chippewa has been arrested and jailed. It is alleged that he received a rake-off in one or more cases.

The British cruiser Glasgow, one of the vessels engaged with the German squadron off the coast of Chile, Nov. 1, arived at Rio Janeiro yesterday. The damage caused by the German shell fire is plainly visible on the cruiser.

DIRIGIBLE CRIPPLED.

German Airship Reached Frontier and Then Collapsed.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 17. — (Via London)—The Telegraaf learns from Maestricht, Holland, that Sunday a badly damaged dirigible airship flew over Limburg, Holland, coming from the direction of Belgium. It was evident that the airship had been damaged, either by artillery fire or a storm. When over Maestricht the airship disappeared in the direction of Germany.

Another dirigible was observed on Sunday from Sittard, 13 miles northeast of Maestricht, coming from the southeast and flying in a northerly direction along the Holland frontier.

Collapsed at Frontier.

LONDON, Nov. 17. — The correspondent of The Evening News at Rotterdam says of the Zeppelin airship reported in distress near Maestricht, Holland, Sunday:

"The airship was badly damaged in the rear, but by desperate efforts managed to reach the German frontier, where it collapsed a total wreck."

FARMERS ARRESTED.

They Are Charged With Ferrying Austrians Across Niagara River.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., 17.—Joseph Snyder, 60 years old, his son Richard, 24 years old, and his brother, Arthur, 27 years old, are prisoners at the Armory, on a charge of treason. Joseph Snyder and his son live on a farm near Slater's Point, about a mile above Chippewa, and has a wife and family.

The Snyders were arrested by men of the 44th Regiment stationed at the Armory, who, it is said, had laid a trap for them. It is said the militiamen caught the Snyders in the act of starting out for the American shore in a motor-boat with four Austrian reservists. The foreigners claimed they paid Snyder to ferry them across the river. The three Snyders and the Austrians found at the Snyder place were brought to this city and lodged at the Armory.

It is alleged the Snyders have conveyed a number of reservists across, receiving $10 for every one they succeeded in landing on the American side.

MANY TOWNS FINED.

Russians Are Making Extensive Reprisals In East Prussia.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—A Daily Mail Copenhagen despatch says that it is learned that the Russians are imposing fines on the conquered East Prussian towns corresponding to the German fines imposed on Belgian towns.

The military authorities in East Prussia, adds the despatch, have given orders that as the Russians advance the inhabitants must abandon their homes and remove all their flocks and herds, as well as their valuables, and burn their houses so as to prevent the Russians subsisting on the country. Many villages are reported to have been already evacuated.

The German General Staff has issued urgent orders for 10,000 sledges for the winter campaign in Russia.

Spies on Transport Shot.

MEDICINE HAT, Alta., Nov. 17. —A private letter to a citizen here from a member of the Canadian contingent in England, tells of the shooting of two members of the contingent from Edmonton as German spies.

In the letter it says they poisoned food on the ship going over, making many soldiers very ill.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 16.—The wheat market opened ⅛c higher on all months except July. Oats for December were ⅛c lower and flax 2¼c higher for November and 1¾c higher for May.

Trading was quiet in options, a light volume of business being transacted. The demand for all grades of cash wheat was brisk, and spreads have narrowed up considerably in the last two days. No. 1 northern wheat being now ⅛c over November option. Exporters were keen buyers of nearby stuff to fill space.

About noon prices for wheat were ⅛c to ¼c higher. Flax was easier, except for December, which was holding steady. The large increase of about five and a half million bushels wheat in the United States visible supply caused a decided weakness on the close, and wheat finished ⅜c to ½c lower, oats ⅛c to ⅜c lower; flax closed very weak, following a steady market, being 1⅝c to 2⅜c lower.

Inspections for two days were 302 cars, as against 2919 last year, and in sight were 000.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Nov. 16.—Business in grain today over the cable was very quiet. There was a fair demand from local buyers for oats, but the trade with outside points is very quiet. There was a better demand for Argentine corn, and sales of several cargoes were made at 69½c per bushel, ex-store. Another shipment of 100,000 bushels of this corn is expected to arrive here this week. Flour was unchanged, with demand quiet. Millfeed continues active and firm. Demand for butter quiet and easy, finest creamery at auction today selling at 27c. Cheese quiet. Exports for the week, 21,273, against 27,300 for the same week last year. Eggs strong. Exports for week, 16,774 cases, as compared with 12,899 for the like week last year. Dressed hogs stronger and 25c per cwt. higher.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Minn., Nov. 16.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.17¼; No. 1 northern, $1.14¼; No. 2 do., $1.13¼; Dec., $1.14⅜.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Nov. 16.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the feature of today's trade was the active demand from packers for canning stock, which was attributed to the fact that some of them during the past few days had made some large sales of canned beef for export account; consequently a brisk trade was done in the classes of stock, but as the offerings were smaller than they have been of late the feeling in the market for such was stronger and prices showed an advance of 25c per cwt., with sales of bulls at $5.50 to $6.75, and cows at $3.75 to $4.25 per cwt.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for butchers' cattle, notwithstanding the fact that the supply was small, and good to choice steers scarce. The demand was only fair and principally for small lots to fill actual wants owing to the unsettled weather prevailing. Sales of a few head of choice steers were made at $7 to $7.75, but the bulk of the trading was done in fair stock at $6 to $6.75 per 100 pounds.

Small meats continue firm and the trade in Ontario lambs was active at $7.50 to $7.75, while Quebec stock sold at $7 to $7.30 per 100 pounds. Demand for calves was good at firm prices. A stronger feeling developed in the market for hogs and prices advanced 50c to 75c per cwt. with a good demand from packers and sales of selected lots were made at $7.40 to $7.60, fows at $5.40 to $6.00, and stags at $4.00 to $4.50 per cwt., weighed off cars.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

INHABITANTS OF CRACOW REPORTED TO BE IN FLIGHT RUSSIANS MASS FOR SIEGE

Czar's Armies Have Invested City From the North and German Officers Are Reported to Have Caused Internal Troubles by Ousting Austrians—Russ Soldiers Clad in Sheepskin—Capital is on Fire

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The Giornale d'Italia of Rome publishes a despatch from Venice which says that news has been received there that Cracow, the capital of Galicia, is burning and that its inhabitants are fleeing. Cracow is invested on the north, and is expected to fall immediately.

From reports of Russian scouting detachments which had ridden within a few miles of Cracow it appears the Germans have taken command of the forts and defences there, and have substituted German soldier for Austrians in garrisoning the stronghold.

This step has caused further dissensions between the Germans and Austrians, the latter being relegated to the defence of the Carpathians, and not allowed any voice in directing the campaign.

On the Polish frontier and in Galicia two enormous armies are massing for a battle which may decide the fortunes of the war in the east.

The possibility is being discussed that the Austrians may abandon Cracow without defence rather than submit the city to a destructive bombardment.

The Russian advance in East Prussia, according to advices received at Petrograd from the front, is being assisted materially by cold weather, which enables the troops to move more rapidly. In the swampy region of East Prussia movements of the army have been retarded by soft roads. This condition has now been remedied by the cold weather, which has frozen the roads.

A fall of snow during the last two days is reported over the entire field of operations, not yet to a sufficient extent to prove a serious obstacle to the movement of troops.

Fresh troops now being sent to the front are supplied with short coats of tanned sheepskin. Relief societies in Petrograd and other Russian cities are bending every effort to collect woollen garments.

Despatches to Petrograd papers indicate that the Germans are making slow progress along the line which extends from the River Warthe across the Vistula to the southern frontier of East Prussia, fifty miles east of Thorn. The new front extends over a distance of three hundred miles from the Warthe to the extreme northeastern section of East Prussia.

The German right wing now appears to be feeling its way. The centre of the line is stubbornly resisting the determined advance of the Russians. The left wing is protected to some extent by the broken character of the country and by complicated artificial fortifications. In this region the chief German reliance appears to be heavy artillery, since cavalry operations are almost impossible in such a country.

"The Germans are concentrating great armies at Thorn, Posen and Breslau and plan to fight desperately to prevent the Russian occupation of the important parts of Silesia and Posen. Only the utmost need will persuade the Germans to send any troops back to the western front at present."

A word of caution to the allies comes from Petrograd. This is that they must not expect the Russians to sweep on to Berlin over night, as if were, as this may take months and even longer. The Germans occupy the defences they have been preparing for years, and in addition to this they may be able to spare even more men for the operation on their eastern front.

TERRITORY SUBMERGED.

Fighting Around Dixmude Limited to Artillery Duels.

PARIS, Nov. 17.—The official bulletin issued by the War Office said:—"The situation is without modification."

The afternoon bulletin was as follows:—

"During all of yesterday on the Yser Canal, from Nieuport to the point on the river opposite Dixmude the fighting was limited to artillery exchanges, the country having been further inundated. The submerged territory now stretches to the south of Dixmude to a point five kilometres to the north of Bixschoote.

"The forces of the enemy which endeavored to cross the canal in the region between Dixmude and Bixschoote all were driven back beyond the bridges. A German regiment was completely destroyed at a point to the south of Bixschoote."

"At the southeast of Ypres two other German attacks were repulsed.

"On our part we have taken the offensive and reconquered certain points of support which the enemy some days ago succeeded in capturing.

"For the last few days, between the River Lys and the River Oise there have been only small minor operations by small units, and we have made slight progress in our works of approach.

"In the region on the River Aisne, in the district of Champagne, only cannonades, without result, have occurred. In the Argonne district the Germans have made another attack upon St. Hubert without success.

"In the region of St. Mihiel the enemy has failed in a surprise attack in the forest of Apremont, and the Vosges there is little activity."

Nine Men Get V.C.

Three of Britain's First List of Heroes Have Died of Wounds

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The first list of Victoria Cross awards to be published during the present war, contains the names of five officers and four non-commissioned officers, of which two recipients have since been given commissions and three have died of wounds.

Lt.-Gen. Sir Douglas Haig has been promoted to general for distinguished service in the war.

Those on whom the crosses were conferred are Capt. Francisco Grenfell of the Ninth Lancers for aiding and saving the guns of the British in Belgium, Aug. 24; on Capt. Douglas Reynolds of the artillery, who was wounded in a similar exploit; on Capt. Theodore Wright of the engineers, who was mortally wounded while rescuing a wounded man; on Surgeon Harry Sherwood Ranken for attending men under fire after he had received wounds from which he died later; on Lieut. Maurice Dease and on four non-commissioned officers.

Officers May Be Interned.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Telegraphing from Christiania, the correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co. says that the British steamer Weymar, on her way from Archangel, Russia, to Leith, Scotland, ran ashore on Borre Island, off the coast of Norway. All hands were saved and taken to Trondhjem. Among them are 30 British officers who recently brought over a Canadian icebreaker for the Russian Government.

The question is now being raised as to whether these officers are to be interned.

Move Back To Paris.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—It is reported that the seat of the French Government is being returned to Paris. All the official Government staff and the Chamber of Deputies will arrive there to-day.

Youths March To Death

British Bulletin Pays Tribute to Heroism of German Levies

LONDON, Nov. 17. — The official press bureau has issued an account, dated Nov. 10, of the movements of the British force and the French armies in immediate touch with it. After going in detail the events from day to day, it continues:

"In describing the operations for the six days from Nov. 4 to 9, it can be said that during that period the Germans have nowhere along our front, made an attack in great force, such as was launched against Ypres at the end of October. What they may be contemplating remains to be seen. Their policy has appeared to be to wear us out by continual bombardment, interspersed with local assaults at different points.

"On the whole there is evidence to show that the Germans are beginning to be affected by their heavy losses. From prisoners it is gathered that the young men of the new corps cannot withstand the fatigues and privations of campaigning, and that the middle-aged men lack ardor. From the same source also, it is learned that the recruits who have not previously served, have only received some eight or nine weeks' training instead of the 12 weeks' course prescribed for them; that they have had practically no instruction in musketry, and that they have not practiced entrenching.

"Whatever deterioration there may be in the material now being drafted into the ranks of our enemy, it must be admitted that the Prussian war machine, acting on a nation previously inured to the sternest discipline, has obtained the most remarkable results.

"It is true that a considerable proportion of the masses recently thrown into the field against the British has consisted of hastily trained and immature men, but the great factor remains that these ill-assorted levies have not hesitated to advance against highly trained troops. In spite of lack of officers, in spite of inexperience, boys of 16 and 17 have faced our guns, have marched steadily up to the muzzles of our rifles and have met death in droves, without flinching."

Because salts used as adulterants interfere with the passage of electric currents through wine, French scientists have invented a system employing telephones to test the purity of such beverages.

HUGE SUM IS VOTED

British Commons Supports Bill For Great War Credit—A Million Men Granted

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The meeting of the House of Commons yesterday was entirely devoted to war measures and without partisan politics.

Premier Asquith requested a vote for $1,125,000,000, and another million soldiers, both of which the House granted without a dissenting voice.

The condition and morals of the soldiers; the inevitable spy system and the press censorship were discussed freely. The Prime Minister characterized the crisis as "the greatest emergency in which the country has ever been placed." He said there were already under arms 1,200,000 men; that the war was costing nearly $5,000,000 per day and that the Government proposed to lend Belgium $50,000,000 and Servia $4,000,000 without interest until the end of the war.

Timothy Healy, the Irish Nationalist, said that the money should be given to them.

John Hodge, the Labor member for Lancashire, endorsed the proposal, with the suggestion: "Later on we can collect it from the German emperor."

Reginald McKenna, Secretary for Home Affairs, informed the House that there were 14,500 alien enemies in the concentration camps in the British Isles and 20,000 at large.

Walter Hume Long, Mr. Healy and Lord Charles Beresford discussed the question of publicity and urged that the country should be given fuller details of the achievements of the troops in the field.

In his closing speech, Premier Asquith placed the burden of the censorship on France, and said it was necessary to defer to the wishes of the country which was doing the greatest part of the fighting, and where the fighting was being carried on.

He announced that Earl Kitchener, Secretary for War, had prepared a scheme for increased pay. He concluded by declaring that sickness among the troops had not exceeded 10, possibly 15 per cent., and he believed no body of men had ever been brought together who had comported themselves better than the present army.

BRITISH INDIANS DEFEATED TURKS

LONDON, Nov. 16.—It is officially announced that since the occupation of Fao, at the head of the Persian Gulf, by a British Indian force, on November 8, two actions have been fought with the Turkish forces, who "on both occasions have been severely handled and defeated after stubborn resistance."

The announcement continues: "The first of these attacks occurred early in the morning of November 11, when the Turks made a determined attack on the British outposts. On the fourteenth further reinforcements arrived from India, and the following day the Indians, commanded by General Delamain, sortied and attacked the Turks, occupying a post about four miles distant, assisted by the sloops Espiegle and Odin.

"The enemy's camp was captured and many prisoners and guns were taken. The British casualties were two officers wounded and eight men killed and fifty-one wounded."

BRITISH CRUISERS IN VICINITY

PANAMA, Nov. 16.—Three British cruisers—the Berwick, Lancaster, and Suffolk—are outside Colon. They are expected to pass through the canal and join the British Pacific Squadron.

FLANDERS NOW A SWAMP FIGHT IN ARGONNE

Rain and Snow Have Forced Kaiser to Attempt His Advances at a Point Farther South But Demonstrations of Force Continue in the North —Failure of Coast Advance Victory to Allies.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The Germans yesterday made a fierce onslaught against the French positions in the forest of Argonne, the attack being met with an unflinching resistance, followed shortly after by a vigorous offensive movement, which forced the Germans to retire. The Kaiser's troops made an attack on the Town of St. Hubert, but were repulsed.

A semi-official explanation of the French position in the forest of Argonne was given out in Paris yesterday afternoon. It said:

"The fighting line has not changed perceptibly in the last two months. The French and German trenches are separated at some points by a distance not exceeding fifty yards. Infantry fire is constantly going on, while all the experience of siege operations are being utilized. This siege resembles greatly that of Sebastopol. Daily engagements occur, resulting sometimes in bending either the French or the German lines back for a distance of 150 yards.

"The casualties have been very heavy for both opposing armies, but here, as elsewhere, the German losses certainly have been superior to those of the French."

This explanation was brought forth by the publication in the German press of a statement to the effect that the French had been completely driven out of the Argonne, while the siege of Verdun was proceeding. Regarding the latter, it is declared that the French are advancing and that they are now from five to ten kilometres (three to six miles) further forward than they were a month ago.

The loss of life in Flanders has been appalling, with the effect that the German offensive in the extreme west has shifted southward toward the French border. Snow and rain have fallen over the battleground in West Flanders until the roads have been turned into channels of mud, where heavy fighting and artillery movements are impossible, and where a big force of Germans is said to have been cut off by a flood. The region from Dixmude to Nieuport is a lapping swamp. Men have been driven out of the trenches, wherein now float the ghastly, mutilated bodies of the dead. Guns and ammunition wagons have been abandoned, and roads are reported thereabouts as increase of sickness, especially lung and throat affection.

Notwithstanding these harrowing conditions, the Germans are pressing, with almost non-human determination, their attempt to jam through to Dunkirk and Calais. An artillery duel is now said to be in progress. The Germans have now completed several new lines of defence through Belgium.

Japanese gunners, skilled in the use of the heaviest types of cannon, are on their way to France to aid the artillerymen of the allies.

Twenty-five thousand fresh Indian troops arrived in Paris yesterday from Marseilles, and started immediately for the front. They reached Marseilles Thursday, after a twenty-three-day voyage from Bombay.

The National Swiss yesterday published a long letter from a Swiss who is doing Red Cross work at Brussels. An extract from the letter says: "The number of German wounded arriving here is unimaginable. Trains —which we call cemetery trains—full of piled-up dead soldiers continue to arrive from the front. They contain bundles of dead; that is, four bodies tied together to facilitate transportation.

An observer with the British army who furnishes the newspaper reports from the front announces that the German attempts to batter a wedge through the British lines have greatly decreased in force during the past few days and that they bear little semblance to the attacks in great force launched against Ypres at the end of October. They are, he adds, more in the nature of demonstrations in force than serious assaults.

The writer pays high tribute to the bravery of raw German youths and untrained men of middle age who, he says, does not hesitate to march against the trained British troops.

If the Germans have abandoned their repeated furious battering ram efforts, their failure to thrust back the allies' lines and reach Calais will, from the allies' point of view, constitute a distinct victory for the allies, since, it is asserted, they have not tried nor were they expected to accomplish anything more than to hold their own on the defensive.

A SKETCH OF MAJ.-GENERAL E. A. H. ALDERSON

The Examiner is indebted to Mr. C. Harwood, 190 Brock street, for the following clipping from the Weekly Press of Norwich, Eng., giving this sketch of Major-General Alderson:

Major-General E. A. H. Alderson, C.B., at present commanding the Canadian contingent, is the only son of the late Lieut.-Colonel E. M. Alderson, who was born at Baconsthorpe Rectory, Norfolk; served with the 97th Regiment at the siege of Sebastopol, and afterwards with the P.W.O. Norfolk Artillery Militia, and was for many years resident in Ipswich. A portrait and biographical sketch of Major-General Alderson appears in "Baily's Magazine" for November. He is a great lover of hunting. He was blooded with the Essex and Suffolk Hounds, the pack of which his father was for many years secretary, by Ben Morgan, and in his own words has "hunted all his life." Major General Alderson says that a man who rides to hounds with courage and discretion—and both are required—is a half-made soldier. He considers that he has been very lucky as fortune has thrown him, as a serving soldier, where there have been hounds, and somehow he has managed to get hold of them. He has, furthermore, been lucky in that, although an infantry soldier, he has done all his five campaigns as a mounted man—i.e., with the Mounted Infantry. He expected to finish his time in the Army early in 1915, and he had just taken over control of the South Shropshire Hounds when the call "to arms" came. Every one is delighted that he was chosen to the command of the Canadian Division. He earned the greatest respect of the mounted Canadians under him in the South African war. Major General Alderson is a member of the Royal Norfolk and Suffolk Yacht Club.

TO FIGHT FOR BRITAIN.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 16 — Three hundred United States citizens, the majority of them former Canadians, and all experienced militia men, sail from New York for Egland to-morrow to join the British Army for active service, according to Ed. M. Rigsby of Cleveland, formerly of this City, and one of the party, who passed through London to-day en route for the point of departure.

BRAZIL NEXT IF GERMANY WINS

PARIS, November 16. — Senhor J. Pereira De Graca Aranha, Brazilian Minister to Holland, said yesterday that in his opinion Germany would be defeated overwhelmingly in the war and that the defeat would remove all the anxieties of his own country of an exterior character, also those of other South American states.

Senhor Aranha, with his wife, expects to leave the Hotel Wagram, where he has been stopping for more than a week, and to return to Brazil to perform certain work which he briefly outlined to me in conversation.

It deals in a measure with the situation which is entertainingly treated in a novel entitled "Canaan," which he wrote several years ago, exposing the German menace through the extensive colonization ambitions of Germany in Southern Brazil.

"When the war is over," said Senhor Aranha, "all the important nations are going to play a part in the adjustments surrounding the terms of peace. The point is, three great countries of South America have been expending large sums of money for armies and navies, for use against whom? Not against each other. Our countries are at peace. We have no thought of aggression by anyone against another.

"The only necessity for armaments would be to protect ourselves against Germany. But with the German spirit of world conquest crushed—as it surely will be—the need for expenditure of between $50,000,000 and $100,000,000 by Brazil, Argentina and Chili would disappear.

"Therfore, I will urge upon my countrymen an agreement with our neighbours in the Southern Hemisphere to represent disarmament strongly to the peace congress that will follow the war. We will be on hand then with the spirit of the United States, and by acting together we can make our power felt.

"Not long ago Mr. Winston Churchill in an interview said that if Germany won the war it would be the turn of the United States I think so too. But it would have been Brazil's turn, too, and the United States would have been involved through a violation of the Monroe Doctrine. But that prospect is dead.

My country ardently desires the success of the allies. She is friendly to England, but exceptionally so to France. May both hemispheres see peace through the triumph of the allies!"

LETTER FROM A SOLDIER IN GERMAN ARMY

Brother of Emile Baumer Writes From Cologne, Germany

Mr. Emile Baumer has received an interesting letter from his brother, who is serving in the German army against the allies. With all the other men of the Kaiser's empire of a military age, Mr. Baumer's brother was ordered to the colours on August 5th. But as he is a carpenter by trade he was taken from the ranks soon after and was set to work making 650 hospital beds to be used in the hospital at Strasburg. This undertaking was finished about October 25th, and Mr. Baumer was again recalled to active service. This time he was ordered to join the Landsturm or third line of defence which stretches from Basel, Switzerland, to Cologne.

According to the letter, the reports we receive here that all the available men have been pressed into service in the German army, must be to some extent exaggerated. While the men from 17 to 40 or 45 years of age have been called out, there is still a large number capable of rendering effective service in the field, who are still pursuing their ordinary occupations. In this connection, of course, Mr. Baumer can only speak for the province of Alsace Lorraine, but in that part of the German Empire, he affirms that here are still numbers of men who may yet be called to the colours. He cannot, of course, vouch for conditions in this regard in other provinces.

Mr. Baumer states that the young men are the ones that are bearing the brunt of the fighting in the trenches. He is 38 years of age and is not actually on the battle line at all, but in a part of the army that constitutes a sort of reserve force and line of defence. This may be one reason why so many German prisoners and wounded range in age from 16 to 20. According to Mr. Baumer's information the average age of the Germans on the firing line must be lower than that of the allied forces.

Ladies' Onward Bible Class Say Good-bye to Departing Member

A very pleasant evening was spent on Friday in the parlour of George Street Methodist Church when the Ladies' Onward Bible Class gathered together for a social evening.

Tea was served about 6:30. After tea Miss A. Downer was called to the front and the following address was read by Miss Reynolds.

Dear Alice,—Having just learned that you are about to leave us and make your future home among strangers, we take this opportunity of wishing you every success and happiness in your future life.

We remember the thirty-five who have left us already, who formerly belonged to our class, but who got tired of their own name and changed it for another, and we see you are going to do likewise. We are very sorry to lose you from our class, but hope you and your intended husband may be true to God and willing workers in the Master's Vineyard.

When many miles away from us and busy with your home and home duties, cast a thought back to the girls of our Sunday School Class, who respect and love each other and hate to say goodbye to any one of their members.

It is a pleasure to present you at this time with this fruit set as a slight token of our love and esteem.

Hoping you may be spared many years to enjoy and use them.

From the Onward Ladies' Bible Class.

Miss Downer thanked them in a few words.

After this there was a short programme.

President—Miss Huycke
Vice-President—Miss Morrow.
Secretary—Miss Reynolds.
Assistant Secretary—Miss Mabel Roseborough.
Treasurer—Miss Bertha Bradley.
Assistant Treasurer—Miss Allan.

TERMS FOR THE USE OF PANAMA

Presence of Belligerents' Vessels Hastens Decision—Nations at War Officially Notified

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16. — The State Department has made public the text of President Wilson's proclamation regarding the use of the Panama Canal by the war vessels of belligerents in the present European conflict.

Although no requests have yet been made by any power to send its battleships through the big ditch, the presence of Japanese, British, and German cruisers in the vicinity of the canal is believed to have hastened the issuance of the proclamation.

Appended to the proclamation is the protocol of an agreement entered into between the United States and Panama last month, whereby both governments agreed to prohibit the use of the canal zone by supply ships, transports or auxiliaries of the belligerents under the terms of the neutrality rules oftener than once in three months.

Time Limit—24 Hours.

The President's proclamation requires the war vessel of a belligerent to leave the vicinity of the canal zone, including the harbours of Panama and Colon, in 24 hours after passing through the canal in either direction, except when in distress, and then as soon as possible after such vessel is put in a seaworthy condition.

It also is set forth that such vessels may not take on supplies, coal or oil fuel in excess of what is required to get them to the "nearest possible port not an enemy port, at which they can obtain supplies necessary for the continuation of their voyage."

It is provided that, when the war vessels of opposing belligerents happen to be in the canal zone at the same time, those of one power may not leave the zone until twenty-four hours after the others have cleared.

Restricted to Six Vessels.

Not more than six vessels of the belligerent powers may be in the territorial waters of the zone at one time, nor may troops or sailors or munitions of war be landed from such vessels on the zone, except in case of accident incurred by the vessel in transit and then only with the permission of the canal authorities.

Wireless outfits on these ships must not be used in the zone, except on business connected with canal business, and absolute prohibition is set up against the sailing of aircraft from any of the belligerent vessels over the territory of the canal.

Ban Put on Aircraft.

The proclamation extends its prohibitions to aircraft, public or private, of belligerent powers, which are forbidden to rise from or descend on canal zone territory or "to pass through the air spaces above" the land or water of the zone.

Only in case of actual distress and to make a vessel seaworthy may the United States repair facilities and docks be used by belligerent vessels and the work must be done speedily under supervision of canal authorities.

When opposing belligerent ships are simultaneously present the twenty-four-hour rule of departure must be observed between them, order of departure to be determined by order of arrival, except where circumstances make extensions of stay permissable.

All departments of the battalion are being conducted with remarkable smoothness and in a manner which speaks highly for the efficiency of the officers. Drilling is being carried on regularly on the Artillery Park Square and on the Cricket Field, an musketry instructions and practices are held daily in the Armouries. The men now drill eight hours each day and in addition to this the officers and non-commissioned officers are required to attend lectures nightly which, to say the least keeps them very busy.

The concert and smoker which will be held to-morrow evning in the new recreation hall of the right half-battalion promises to furnish an evening of excellent entertainment to all who attend. Mr. W. F. Nickle, K.C., M.P., Dr. J. W. Edwards, M.P., and Col. T. D. R. Hemming will be among those who will address the gathering.

The recruiting for the detachment of heavy artillery from this division has been completed, the required thirty-nine men having been obtained. The other members of this heavy battery for overseas service will be recruited from various parts of the Dominion. Maj. O'Bell of Cobourg will command this unit.

The military secretary of the British War Office has notified Major H. W. Lumb, Brockville, to report at the earliest date to the Officer Commanding the 6th Battalion of the Suffolk Regiment at Colchester, Essex, England, for duty.

The Roman Catholic troops attended the high mass at 10.30 o'clock in St. Mary's Cathedral yesterday morning.

The Salvation Army gave an excellent band concert in the citadel yesterday afternoon at which the soldiers of the City were guests. The building was crowded and the programme rendered by the band and the members of the male choir was greatly appreciated by all. One of the soldiers acted as chairman. The volunteers are grateful to the members of the Salvation Army for their thoughtfulness in extending their hospitality and for the pleasant hour spent yesterday afternoon.

The Renfrew band of Highland pipers has been accepted by the Militia Department to accompany the 21st Regiment across the Atlantic. A condition attached to acceptance was that the members of the band agree to act as stretcher-bearers on the field which they were quite willing to do. The number of men to be taken is eighteen. They will come to Kingston shortly.

MOVEMENT OF GRAIN TO EAST

During the past few days old-time activity on the Grand Trunk line through this City has been in evidence. Between Saturday night and Sunday morning fifteen double-headers, besides he usual freight trains, passed through the City. Six of these were northward bound and were "empties," but the remaining nine were headed eastward, loaded with grain. These trains are engaged in the movement of grain, principally from the Midland elevators.

JAS. MONTGOMERY FLAGG'S ADVICE TO AUTOMOBILISTS

In the November American Magazine James Montgomery Flagg, the famous wit and artist, does a piece in words and pictures entitled "The Nut's Automobile Guide." Following is an extract from his advice to automobilists:

"If you drive the car yourself, don't examine the driver's seat before you seat yourself. Then you won't be annoyed by the fact that it is covered with grease. If you find the seat lumpy in spots and something very hard presses into you don't say anything to the chauffeur about it. He knows all about it. It's a roll of overalls, a stack of newspapers, four pounds of cotton waste, a pair of shoes, an old hand pump you don't use any more, and a box of inner tubes.

"Don't imagine that when you ask your chauffeur why he didn't fill the tank he won't have an answer. He will always have an answer. His answer will be in this case: "I didn't want to weigh down my car with too much gas!" You see, after all, he was thinking of your interests. But did you get the 'My car?' Otherwise the answer is a dandy. Very high average.

"In running through small towns pay no attention to traffic rules. It is quite absurd for a small town to put on such airs, anyway. Run over the cop's toes if he gives you any sass. Always give her the gas when passing a trolley car that is discharging passengers. If you rumble a few of these rubes over and maim a child or so, turn around, look back at them and laugh. This will show them that you come from a large city.

"And the main idea in motoring is to show somebody."

THE CO. INSURANCE CLAUSE AND HOW IT WORKS OUT

Montreal Chronicle Says That Attack Is Charge Without Evidence

In view of the characteristic attack made upon the practice of co-insurance by "expert" of Toronto Saturday Night, the occasion may be taken to state once again plainly and accurately what co-insurance is and does. Co-insurance affords to the insured reduced rates of premium in consideration of an undertaking to carry a certain specified proportion of insurance as to value. Supposing that an 80 per cent. co-insurance clause is inserted in a policy on property value $1,000, then the requirement upon the insured is that he shall maintain insurance upon that property of $800. If he carries $800 insurance, then in the event of a loss, the insurance company pays any loss up to the face value of the policy. If on the other hand, the insured fails to carry $800 insurance as he has undertaken to do, then he is regared in the event of a loss, as a contributor to the loss in ratio of the deficiency in insurance. For example:

Value of property	$1000
80 p.c. insurance Co.-Ins. clause	800
Insurance carried	600
Loss	500
Company pays 6-8 or	375
Insured pays 2-8 or	125

Operating in Partial Losses Only.

It must be clearly understood, however, that the co-insurance clause only operates in case of partial losses under 80 per cent. of value; it does not operate in cases where the loss is total of more than 80 per cent. of value. For example:

Value of property	$1000
80 p.c. insurance	800
Insurance carried	600
Loss	800
Company pays 6-8 or	600
(A total loss under the policy)
Assured loses 2-8 or	200

It is of importance also to note that co-insurance is only insisted upon by insurance companies in the case of blanket ratings which are based on the understanding that a certain proportion of insurance will be carried. In other and very usual cases a lower rate is offered as direct return, but the insured has the option of paying the higher rate with the the co-insurance striction.

A Charge Without Evidence.

The insurance "expert" of Toronto Saturday Night who has been girding at the insurance companies for their use of this clause, frankly accuses them of utilizing it as a means of defrauding policyholders at the time of settlement of losse — a charge which he makes without bringing a shred of evidence in support of it. He omits to mention another point of which he must have become perfectly well aware in the course of his extensive practice in adjusting losses, that the fire companies are continually paying losses which they would be well justified in contesting. The trouble is that at the present time it is too easy to collect fire insurance. It would be eventually to the advantage of the public if fires and their origin were more closely investigated and, in the settlement of losses, the conditions of the policy more rigidly adhered to. Were this course of action followed, it is pretty certain that there would be a decided reduction in the fire waste.—Chronicle, Montreal, Nov. 13, 1914.

CRIME ABATES IN ENGLAND

Has Fallen off 30 Per Cent. Since War Began

LONDON, Nov. 16—"The falling off of crime in this country since the beginning of the war has been truly remarkable; as compared to three years ago there has been a diminution of thirty per cent. in indictable offences," said Justice Robert Wallace to-day in charging the grand jury.

The justice explained that he attributed this decrease partly to public restraint in war time, but principally to the reduction in the number of hours saloons are permitted to stay open. "The effect of this," said the justice, "has been truly wonderful."

The loyalists pursued the rebels until their horses gave out and they were forced to abandon the chase.

BOMB PROOF SHELTERS ARE WASHED OUT

Germans Exposed to Heavy Shell Fire Attempt to Rebuild Their Protections

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, Nov. 18.—German troops on the line from the coast below Dixmunds are making frantic efforts today to repair the bomb proof shelters of their trenches before the allied lines.

The waters which flooded the fighting area caused many of these shelters to collapse or be swept away entirely. The Germans have, therefore, been completely exposed to the shell fire of the allied artillery. Their losses have been enormous.

The work of rebuilding trenches and the construction of dykes to hold back the flood waters is being carried out in the face of a heavy bombardment.

SCRAPS OF WAR NEWS

LONDON — A London servant girl who had $25 on deposit in the post office savings bank wrote to the postmaster general: "Please sir, close my account and send half to the Prince of Wales relief fund and the rest to the Belgians."

LONDON — "The battle of the K's" announces the Express. "On our side K of K; on the other side Kaiser, Krupp and kultur."

AMSTERDAM—A poor woman at Liege was robbed of all her possessions save a pet pig. Finally the Germans took that, too. However, they left a voucher on which was printed in German, "Admit two to the kinema."

"Which one of the ten commandments did Adam break when he ate the apple?" asked the Sunday school teacher. "He didn't break any," replied one little fellow. "'Cause there wasn't any."

Germans Prepare Lines To Check The Russian Advance

Desire Position With Vistula and Warta Rivers on Their Flanks---Tide of Battle to the Present Has Favoured Russians---Hindenburg's Plans to Divert Advance From East Prussia

PETROGRAD, Nov. 17.—Where will Germany make a stand?

It would seem that the Germans hope to advance with the Vistula on one flank and the Warta River on the other. The country is higher than the marshland in the interior of Poland an offers better defensive positions.

The possibilities of an offensive movement from this direction are well known to the Russian Staff. Already operations to check it are going forward. All signs point to an approaching conflict which will be of the last importance to the German campaign in this area.

Russians Hold Mazurian Lakes.

In East Prussia the Russian movement goes forward with out a hitch. The Mazurian Lakes, which have been the scene of much fighting recently, are at last the prize of the Russians.

The Russian advance through the centre of Russian Poland has created a panic all along the German border, and a tide of refugees has set in towards Breslau. In that city itself the startling fiasco of the Polish invasion is a subject of open discussion. Breslau begins to tremble for its own safety.

Once across the border, the name of Cossack will spread terror equal to that created by the approach of an Uhlan in Belgium. But the wholesale invasion of this section of Germany cannot be expected immediately. Russia relies on her preponderance in numbers. Owing to limited railway communication time is necessary to develop the numerical superiority at all the salient points. Troops start from every point of the compass, all bound in te same direction. The remotest divisions of the Empire send complements which join the others responding to the call of the Czar.

GERMANS HAVE HEAVY LOSSES

PETROGRAD, Nov. 17.—The Russians continue to inflict heavy losses on the Germans. Between Plock and the Warthe they have broken their communications, and the water difficulties—compel the fighting columns constantly to change ground, but always the Russian cavalry maintains its ascendency.

The Germans in this vicinity number about 250,000. They have on their right flank the Russian army which has been thrown on Kalisz, and on their left a Russian army, which is fighting towards the north through Soldau and Neidenburg.

The Germans are unquestionably suffering more destruction in this prairie region than if they had remained in their own permanent positions around Thorn, but sacrifices had to be made as the only means of learning whether Russia's strength was to be thrown first into the Posen and Silesia district, or northward. The Russian leaders still keep the enemy in the dark respecting their main strategic plans.

From his headquarters at Thorn General von Hindenburg is intensifying his desperate effort to arrest the development of a winter campaign in Germany. His forces are fighting vehemently in a large triangular battle area in North-west Poland. The Germans are spread along a base from the Vistula to the Warthe. The Russians form two sides of the triangle, and are pressing them backwards on the frontier.

Great Battle in Progress.

This struggle has grown in violence for three days and has now assumed the dimensions of a great battle. It is Gen. von Hindenburg's last remedy against finding his position at Thorn passed by two great Russian armies, one moving westward and the other northward. The Russians are displaying their shock tactics, which, during the onslaughts against the Germans when the latter were driven from the vicinity of Warsaw, wrought tremendous losses. The German cavalry is much exhausted and is suffering terribly.

SILENCE REIGNS AROUND CRACOW

LONDON, Nov. 17. — Meanwhile the Russian southern army has begun the investment of Cracow by moving armies from the northeast along the Radom road, and is marching westward across Galicia. Gen. Dankl, who is directing the defence of Cracow, has moved his foremost works six miles beyond the permanent outer section of the fortress. His position now is in the firing zone of the Russian advance.

The garrison of Cracow consists of 100,000 men and there are 120 guns.

Petrograd is officially silent concerning the state of affairs in the region of Cracow, which city has been reported invested and burning. "There is an important German force in Galacia," is all the Russian staff's communication says that bears on the Cracow situation. Concerning the fighting farther south of Galicia, the statement says that the Russians are in contact with the Austrian rear guards at Dukli, which is in the foothills of the Carpathians, 50 miles southwest of Przemysl and beyond the Wisloka River.

GERMANS ARE CONFIDENT

Have Not Lost Faith in Their Own Invincibility—But Tide Has Turned at Ypres.

INDIANS MADE TRAP

NORTH FRANCE, Nov. 17. — The tide has turned. The bastion of Ypres is impregnable; that is the main fact of this struggle in Flanders. There were critical days, however. No one knows how anxiously the khaki line watched to see if it could stand the strain.

Let me warn against the generally accepted statements that the Germans have lost heart. They still have faith in their own invincibility. It is regrettable that the public cannot know all there is to be known of the supreme valour of the allies during the past fortnight.

The trenches have changed hands over and over again, and every yard of ground has been fought and strewn with the bodies of fallen heroes. In the midst of the struggle, when the operations were balanced as delicately as the mainspring of a watch, the Indians, whose trenches are now hardly ever attacked by the bayonet, adopted a novel if somewhat disconcerting method of coming in close touch with the enemy. The Indian troops had come to grips at nightfall. They abandoned their trenches to the enemy, and the unsuspecting Germans occupied them, but during the night the Indians crept steadily over the lost ground, moving like cats in the darkness. They fell upon the German trenches with awful fury, completely surprising them. Few escaped. This is the kind of warfare which delights the heart of the Indian soldier, but gives anxious moments for those directing operations.

OFFICIAL STORY OF CHILEAN BATTLE SHOWS BRITISH SOUGHT ENGAGEMENT

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 18. — The Admiralty issued last night the report of Capt. John Luce, of the British light cruiser Glasgow, of the battle with the German squadron on November 1, off the Chilean coast.

The Glasgow, which left Coromel on the morning of that day, was advised by Rear-Admiral Christopher Cradock, commander of the British squadron, that the enemy's ship were to the northward. Towards evening the Glasgow sighted smoke and reported to Rear-Admiral Cradock, and the British fleet formed in line ahead, the Good Hope leading, with the Monmouth, Glasgow and Otranto following.

The enemy had turned south and were also in single line ahead, the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau leading. Admiral Cradock signalled: "I am going to attack the enemy."

Range Was Too Great.

"The enemy was at that time 15,000 yards away," says the report, and maintained this range, at the same time jambling the wireless signals. The sun was setting immediately behind the British ships, and while it remained above the horison the British had the advantage in the light, but the range was too great.

"When the sun had set and visibility conditions were altered, the British ships were silhouetted against the afterglow, and the falling light made the enemy difficult to see.

"The German opened fire at 7 o'clock at 12,000 yards, followed in quick succession by the British. The growing darkness and heavy spray of the head sea made firing difficult, particularly for the main deck guns of the Good Hope and Monmouth.

Flames 200 Feet High.

"The enemy, firing salvos, got the range quickly, and their third salvo caused an outbreak of fire on the forepart of both ships, which were constantly on fire until 7.45 in the evening. At 7.50 an immense explosion occurred on the Good Hope amidships, the flames reaching 200 feet high. Total destruction must have followed.

"It was now quite dark. Both sides continued firing at the flashes of the opposing guns. The Monmouth was badly down by the bow and turned away to get her stern to the sea, signalling the Glasgow to that effect.

"At 8.30 the Glasgow signalled to the Monmouth, 'The enemy is approaching us,' but received no reply.

Lost Sight of the Enemy.

"Under the rising moon the enemy's ships could be seen approaching, and as the Glasgow could render the Monmouth no assistance, she proceeded at full speed to avoid destruction. At 8.0 we lost sight of the enemy. At 9.30 we observed flashes of fire, which was doubtless the final attack on the Monmouth.

"Nothing could have been more admirable than the conduct of the officers and men throughout, although it was most trying to receive a great volume of fire with no chance of adequately returning it. All kept perfectly cool; there was no wild firing and discipline was the same as at battle practice. When the target ceased to be visible the gun layers spontaneously ceased fire.

"The serious reverse sustained has entirely failed to impair the spirit of the officers and the ship's company, and it is our unanimous wish to meet the enemy again as soon as possible."

ALLIES ADVANCING ON ST. MIHIEL

PARIS, Nov. 17.—Undeterred by wintry weather and floods, the Germans are still making an effort to break down the allies' defence along the Franco-Belgian frontier. Although the Berlin official report refers to the day as having been a quiet one, there has been an almost continuous artillery duel, with occasional infantry attacks.

The line from the coast to Nieuport, which has been receiving less attention since the Germans began their attempt to get the British out of Ypres, again has been subjected to a bombardment, which is described as a very violent one, while to the south of Dixmunde the Germans have been trying under fire from the allies' cannon to build works to check the flood which compelled them to evacuate part of their trenches.

At other points the big guns again have been busy, and Rheims has been subjected to another rain of shells.

From the allies' point of view probably the most important operations are those to the south of Verdun, where the French troops for some time has been trying further to relieve the pressure which the Germans have been exerting on the fortress. They have at last succeeded in this, according to the French official communication, and besides making some progress on the heights of the Meuse, they have advanced on St. Mihiel, the only point on the left bank of the Meuse which the Germans have been successful in holding.

VANDALISM OF THE GERMANS

Getting Ready to Formulate Claims for Damages Resulting From Violations of Hague Treaty

ST. DIE, Department of Vosges, France, Nov. 18—The French Government is taking careful count of the damage done by the German invaders to French property, and of alleged offences on the part of the enemy deemed to be in contravention of the Hague treaty defining the rules of war.

Various members of the Cabinet, including Premier Viviana, Minister of Justice Briand, Minister of War Miller and Minister of Finance Ribot have visited towns and villages in the territories evacuated by the Germans and have made first hand inquiries along these lines. President Poincare, Gabriel Hanotaux, a former Cabinet officer, and Deputy Maurice Barres have done the same thing, and they are all convinced that an enormous amount of property has been destroyed, the obliteration of which served no military purpose.

Case of St. Die.

Armand Mollard, of the French Foreign Office, is chairman of a commission now taking testimony in the St. Die region as to certain alleged offences on the part of the invaders, as well as the identity of the individuals there in concerned. The property losses undoubtedly will run into hundreds of millions of francs. The town of St. Die is an example. The German occupation lasted thirteen days. During this time forty houses, valued at over 600,000 francs (120,000) were burned, and there are many instances of pillage on record. The Commission under M. Mollard distinguishes between damage resulting from bombardment and destruction without military object. St. Die has been subjected to intermittent bombardment for over forty days.

BRITISH SHIPS SHELL GERMAN TROOP TRAIN

Terrible Toll When Shells Completely Destroyed the Train of Reinforcements Near Coast

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Nov. 18—A terrible toll was taken by the guns of a portion of the allied fleet off Belgium when a German troop train, rushing reinforcements to the battle line, was struck by shells from the warship, wrecked, set on fire, and completely destroyed.

The report of the work of the fleet, which has again been able to get into action with the lifting of the fogs, reached here to-day in despatches from Belgium. Monday they were able to resume their bombardment of the coast towns of Zee Brugge and Knocke, held by the Germans. Some buildings were badly damaged by shell fire. The German train was destroyed running along the coast.

OFFERS HOWITZER BATTERY.

No Call Yet from Imperial Authorities for Howitzer Brigade.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 17. — Lieut.-Col. A. B. Petrie, of Guelph, offers to organize a howitzer brigade of three batteries, 536 officers and men, all told, for overseas service. Ottawa has notified local headquarters that no action will be taken at present as the Imperial authorities have not yet asked for a howitzer brigade. In the event of acceptance the offer stipulates that the full equipment could be drawn from the Guelph Howitzer Corps, of which Col. Petrie is in command.

OLIVE OIL AS FOOD

ONE of the most sensible things in connection with keeping the system in order is the taking of Olive Oil as Food and Medicine. Physicians have advised such uses of the oil, but it has only been of recent date that it has become a "fad." It has been proved in many cases to be not only a corrective of the liver, but a food for the system as well, and is of great benefit for weak stomach and bowels. The dose is usually a teaspoonful of oil to be taken half an hour before breakfast and half an hour after supper. The oil may be freely used with vegetables and on salads, as it is harmless and beneficial. In use may be continued for years, and in restoring the liver to do its work (it is in most cases mildly cathartic), the complexion is cleared of the ugly brown spots and leathery yellow appearance due to torpidity of the liver. The taste is not unpleasant, although a little fat is, in most instances, to be employed. But very few effective medicines are really finely flavoured, although many unpleasant tastes can be disguised. Many physicians strongly recommend the "Tasteless" and "Odorless" Oils as equally as good as others, since the taste and smell do not affect the system, especially children, more greatly considered the Benne imported with it. The best quality oil can be procured in 25c & 50c bottles.

PATRIOTIC MEETING HELD IN SMITH

A meeting of the people of the Township of Smith was held last night. It was not as largely attended as was desired, but the stormy night kept many from attending, who otherwise would have been present. However, much enthusiasm was displayed, and steps were taken to raise funds for patriotic purposes.

Rev. Mr. Ireland occupied the chair, and addresses were given by Mr. J. H. Garbutt and Dr. Cameron of this City.

It was decided to appoint a collector in each of the twelve school sections to canvass for contributions to the Patriotic Fund. The Ladies' Aid Societies of the various churches will be asked to work in conjunction with the War Fund Committee of Peterborough.

The following officers were elected:
President—Ex-Warden Scott.
Vice-President—Councillor Northey.
Secretary—Mr. J. H. Garbutt.
Treasurer—Mr. J. W. Kelly.

The next meeting will be held on Saturday, Nov. 28, in the County Council Chamber.

CHAPTER XXXII.

The Meeting of the Bands.

Convinced though Stern now was of the reality of the amazing sight he had just witnessed through his binoculars, yet for a long moment he remained silent and staring, utterly at a loss for any rational explanation of the remarkable apparition.

Exhausted in body and confused in mind, he could hit upon no answer to the riddle.

Might these be some detached and belated members of the Horde? No; for their figures and their gait, as he now for the third time studied them through the glass, were unmistakably human.

But if not Anthropoids, then what? Enemies? Potential friends? Some new and strange race, until now undiscovered?

A score of possible explanations struggled in his mind, only to be rejected. But this was now no time for questions, analysis, or thought. For, even as he looked, the end of the line came to view, then vanished down the blackened hillside.

Invisible, now that they no longer stood silhouetted against the sky-line, the strange company had disappeared as though swallowed up by the earth. Yet Stern well knew that they were coming almost directly down upon him and his little party. Already there was pressing need for swift decision.

What should he do? Advance to meet these strangers? Risk all on a mere chance? Or turn, retreat and hide. Or ambush them, and kill?

He found himself, for the moment, unable to make up his mind. Yet, should a pinch arise and the last contingency become necessary, he felt a powerful advantage. He was positive his little band, armed as they were, could easily wipe out this column. But, after all, must he fight?

His questions all unsettled and his mind confused from the terrible exhaustions of the march, he waited. He surveyed the neighbourhood, with a view to possible battle.

On his left rose a ridge that swung to northward between the advancing column and his own position. On his right an arroyo or gully, choked with fallen tree-trunks and burned forest wreckage, descended in an easterly direction toward a rather deep valley. In this gully he saw was ample hiding-place for his whole force.

"Men!" he addressed them: "it is strange to tell, but these be others who come against us there!" He pointed at the far crest of the saw-like highlands, where now thought to see a hazy, floating pall of dust.

"Until we know their purpose and their temper we must have care. We must hide ourselves and wait. Come, then, quickly! And prepare your guns against the need of battle!"

His words aroused and heartened his exhausted men. The prospect even of war was welcome — anything in place of this unending trek through the burned wilderness.

Zangamon cried: "Where be those that come, O Kromno? And what manner of men?"

"Yonder," indicated Stern. "I know not who, save that they be men. Wait but a little and you shall know. Now to the ravine!"

All got up, and with more energy than they had shown for some time, they trailed to the gully. Here they were soon well entrenched, with weapons ready. Stern now felt confident of the situation, however it might turn.

They waited. Some little talk trickled up and down the line, but for the most part the men kept quiet, watching eagerly.

Now already the dust of the advancing column had grown unmistakably visible, drifting downward in a thin haze that ever advanced more and more to the south-east, came nearer always, and rose higher in their view.

"Be ready, men," cautioned Stern. "In a few minutes, now, the foremost will pass over that blackened hilltop there ahead of us!"

Higher and thicker grew the dust. A far, shrill cry sounded; and some minutes later the breaking of wood became audible as the column cut through a charred barrier.

Stern was half standing, half lying in the arroyo, only his head projecting over a charcoal mass that once had been a date-palm.

His weapon hung, well balanced, in his hand. All along the edge of the gully other pistol and rifle barrels were poked through debris. Forgotten now were sore and wounded feet, thirst, hunger, ophthalmia, discouragement — everything. This new excitement had wiped all pain away.

Suddenly Allan started, and a little nervous thrill ran down his spine. Over the top of the hill they all were watching a moving object had suddenly become visible—a head!

Another followed, and then a third, and many more; and now the shoulders and the bodies had begun to show; and now the whole advance guard of the mysterious marching column was plainly to be seen, not more than a quarter-mile away.

Allan jerked the binoculars to his eyes, and for a long moment peered through them.

"What?" he exclaimed. "But—it's impossible! I—it can't be—"

Again he looked, and this time was forced to believe what seemed to him beyond all bounds of possibility.

"Our own people! The Folk!" he cried in a loud voice. And before his men could sense it he was out of the ravine.

His first thought was a relief expedition from Settlement Cliffs, but how could there be so many? Those who had remained at the colony were only twenty-five, all told, and in this long line that still at a good pace was defiling down the hillside already more than fifty had come to view, with more and ever more still topping the rise.

Utterly at a loss though he was, incapable of seeing any clue to the tremendous riddle, he still retained enough wit to hail the column, now passing down the slope some three or four hundred yards to westward.

"Ohe, Merucaan v'yolku!" he shouted between hollowed palms. "Yomnu! Troin ika ieri!"

Already his men had scrambled from concealment, and were waving hands and weapons, cloaks, burned brushwood, anything they could lay hands on, to attract attention. Their shouts and hails drowned out the master's.

But the meaning of the words mattered little. For the column on the hillside, understanding, had stopped short in its tracks.

Then suddenly, with yells, it dissolved into confusion of its component parts; and at a run the people of the Ahwa swarmed to the greeting of their kinsmen and their own, the colonists.

Barbarians as the Folk still were, they met with a vociferous affection. A regular tangi, or joy-wailing, followed, and all crowded vociferously about Stern, with hails of "Kromno! Long live our Kromno, our great chief!" in their own speech.

But Allan, dumfounded by this incredible happening, broke the ceremony as short as possible. The sight of these unexpected reinforcements dazed him. He managed to keep some coherence of thought, however, and flung rapid questions, to which he got scant answers.

Amazed, he stared at the newcomers, now shouting with their relatives from the colony in wild abandon. To his vast astonishment he saw that they had contrived eye-shields similar to those of his own party, and that they had likewise painted their faces.

They had supplies as well — dried fish, seaweed, crated waterfowl, and even fresh game. Allan's astonishment knew no bounds.

He laid a compelling hand on the shoulder of one, Rigvin, whom he remembered as a mighty caster of the nets on the Great Sunken Sea.

"Oh, Rigvin!" he commanded. "Come aside with me. I must have speech at once!"

"I come, O Kromno. Speak, and I make answer!"

"How came ye here without the flying boat? How did ye escape from the Abyss? Whither went ye? Tell me all!"

"We waited, Kromno, but you came not. Did you forget your people in the darkness?"

"No, Rigvin. There has been great distress in Settlement Cliffs. The flying boat is lost. Even now we seek it. Enemies attacked. We destroyed them, but had to sweep the world with fire, as ye see. Many things have happened to keep me from my people. But how came ye here? How have ye done this strange thing, always deemed impossible?"

APPEARED ON HIS FACE AND HANDS.

The primary cause of pimples arises from the blood not being in a good condition. When the blood becomes impure you will find that pimples will break out all over the body, but more particularly on the forehead, nose and chin, and although they are not a dangerous trouble, they make you appear unsightly both to your friends and yourself. What you need, when these pimples break out, is to get a real good blood purifying medicine such as Burdock Blood Bitters. One that will build up the system by cleansing the blood of all the impurities and poisons which cause the skin to break out in these eruptions.

Mr. F. A. McKenzie, Portage La Prairie, Man., writes: "Last summer I was all run down and unfit for work of any kind. All kinds of food seemed distasteful to me. Pimples appeared on my face and hands, and I seemed to grow worse every day. One day a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. Half-heartedly I did so, and the results obtained were marvellous. I regained my health, I took on flesh, and in a short time the pimples and skin eruptions disappeared entirely; thanks to the healing powers of B.B.B. I freely recommend it to all sufferers."

ABOUT CONSUMPTION

Every day, we are receiving letters from users of this medicine telling us of the benefit they have had by its use.

Mrs. Martyn, of 46 Garden Avenue, Toronto, who before taking "Copeland's Cure for Consumption" had been treated by different doctors for several years without benefit, writes to say:

Mr. Copeland:

Dear Sir,—After taking several bottles of your Consumption Cure, I would like to make known to others the benefit I derived from its use.

I was very much run down when I commenced taking your medicine, but now I have fully recovered, and in four months have gained 17 pounds. I cannot speak too highly of it, and will be pleased to recommend it to any who enquire as to its merits. You may publish this letter if you wish, and, if so, I trust that it will reach the eyes of some poor sufferers and save them from the dreadful disease of consumption.

Yours respectfully,
(Sgd.) MRS. MARTYN,
46 Garden Ave, Toronto.
Nov. 27, 1912.

That was written two years ago, since when Mrs. Martyn has enjoyed excellent health and has taken every opportunity to tell others what this medicine did for her.

Records are on file of some extreme cases of consumption, one of which, now a well-known case of a man given up as hopeless by his doctor and a specialist, who said that he could not live more than 6 or 10 days. To-day he is alive and well and it was "Copeland's Cure for Consumption" that pulled him through.

Letters have been received and are on file from individuals who have suffered from chronic bronchitis for over 30 years and never obtained any permanent benefit until they took this medicine. These letters were written by well-known people and copies will gladly be sent to any person desiring to know what "Copeland's Cure for Consumption" can do for cases of chronic bronchitis.

Those suffering only from weakened lungs and throats to the "down and out" consumptive all testify to the benefit obtained by taking this medicine.

If you are one of these, don't allow another day to pass without getting a bottle to try. It cannot possibly do you harm, but will do you, as it has others, much good.

Sold at drug stores, $1.00 a bottle. Ask your druggist or sent direct in a plain wrapper by Copeland Medicine Company, Limited, 511 Pape Avenue, Toronto. 3-14

THE CANADIAN TROOPS AS SEEN BY AN UNITED STATES CORRESPONDENT

Herbert Corey Says the Canucks Are Among the Empire's Best—Interesting Pen Pictures of a Visit to Salisbury

(By Herbert Corey)

SALISBURY PLAIN, Eng., Nov. 16 —We rode toward a little fire that glowed in the dusk. The scent of warm, tired horses was in the air. From this hollow and that came the sound of equine bickering. The hills rose before us in long even swells, and dropped into depressions in which a bunch of cattle might hide against a storm. Here and there tree plantations, at great distances from each other might have been cottonwoods, nestling in the elbow of a creek in Alberta.

"Look it over" said the colonel of the Canadian contingent; "isn't it just like home?"

That was precisely it. That was what made this camp of 30,000 Canadian volunteers so unutterably good to look at. That is why—or in part why—they are contented and happy. These rolling hills might be in Alberta or North Dakota or in any other portion of that great West which the cattle man opened and the wheat grower seized. The horses, barely seen through the growing dark where they are tethered to their lines, might be the "cavvy" of one of these round-ups which are sentimentally regretted by every old cowpuncher. Even the great steam lorries, lumbering over the muddy roads with a train of transport waggons battering behind, might pass for a "threshing outfit" moving from one ranch to another after the day's work was done. A candle shining through the canvas walls of a tent attracted us. We stepped to the dor.

"So I told this mutt," said a voice that had not been formed by England's fogs, "you tie your butter to the other end of the table. Shabby? Don't you never let it jump on my bread no more."

British writers have referred to the Canadian contingent as "more English than the English." That's pure humour. They are British in their loyalty to the Empire and in their anxiety to go to the front, where the fighting is going on. Now and then one finds a home-bred man who leavens the snappy accents of his mates by broad English a's or a certain uncertainty as to his h's. But if an American from anywhere in that territory which stretches from Galveston to Hudson's Bay were to drop into that camp from an airship, totally ignorant of his whereabouts, his first expression would be:

"Home at last!"

Just Like Our Prairies.

Everything adds to the illusion. Mounted men gallop over the Salisbury Plains, which are like our rolling prairie in every respect except that the bunch grass has become turf, and the sage brush is lacking. They sit their horses in that easy fashion that the cattle business teaches. Their reins hang loose, but at a touch the horses stop and whirl as though they were chasing yearling steers. The horses have that choppy mile-annihilating gallop of Western horses. They are Western horses. One meets an army waggon on the road. The driver hasn't the air of Thomas Atkins, set to driving a team. He poses himself differently. A martinet would say that his lines hang slack. His horses do not wear that aspect of dignity and conservatism that distinguishes the horse of the British Isles. They break readily into a gallop. The off horse shies violently when he sees a steam lorry. Their ears are always pointed forward, and their eyes are widely open. That driver can drive those horses along the comb of Westminster Abbey and never turn a hair.

There is a certain amount of grouching among the men, of course. There always is in every camp. It is an article of faith with them that Valcartier Camp, in Canada is the model upon which all other permanent camps should be built. The English army diet does not correspond to the "grub pile" of the round-up and the "schuck" of the mines, or the "refined table board" one can find in the tree-shaded back streets of Canadian cities. There is no butter, and there are too few vegetables, and the rations are scientifically adapted to the needs of thousands, and therefore sometimes fails to fit the appetite of one.

All Had the Hives.

"We all busted out with hives when we came here," said a lad from Winnipeg. "We averaged about sixty hives to the man. Lemme see. There are 30,000 of us. That would make 1,800,000 hives."

But the hives passed away when the men became accustomed to the new dietary order. Anyhow, this is a different sort of grumbling that one hears here. An English soldier either doesn't "grouse" at all, because his capacity for kicking has been disciplined out of him, or he has a childish and rather appealing way of putting his troubles up to "them." If he were called on to personally titillate sixty personal hives he would feel that in some ill defined way his company officers had failed in their care of him. The Canadians look at it differently.

"We can't expect the grub we got at home," they say. "Anyhow, the War Office has a mighty big job to put a million new men in the field. Some little things is mighty apt to go wrong."

It is only fair to say that the Canadians seem to be the fair-haired boys with the War Office. One hears complaints from other camps of a lack of blankets. The Canadians have three blankets and a rubber sheet and a straw tick to each man. They sleep eight to a tent, whereas in some of the British camps the tents are made to sleep twice that many. Attacks have been made on the food contractors at other camps.

They're all right here," the men say. "We get the grub we're entitled to. Now that we're used to it, it's all right."

London papers have charged that coffee bar contractors have made undue profits out of poor food at other camps. Each Canadian is given four pence a day food commutation to permit him to vary the military ration. The men agree that the food at the coffee bars is plentiful and good. The four pence will buy, as an example, a thick and meaty sandwich, a cup of strong coffee and a hunk of raisin dabbled bread. They couldn't do that well at the price in town. They have quite as much leave as is good for them. On my way to London I occupied an unobtrusive corner of a compartment. In it were two Canadian officers and an obvious officer of British regulars. The Canadians were complaining.

Britons Don't Know a Canadian Joke

"It takes too much of our time to go to town," said they. "We've been to London twice this week—and it's a three-hour journey each way. That 's a rotten waste."

The regular didn't see the buried humour nor the twinkle in the Canadian eye. He wanted to know if he could help. He suggested, diffidently, that he knew some chaps in the War Office.

"Your conversation," said the Canadian, "listens like a dove. Do you know anybody who has a pull with King George"

The English regular for the first time became painfully aware that a civilian was in the carriage.

"Because" continued the Canadian "I want to get him to send the Horse Guards off to the war and let us swell around Buckingham Palace. I'm the best little guard meunter you ever saw."

"Well," said the regular, escaping, "hope to see you chaps again some time."

He climbed into another compartment and probably perspired profusely all the way to town. The Canadians laughed—and laughed. The incident has its value because of the difference it discloses between the regulars and the trans-Atlantic volunteers. The one is bred to a tradition of aloofness and hauteur. I rode down to Salisbury in a compartment with three regular army officers. They didn't address three words to each other on that journey. I do not know whether they were strangers to each other or not. At Salisbury I shared an automobile to West Downs South Camp with a Canadian colonel. At the camp he thrust his head out of the window.

"Hey, Slim," said he. "Oh, Slim! Whatteryah doing over here?"

If Slim isn't a private I can only say that he looked like one. He was a well-fed, red-cheeked, jolly, businesslike soldier in sprouting whiskers and an open tunic. He explained that as he can bookkeep like a defaulting cashier he had been put at that job. He thought it was hard luck. He could keep books in Montreal.

"Looks like that's a horse on you, Slim," said the Colonel, grinning.

Equal to the Best British.

In London there are various volunteer organizations made up of bank clerks and young lawyers and artists and sportsmen and the like. Their material is magnificent. The men are clean cut, alert, wide shouldered, thin flanked, with intelligence and ginger and courage showing all over them. It is generally reputed that these men are destined for non-commissioned rank as soon as they have learned to discharge the N. C. duties. Many of them will go higher. These are the only English volunteer organizations I have seen—mark the qualification—that can sustain comparison with the Canadians. I have no hesitation in declaring my conviction that the Canadians are quite equal company by company, to the best of the English volunteers. I do not believe there is a body of 30,000 English volunteer troops that can even be compared to them. It isn't any wonder. These men are Canada's first line.

"Did you ever hear of Redcliff, Alberta?" asked a Captain named Daniels.

The colonel in the carriage said he had. "It's my town," said Daniels. "I'm an ex-Mayor of it. Four of us went down from Minneapolis and started it."

The Canadians are full of fellows like that. In my first half hour I ran across a bank president—he explained that it was a rather small bank, but sound—and three or four lawyers and a few reporters and innumerable huskies who own their own farms. Some of them are privates and some are officers. Off duty, the difference in rank didn't seem to bother anyone except stray British officers. On duty, the men marched like veterans and drilled almost like circus Zouaves. They discussed the events of the war with an intelligence you could never find in the British regulars, even if they did run short sometimes in technical knowledge.

Salisbury Camp consists of four separate encampments, several miles apart, and about twenty miles from Salisbury Station. The automobile road — and the camp can only be reached by some sort of conveyance —runs through an English countryside of the sort one sees painted in picture galleries. The road is strung with little, old-world villages of thatched roofs and smallpaned windows. They might have served as models for any one of Will Owen's sketches. The camp itself is on the famed English downs. In off-seasons these hills are covered with black-faced sheep, where to-day the Canadians do their six or eight hours a day of training.

Getting Into Shape.

They are working hard. Three weeks on the steamships—because of a much criticised hitch in arrangements—left men and horse "soft." A horse couldn't walk a mile without panting. Then men could hardly "shoulder arms" without a grunt. But they have been well handled here. A foot of soft turf covers the chalk rock that underlies all this section and makes an ideal cushion for the marching feet. The camp is supplied with piped water, the sanitary arrangements are excellent, and it is fairly evident that the ground selected will be very healthy. It is true that the roads betray a weak-minded willingness to dissolve in mud under heavy transports and the frequent rain that have accompanied the artillery practice. The turf does not dry out as rapidly as could be asked. But the men are fit as fighting cocks.

And to me again emphasize the Americanism of the outfit. I do not mean Canadian Americanism or United States Americanism, but that Americanism that runs from the tMexican line north. They talk Texas talk and New York talk as well as Calgary talk and Toronto talk. While the chauffeur was cranking up for the start back to town I overheard an illuminating bit of dialogue. A tall private was wagging a long finger in the face of an individual who wore an apron of sacking and an air of violent innocence.

"You know what I did with a cook like you one time down on the White River?" asked the tall private, his finger vibrating viciously. "I just naturally made him eat his own grub. Yes, sir. He had his choice between his own biscuits and a saddle leather and eh took the biscuits."

Blood of Iron.
Nerves of Steel
The Hero of Waterloo an Example of the Red Blooded Leaders of Men Who Have Moulded the British Empire.
Red Blood is the foundation of health, strength, vigor and courage. When the blood is rich the nerve cells, wasted by work and worry, are quickly replaced, and the high-water mark of health and vigor is maintained.
With an abundance of red corpuscles in the blood you can defy colds, contagious diseases and the ills and pains which accompany sudden changes of temperature.
The remarkable success of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a restorative of exhausted nerves and a run-down condition of the system is due to its influence as a creator of new, rich, red blood. It is a true tonic, a builder of cells and tissues, and for this reason is both thorough and lasting in the benefits which it bestows.
Mr. R. B. Hillman, Purbrook, Muskoka, Ont., writes:—"About four years ago I was all run down and could not work, and as to writing a letter, I could not do it on account of my hand shaking so badly. My nerves were unstrung and I was troubled with a nervous breakdown. I could not sleep soundly, and would start up so suddenly as to almost jump out of bed. My kidneys were bad, too, and I had awful pains in the back all day. I doctored with our family doctor, but he did not seem to know what I needed. I was recommended to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and could sleep well three nights after starting the use of the Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills. I take great pleasure in recommending these medicines, as I have proved that they do all that is claimed for them."

Bring Back Your Appetite

With a Little Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet, the Secret of Perfect Digestion.

You should see our farmers and their boys eating in the fields. On the farm five meals a day is the rule. No one ever has stomach trouble because meals are digested and people live normally.

In the city we lose our "pep" and indigestion, dyspepsia, stomach trouble, etc., make us look on five meals as an impossibility.

A majority of people have come to know the blessings which an occasional use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets confer upon the stomach. They are unquestionably the most popular remedy known, for the reason that dyspepsia is the national disease, and these wonderful little tablets have long since acquired a national reputation as a thoroughly reliable and efficient cure for all forms of dyspepsia and indigestion.

No matter how great the excess of food taken into the stomach, one or two of these tablets will digest every particle of it. A package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets should always be in the house. Many a person has saved himself from a serious attack of acute indigestion by using them after heavy meals, such as are eaten Christmas, New Year's, Thanksgiving and other holidays and festal seasons.

After attending banquets, late suppers, heavy fancy dinners, after-theatre parties, etc., where one has dined sumptuously and luxuriantly, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets should invariably be used, as they digest the food perfectly and completely, and prevent all possibility of dyspepsia, which, without their use, is more than likely to ensue.

Go to your druggist to-day and buy a box. A small sample package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will be mailed free to any one who will address F. A. Stuart Co., 180 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Itching and Burning. Restless and Fretful at Night. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In Two Months No Trace of Trouble.

Kincardine, Ont.—"My child's trouble began with a rash around the ears. This spread over the surface of the body turning to small sores which were itching and burning. The rash also appeared on my child's face and for the time disfigured him. The itching was so intense that it continually caused him to irritate the eruption by continually scratching. He was restless and fretful at night.

"Without success I tried remedies. The first two applications of Cuticura Soap and Ointment stopped the burning and eased the itching. We first bathed him using the Soap and then applied the Ointment. In two months' time no trace of the trouble was seen." (Signed) C. Campbell, May 26, 1914.

MAN OF THE HOUR IN GREAT BRITAIN

K. of K.

"HE would be a splendid manager of the War Office; he would be a splendid manager of anything," wrote the late Mr. G. W. Steevens of "K. of K.," as Field Marshal Lord Kitchener is familiarly known over the whole of the British Empire. "His precision is so unhumanly unerring; he is more like a machine than a man." And another critic has declared him to be another Wellington; but more terrible, "a man without bowels, without a friend, hated by many, feared by all," and "a man who will pull things through."

At the time the foregoing words were written Lord Kitchener was busy "pulling things though" in the last South African war; but nobody ever dreamed that he would be set to such a task as he is now engaged upon, of endeavoring to "pull things through" as Minister of War.

What Steevens foresaw some fifteen years ago the British government has only lately realized. A soldier at the head of the War Office has never been known before, never been dreamed of. But "K. of K." is more than a soldier. He is one of the greatest diplomatists of his day; a man of infinite tact and resource, strong willed; a man who will not budge an inch until he can see clearly whither he is going; a man who spares neither himself nor those acting with and under him in getting ready; a man who acts upon the old Scotch saw, "Never put in your hand any further than you can easily draw it back again;" a man who never draws back once he has set forward; a man who has never known defeat. In a word Lord Kitchener of Khartoum, is thorough. All that he has accomplished in his career is proof of that.

That Kitchener came within an ace—so, at least, he has said himself—of missing the great opportunities which have come to him is enough to make the British soul tremble in view of what is happening now. It has been said that no man alive is indispensable. But what, in these terrible days, would Britain be without Kitchener?

As a boy knocking about the Kerry hills he became infatuated with the Kerryman's love of France, and when the Franco-Prussian War broke out he crossed the channel and took his side with France. He afterward called it a "mad-cap step," but he is none the worse for his madness to-day.

"When I saw France being beaten to the earth I could not resist the temptation to fight for her," he said while the war was still going on, "even though it is a desperate business, as I fear it is. If I get through this scrape I will try to get back to Soudhurst, although I fear it will not be possible. We have good friends and the authorities may overlook my escapade, which may be very foolish, but it is at least not dishonorable."

Kitchener got through, and he has got through many other things since then. That he will "get through" his part in the present war with the same success that he has always achieved no one in England doubts. With "K. of K." organizing the British army, speeding its reinforcements on the way to the front, building up for Great Britain an army such as she has never possessed in her history, all, in the British mind, cannot fail to go well.

All England has been perfectly calm, placidly watching the progress of the war with never a doubt as to its ultimate result, ever since his dramatic appointment to the War Office. The British public demanded that Lord Kitchener should be made Secretary for War, and never did a government so quickly submit to the will of the people. Lord Kitchener was stopped at Dover, on his way to Egypt, and called back. He came and accepted the office, but only on condition that he should have an absolutely free hand, that he alone should be responsible, that all his directions should be carried out without "let or hindrance." How far he is succeeding all the world can judge.

The public chafed at the apparent delay in sending troops to the front. But they were far from delayed. An army of 100,000 men, rapidly increased to 200,000 of England's best troops, were fighting on French soil before the public realized it. Lord Kitchener, thorough in everything he does, was thorough then as he always has been.

Like most of Britain's greatest generals, Lord Kitchener of Khartoum is of Irish birth; he first saw the light at Crotter House, Ballylongford, County Kerry, on June 24, 1850. Like many other distinguished generals he was the son of a distinguished army officer, his father being the late Colonel H. H. Kitchener, having at one time been in command of the Royal Engineers, Chatham. Some biographers say that it was while this appointment was current in County Kerry that the future Field Marshal was born, but his [illegible] three years before young Kitchener's birth.

From his birth he was destined for the army, though the selection of the Engineers for him did not promise great opportunities. Instead of fighting and winning his spurs early in life he was set to the drudgery of surveying in Palestine. But what in the case of most people would have foredoomed them to obscurity, in Kitchener's case was a stepping stone to success; for the leisure that might have been wasted or misused was utilized for the acquiring of dialects, which, perhaps more than anything else, afterward procured for him his appointment of Sirdar in Egypt.

When he volunteered for service in the Egyptian army and became a beau sabreur in a native regiment of cavalry he had an immense advantage over his comrades. He could speak Arabic like a native. He could disguise himself so that the most astute native could not detect him. In this way he dwelt among Arabs and discovered their secrets, obtaining over them a hold and a power which enabled him to render perfidy harmless and discount their discontent. From that time his career has been one of steady and unbroken brilliance.

His ceaseless activity and faculty for organization overcame all obstacles. One difficulty overcome he has always shown eagerness to encounter another. It was his hand that fashioned the native Egyptian army, built up a splendid fighting force out of the rawest material and made the conquest of the Soudan a possibility.

Lord Kitchener was in command of the Egyptian cavalry in 1882 at the retaking of Tokar, in the Soudan, when a bullet from a heavy Remington rifle missed, as by a miracle, both windpipe and jugular and was imbedded in the back muscles of the neck. It was a spent bullet, which, by the way, is much more immediately painful to the victim than the other kind. It knocked the commandant flat out of his saddle and set him coughing for seconds of hours. Moreover it altogether declined abstraction. There were no X-rays in those days. For nearly six months that bullet stuck there. At last, through the vicarious agency of an errant fishbone, the Sirdar fell to coughing violently and suddenly found Osman Digna's souvenir in his table napkin.

It was during this period in his career that he performed most of his daring feats, disguising himself, passing into the enemy's camp, learning their plans, and making the acquaintance of suspected spies by pretending to be a spy. So well disguised was he that on one occasion one of his soldiers cut his head open with a stone.

Lord Kitchener's most important adventure at this period was when, after the fall of Berber, he undertook to reach the mysterious Mahdi Mustapha Zaar of Dinka. With [illegible] to use, in disguise he [illegible] rifle across the desert and did not return until he had changed the Mudir's intention to become one of the Mahdi's Emirs.

In his reconquest of the Soudan Kitchener may have been slow, but he was sure. He followed the Roman policy of building roads and advancing toward his goal by short stages, only in the Soudan the roads were railroads. His motto was that difficulties were made to be overcome. His work in the Soudan was hardly finished when he was called upon to co-operate with Lord Roberts as Chief of the Staff after Sir Redvers Buller, Lord Methuen and General Gatacre had met with disaster in South Africa. Kitchener changed the whole aspect of the Boer War.

As Commander in Chief in India he reorganized the whole system, and when his term of office expired he left behind him nine divisions of well trained troops ready for active service, instead of the three there had been when he took command.

The character of Lord Kitchener has been described as sullen, sombre, unbending, but that is the description of certain newspaper correspondents who, perhaps, have studied him from a distance. I have mentioned that he is known familiarly as "K. of K." and a nickname is usually the hallmark of a good fellow. He is a good fellow, with a keen sense of humor.

A raw subaltern was sent out to South Africa toward the close of the Boer War. As he happened to be very highly connected, the mail carried a sheaf of letters from high personages asking that he be given special opportunities for distinguishing himself.

"Certainly," said Kitchener, with a quiet smile, "send him to —— blockhouse."

"That's a very unlikely place," suggested one of his staff.

"Exactly," said Kitchener. "But if the Boers should attack in force and he should succeed in defending it he would distinguish himself very greatly."

Neither contingency happened.

Many first rate critics of the armchair variety severely criticised Kitchener's block house system, but the youngest general in the British army, as he was then, knew what he was doing. It was a slow business, but it was vindicated by the results, by which he succeeded in completely paralyzing the Boer forces and compelling them, prepared, as they declared they were, to fight to the last man, to lay down their arms.

A silent man, he believes in deeds, not words. His gift of silence is one of his greatest powers over the crowd. His silence springs from a solitary nature; his austere mind, indifferent alike to attack or praise, is fixed only on the task in hand. What he has done, he has done. If you like it, all right; if you don't like it, that is your affair. He would think as little of placating public opinion as Coriolanus thought of flattering the mob. Even if he is found out he does not trouble. No one of his time has said so little and done so much, nor has any one of his time gone so far with so entire a reliance upon his own merits and so complete a scorn of the arts of advertisement. It cannot even be said that he owes his success to an electric personality or to indisputable genius. It is true that his presence gives a sense of security and power. If he does not make you feel brave he at least makes you feel strong.

His process of thought may be slow; he belongs more to the school of Wellington or Grant than to the school of Napoleon or Lee. He will "fight it out on that line if it takes all summer."

He has the patience of Torres Vedras rather than the swift inspiration of Austerlitz. His merit, in short, is for organization rather than for battle. He may not be a great warrior, though there are many who will ask if his victories in the field did not prove him a great fighter. At any rate, like Clarnot or Moltke, he is a great organizer of victory. Both in Egypt and South Africa his reward was that of an engineer slowly and surely sapping and mining the fastnesses of the enemy, here building a railway and penetrating the desert, there carrying out a vast system of blockhouses to round up the Boers, striking only when his schemes were perfected. In everything he is the business man of war—cold, calculating, merciless, moving without pity or passion to his goal.

Some men say that Kitchener is cruel. But he is cruel only in the sense that he is engaged in a cruel game, which has no place for humanitarianism. He believes in Lord Fisher's "Three R's of War":—"Ruthless," "Relentless," "Remorseless." Lord Roberts' failure in Paardeberg was due to the horror of the sacrifice of life and his determination to wait for surrender rather than the shedding of more blood. Lord Kitchener has no such qualms.

Although he is not cruel, he is without compassion. He keeps his eye on the end and steels his heart against the dictates of pity. To him soldiering is not a profession; it is a religion. Solitary, without home ties, living his life in strange lands, he is a martinet to himself and insists upon the same hard regimen for others. He would have no married officers with him in the Soudan, nor would he allow his staff to go to Cairo for the dissipations of the season. So in South Africa he refused to permit any of his officers to be joined by their wives at Pretoria.

He may be a harsh taskmaster, but he is obeyed.

"How long will it take you?" he will ask one to whom he has assigned a military operation.

"Twelve days."

"You must do it in six;" and it is done in five.

A merciless purpose dominates his subjugation of the enemy. It was shown in his burning of the Boers' farms and moving of their women and children into the concentration camps. It seemed cruel, but it was necessary to conquer an ultra-stubborn enemy. He desecrated the grave of the Mahdi, and threw the head of the "traitor" into the river, which raised an outcry against him among Christians and Mohammedans alike. But it had to be done, lest the grave should become a shrine, and the seat of further rebellion; for he understood the native character better than any other man of his race did. His is the iron hand without the velvet glove.

His probity, too, is splendid. For corruption, jobbery, intrigue, he has the most intense detestation. While he was in South Africa the contractor was held in an iron grip. He will never try to fit any but the square man into the country hole. It is no use pointing out to him that a candidate for a position is A good fellow, a first rate polo player, that his uncle is the Duke of ——, and that he was educated at Eton.

His policy in that of Napoleon's.

"What has he done?"

If he does not answer that apparently he has no use for him, even though he [illegible] his influence.

[illegible] less significant of the man was the memorable scene at Fashoda, when he met Major Marchand, and war between Britain and France trembled in the balance. It proved him one of the ablest diplomatists of his time. Nobody who watched events then can forget the masterly tactics by which Kitchener got his own country and France out of an extremely tight place. Marchand has himself recorded the dialogue, one of the greatest of history, so diplomatic, so full of immense significance.

The French flag floated over the fort; but the Egyptian flag must fly in its place. So said the Sirdar. The Major was firm; but Kitchener was firm also. The penalty was the plunging of two great and friendly nations into war, perhaps the ruin of two nations which might some day require the services of each other in more serious business.

"Kitchener the mystic," he has been called by one of his critics. But one wonders if he was then a real seer into the future.

And then Kitchener did a thing characteristic of another side of his nature. When he met Major Marchand he noted that he and his gallant French comrades were half dead with fever and hunger. Sending for doctors, drugs and wine, he carried Marchand off to his tent, filled up for himself and his guest stiff glasses of whiskey and soda, and, in this exchange of courtesies, passed one of the most perilous crises that ever occurred in the relations of two great nations.

There is no record of Kitchener ever having spoken of this affair, except in his report to the War Office. He was ever modest in discussing his own experiences. A war correspondent has told how, after Atbara, when the great blow had finally been struck at the power of the Khalifa, he went to Kitchener's quarters to congratulate him. The General held up his hand. "Thank you! thank you!" he said earnestly. And then, as if to himself, in a terror of the thoughts to which his visitor's words gave birth, "My God! If I had failed!"

This correspondent told how on one occasion he presented himself to Kitchener to get his signature for a pass to the front. Every one knows the Field Marshal's stern objection to newspaper correspondents accompanying the armies in the field. He disliked them at the time of the South African war, but he did not carry his objections so far as he is doing in the present war.

"I suppose you have come for your papers," he said, and then, twisting the pass between his fingers, he added:—"Do you know what I would like to do with you? I would like to have you sent to the rear and shot. But as I cannot have my way, I suppose I must give you the pass." And with a stroke of the pen he completed and laughingly handed over the license for the civilian critic.

Born ruler of men as he is, cool, stern, remorseless in war as he is, Lord Kitchener has also the tenderest of hearts. His cold manner is probably very largely the result of coyness, for, strange as it may seem, he is shy and reserved. He is a man who "keeps himself to himself," as the verse goes, to an extent that would be remarkable in a man of any position in any class of society. At the Service Club, of which he occasionally makes one, he is never by any chance seen in conversation with another fellow member. He lunches by himself, and after lunch betakes himself to a corner of the smoking room, where, sitting alone, he glances through a newspaper while drinking his coffee. He will only be occupied thus for the fewest possible minutes. Then he gets up, leaves the club, and goes, as he came, alone.

Equally his disciplinarian methods are all that his popular reputation in this respect makes him appear. But stern and unrelenting though he may be in the field, Lord "K. of K." is a man who loves peace. His kindness and consideration to the vanquished when peace was declared at Vereeniging has never been forgotten by the Boer population in South Africa. He called together the peoples of the various denominations and told them that he was desirous of celebrating the happy event. It was his wish to avoid anything that appeared like a triumph over the enemy. He therefore proposed the thanksgiving service in which both Boer and Briton could join.

The English Bishop, thinking to draw the general, said that he would like to give out the hymn, "Now thank we all our God," and asked Kitchener what he thought about it. Without moving a muscle Kitchener replied that he thought it a very good hymn, but that "Onward, Christian Soldiers," was equally fine.

And so it happened that a great service was held in which British soldiers and the fighting farmers of the Transvaal, with their wives and children, offered in thanksgiving [illegible] of peace.

"Doctor, them boys is stealin' your green peaches again. Shall I cahse them away?"

"No," he said.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

On the Bosporus

A Turkish Love Story

By GERTRUDE E. HOUSEHOUSE

Selma and Rabieh, two little Turkish girls, the former sixteen, the latter seventeen, living in Constantinople, went one day for a walk together along the bank of the Bosporus. The location of Constantinople is beautiful, and since Leander swam what was then called the Hellespont to visit Hero on the opposite shore it has been associated with romance. History comes in for its share of interest from the time Constantine made the city on its European bank the capital of the Roman empire.

These two Turkish girls each wore the charshaf, the long gown of the women of that country, and veils over their faces. The custom of keeping the face covered is not an obligatory among Turkish women as formerly, and some of them dress in European costume. Yet these girls, being very young and unmarried, did not think of lifting their veils while walking where they would be liable to meet men. But coming to a grassy spot, where their faces would be to the water, they sat themselves down and, throwing their veils back, permitted the cool air to fan their faces.

The Bosporus was covered with all sorts of craft, from the skiff to the ocean steamer lying at anchor, while on the opposite shore towered a profusion of buildings, minarets and trees. The boats did not come very near the slope on which the girls were sitting, so there was no necessity for them to let down their veils. They sat looking at the various craft out on the water, now a little steamer plying between different points on the strait, now a motorboat and now a small sailer with leg-of-mutton sails. It was all so charming, so soothing, the breeze was so refreshing that the maidens reclined on the slope, Rabieh laying her head in Selma's lap.

It was not long before Rabieh was dozing and Selma was blinking. There was a sharp point on one side of them which cut off the shore in that direction. A rowboat came round the point and passed within a few yards of them. Selma, who was nodding, suddenly started at seeing a young man with a pair of oars in his hands looking straight at her.

At sixteen a girl may be captured by a look. The young man, who was but a few years Selma's senior, was wrapt in admiration and expressed it in every feature of his face. To Selma he seemed so beautiful that for a moment she forgot to drop her veil. Then, remembering to do so, she shut off what was to the young man a vision of love linens.

"Rabieh," exclaimed Selma, shaking her friend, "wake up and let down your veil! That boat you see pulling away came very near us. The young man in it is, oh, so beautiful! He has a face that must have been copied from that of Allah."

Rabieh yawned, agoze, and the girls walked on.

It was not long after this that Selma and her mother were crossing the Bosporus in one of the little steamers used for ferriage. They were seated in the harem, as all women's apartments in Turkey are called, and were unveiled. A flutter of wind blew aside a window curtain, and there on the deck without sat the young man who had looked upon Selma while she was sitting on the shore. For the second time the two pairs of eyes met, and for the second time through them two hearts leaped toward each other.

After that Selma saw the young man several times, though he did not see her, for she was always veiled. Once they passed each other on the Galata bridge, once in Stamboul and again in Scutari. Every time she met him she studied his face and either saw or fancied she saw the wrapt expression of a lover.

At the meeting in Stamboul, Selma was walking with her Aunt Lelia.

"That is Orkhan, the son of a very dear friend of mine," said the aunt.

"Is he a fine young man?" asked Selma, with a tremor in her voice that she could scarcely conceal.

"A very fine young man indeed."

There was silence for some time between them, during which Lelia had forgotten having met Orkhan. Presently Selma said:

"Aunt Lelia, when will mamma arrange a marriage for me?"

"I don't know, child. Do you wish to be married?"

"Certainly. Doesn't every girl wish to be married?"

"Well, dear, I will speak to mamma about it."

Soon after this conversation Selma's mother, Gulistan, at her sister's suggestion determined to look about for a husband for Selma. She knew no men personally—Turkish women know no one but those of their own sex—so she made inquiries among her friends for a marriageable young man. Aunt Lelia also took a hand in the matter and quite naturally called on Orkhan's mother, Mikri, to ask if a match could be arranged between Orkhan and Selma. Mikri said she would see about it.

"Mikri says," said Lelia, "that she proposed to Orkhan to get a wife for him, but he will not marry; that he is looking for a girl he has seen on the bank of the Bosporus and again on a steamer. If he can find her he will marry her, but no one else."

This was very harrowing to Selma. The man she desired wanted her, and she wanted him, but could not find her. He must not be informed who or where she was, because a Turk sees his bride's face for the first time when he lifts her veil immediately after the wedding ceremony. An American girl would have found a dozen ways to make herself known without appearing to have anything to do with the matter. But Turkish women, especially the girls, are very helpless.

But Aunt Lelia was a woman, and even a Turkish woman likes to have her own way. She knew nothing of the meeting between her niece and Orkhan, but his mother was the only woman she knew who had a marriageable son, and she determined to get him for Selma. Lelia was wealthy, and she offered Mikri a large dowry for Selma if her marriage with Orkhan could be brought about. Mikri told her son that he must stop dreaming about the girl he had seen and, like a dutiful son, marry the woman she had provided for him. He promised to think about it and at last gave in because he need not be restricted to one wife and if he ever found the girl with whom he had fallen in love he could marry her as well.

One day Gulistan told her daughter that she had found a husband for her and that they must begin to make preparations for the wedding. Of late years there is not always an objection to letting the bride know something of the appearance of the man she is to marry. Gulistan, not dreaming that Selma had ever seen Orkhan, showed her his picture, telling her that he was to be her husband. Selma, who had been almost crazed at the thought of marrying any one except the man she loved, on seeing the photograph was like one reprieved just before an expected execution. How she ever concealed her emotion she never knew herself.

Meanwhile Orkhan continued to look for the girl on whom he had set his heart, for the expense of living has risen in Turkey as well as elsewhere, and only wealthy men can afford more than one wife. The young man was very miserable, for he wished to find the girl he loved in time to break with the wife his mother had provided for him. But since he was permitted to look upon the face of no woman except his wife how could he find her? He had passed her three times without recognising her, she being veiled.

The wedding day came, and he had not found her. The women were seated, most of them smoking cigarettes and eating sweetmeats. Then they were taken to inspect the apartments to be occupied by the bride and groom, in which were the wedding presents and the trousseau, the latter including articles of apparel belonging to the groom. Then the guests were seated in a large room to await the entrance of the wedding party. The bride, veiled, was brought to the door of the house, where she was met by the groom. He led her into the house and past the guests, who were elbowing one another to get a view of the bridal pair, into a chamber, the door of which was closed behind them.

This is the moment when at Turkish weddings the groom lifts his bride's veil and for the first time looks upon her face. Orkhan had proceeded thus far like one going to a funeral rather than a wedding. How the bride looked no one could tell, for her face was covered. The two stood alone. The groom, conforming to what was expected of him, raised the veil.

A pretty subject for an artist would be this incident—the man's face changing from indifference to surprise and delight at recognizing the girl he loved, she looking up at him lovingly, enjoying his surprise, mingling her happiness with his. Then they were locked in a long embrace.

Curiously enough, there is no other marriage ceremony in Turkey than this, though there is always a formal betrothal some time before. No religious ceremony corresponding to those of European peoples is required. The marriage with the Moslem is simply taking possession of his wife.

The Orator Stuck.

"Who is there," cried the impassioned orator, "who will lift a voice against the truth of my statement?"

Just then a donkey on the outskirts of the crowd gave vent to one of the piercing 'hee-haws' of the tribe.

The laugh was on the orator for a moment; but, assuming an air of triumph, he lifted his voice above the din to say, "I knew nobody but an ass would try it."—London Globe.

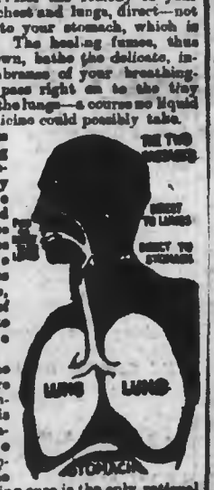
Away with Drugs!

Look at the diagram below. It shows how the lungs and the stomach are entirely separate organs reached by entirely separate tubes. What you swallow goes to the stomach. What you breathe (and only what you breathe) gets to the lungs and air passages direct.

Now you see how useless it is, when you have a cold, or a cough, or bronchitis, or catarrh, to dose the stomach (which may be quite healthy) with drugs! What you need is something you can breathe to the lungs direct!

That is Pepa.

Pepa is the name of a new scientific preparation containing highly medicinal essences and pine extracts, condensed into tablet form. You put a Pep on your tongue, and as it slowly dissolves, these volatile essences turn into vapor. You BREATHE the remedy to your sore, ailing chest and lungs, direct—not swallow it to your stomach, which is not ailing. The healing fumes, thus breathed down, bathe the delicate, inflamed membranes of your breathing-tubes, and pass right on to the tiny passages of the lungs—a course no liquid or solid medicine could possibly take.



Pepa fumes are healing and antiseptic. They heal sore tissue and kill disease germs. Pepa bring pine forest fumes to your home, instead of you going to the pine forest!

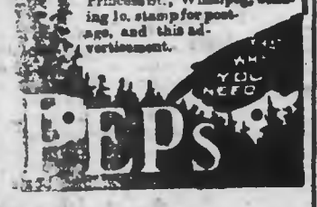
Dominion Senator Praises Pepa

Senator Derbyshire, of Brockville, writing from the Dominion Senate, Ottawa, says:—

"I am pleased to express my high opinion of Pepa. Some time ago I contracted a very bad cold, which settled on my lungs and bronchial tubes. I almost lost my voice, was constantly coughing, and experienced considerable pain. A friend offered me a box of Pepa, and I tried them. I was very much pleased with their almost instant action. They seemed to go direct to the sore places, stopped the coughing, and made my breathing easier. I continued their use for a short time, and they completely cured my cold."

Pepa are best for children, too, because they contain no opiates or poison. 50c. box, all druggists and stores. Write for free trial packet to Pepa Co., Toronto, or 25 Princess St., Winnipeg, sending 1c. stamp for postage, and this advertisement.



PILES Do not suffer another day with Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles. No surgical operation required. Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve you at once and as certainly cure you. 60c a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. HEROIC BELGIANS

"Major, I am going back to the rear; this is no fun. Those Germans don't look where they are shooting." This is the remark credited by Maurice Gauchez in the Figaro to Sergt. Benoit, of the Ninth Belgian Regiment of Line Infantry, as he staggered, smilingly, back to a trench with a German bullet through his breast, and fell dead at his commander's feet.

Mr. Gauchez's description of the achievements of the Belgian troops is interesting. The Belgian soldier is small, he writes; he is not exceptionally equipped; he makes but a sorry appearance and in peace time he is but a grumbler. But under fire at the front he is superbly calm, composed. He makes war as he did formerly the great manoeuvres. He laughs and plays.

"On the battlefield of Haelen-les-Diest," writes Mr. Gauchez, "while three generals in my automobile visited the vicinity where our carabineers and lancers had killed 3,011 Death's Head Hussars with a loss of only 326 to themselves, a bicycle carabineer, dismounting, fired five times at a far off patrol of Uhlans, tumbling five of them out of their saddles, then returning to the general he was escorting, stammered, "Excuse me, mon general, for not attacking them; they were too many for me!"

He Captures German Train.

"Near Aerschot a German military train came to a halt for a moment. A Belgian sergeant of engineers, who was lurking near the railroad track, saw the enginedriver and fireman step off the locomotive. He jumped into the cab, pulled the throttle, and brought the train, with 320 prisoners, into the Belgian lines.

"At Haecht, before Louvain, Lieut. Fernan Gilles, of a line regiment, fell, severely wounded in the leg. He held himself together for two hours, keeping control of his men, then fainted. When his company fell back a sergeant and a corporal rescued him.

"Our officers are brave. Their number is small; their ranks have been thinned. They know nothing but their duty. They fall like Lieut. Clooten, singing martial airs; they die like Commandants De Wit and Piraux, of Forts Waelhem and Kessel, who, calmly smoking their pipes, blew themselves and their positions into nothingness when they could resist no longer. Few of them have been captured, for they prefer to die.

"Has not France honoured the name of that stoic factician, General Leman, who fell in the debris of Fort de Loncin? I could name thousands of other heroes who in their reports, while mentioning their subordinates for gallantry carefully avoided any reference to themselves.

"I have witnessed the daily work of our gendarmes during the war. 'Why have I not got ten thousand gendarmes?' cried one high Belgian officer. Our gendarmes have one motto, 'Their duty, and, as they are chosen from the most intelligent and loyal veterans, they emerge with honour from the most difficult and dangerous situations. One would say they were born for war, so ardent and valiant they are, yet in the hours of retreat and in bloody combats they have given wonderful aid to the valiant hospital corps men.

Work of the Carabineers.

"I must not forget the 'carapats,' the carabineers, the 'green devils,' on whose heads the Germans have put a price of 25f. each, those wonderful and skillful sharpshooters, who consecrate each cartridge to the removal of a German. Alone or in squads, on foot or on bicycles, the carabineers know that they cannot count on any mercy from the enemy. At Haelen one company of carabineers held for eight hours an entire corps of Germans, and ended, when they received the support of our lancers, in making the enemy beat a retreat.

"Shall I tell of our 'piotes,' our 'lignards,' whose regiments have died joyously without complaint? In France, our Ninth, Twenty-fifth, and Twenty-third Regiments of line infantry would long ago have received the Cross of the Legion. They have lost their officers and the fine flower of their men, yet stay at their posts, for they know that this war, for Belgium, is a struggle for the honour and liberty of the nation.

"The Germans have rendered homage to our cavalry division, commanded by General De Wit, and they have said that our artillerymen were very good. Our pioneers and engineers, under capable officers, have done great work.

"In closing, why should our army not be brave? It has at its head good generals, and that chief, both energetic and good, Albert I. I do not believe in adulation and flattery. I must tell why I love and admire the King of the Belgians.

"I have seen him in the trenches, as he chatted with his soldiers. 'To whom are you writing?' he asks a soldier; 'to your parents? Hurry up, I will see that your letter gets in the post.'

"He has messed with his warriors; during advances he has pushed his way so far to the front that I have heard soldiers grumble. 'He must be forbidden to expose himself so,' they murmur. 'Think of what would happen if he should be hit.'"

For breakfast heat the Biscuit in oven to restore crispness and then pour hot milk over it; adding a little cream, salt or sweeten to suit the taste. MISFORTUNES OF ELLIOT'S HORSE

Militia Dept. Not Concerned With Misfortunes of Free Lance Squadron

OTTAWA, Nov. 18.—Officials at the militia department, when asked about the 80 men connected with Elliot's Horse, a Winnipeg squadron reported to be stranded in London, said that nothing is known of the regiment officially. The first the department heard of them was when they landed in Montreal. The men reuired a place to sleep there for the night prior to embarking for Great Britain, so the use of an armoury was granted and beyond that Elliot's Horse is unknown to the militia officials here. Application was not even made for official recognition.

"The whole trouble arose out of the men being over anxious to get on the government pay list without recognizing the necessary requirements. They wanted to go as mounted troops and we don't want any, not yet at least," said an official.

One Cause of Bad Complexion---the Cure

"Look at a section of skin under the microscope and you will readily understand why cosmetics generally injure the complexion," says Dr. H. Robert Mackenzie. "The skin, smooth as it looks to the naked eye, under the glass exhibits a lacework of tiny holes, mouths of myriads of little glands. To keep the skin healthy these holes must be unobstructed, that the perspiration and natural oil can have free outlet. Should the glands be blocked up with irritating gritty particles, a common result of using powders and creams, Nature retaliates by common sallowness, roughness, blotches or pimples.

"As a substitute for all cosmetics I recommend ordinary mercolized wax. It not only does what the various face preparations are supposed to accomplish, but its peculiar absorbent action frees the pores from the daily accumulation of impurities, also absorbing the devitalized particles of surface skin. This produces a natural, healthy, youthful complexion. One ounce of this wax, to be had at any drug store, usually suffices to rejuvenate the poorest complexion. It is put on nightly, like cold cream and washed off morning."—Family Physician.

Correspondent Held Five Days By English Colonel as German Spy, Released, Goes to Senlis

SENLIS, France, Oct. 26.—(By mail to New York).—The English colonel who had held me under parole for five days in the little town had told me that I could depart in peace; he was satisfied that I was not a German spy. The son of the Frenchman who had taken me in to his little house told me that he could get a horse and waggon to drive me to Senlis, 20 miles away. While I was waiting for him to bring the rig his mother put me up a package of food consisting of cold chicken, bread and a bottle of water.

An hour later we were on the road. It was a wonderful Indian summer morning. The sound of the guns floatin over the golden fields of stubble; through the blue haze. The long road was dotted with little groups of fugitives; some of them were resting under the great elms that lined the thoroughfares; others were plodding along, women and children, homeless, living almost like Indians.

The horse wasn't a good one. If he had been ,the Germans would have taken him days before when they held possession of this territory.

We had gone about a mile when two women and a little girl, plodding along in front of us, turned and asked the driver for a lift.

I gave my consent. One of the women climbed on to the seat with the driver and the other got in beside me, putting the little girl on her lap.

"We've walked fifteen miles to-day," explained the woman. "We're going home to Senlis."

"But Senlis is destroyed," I said.

"Its the only home we have," said the woman, shrugging her shoulder. "I hope our home is not entirely gone. Oh, it was terrible. We ran away in the night."

"Were you there when the Germans came?"

"Indeed yes. I took Y'vonne, my little girl, into the cellar, and her 'Aunty Nana' (pointing to the woman on the seat) followed us. We stayed in the cellar until it was pitch dark. Then we fled. The houses in the town were burning and there was shooting on every han. An old man who is the village street lighter, told us that the mayor had been shot and twelve other big men of the town, and that we must fly. So we went, without a bit of food or water, and with only a few clothes. But the Germans are gone now, we hear, and so we are going back."

"Oh, we've worried and worried and wondered, these weeks," said Madame Grimaud, for that was her name. "We talk and talk about what might have happened at home and about who will be there and who will be gone when we get back. Its no use. We'll know enough."

We talked about things as we went along the road; a big German artillery waggon which had been ditched; a threshing machine standing beside unfinished hay stacks, just as the thresher had left it when the war started; a big stone tower that had been blown open at its base by a German shell; trees that had been cut down so that marksmen could sweep the road with machine guns, a dozen graves marked by little wooden crosses which bore among other letterings the word "Hier"; a great open barn in which stood a dozen French aeroplanes ready for action.

It was evening when we came into Senlis. Many of the residents who had fled were back again. The village street lighter was in the act of lighting a corner lamp when Madame Grimaud pointed him out to me.

"He's safe," she exclaimed. "They didn't kill him." A candy store was open to the sky; burned out. A turn in the street would show us the Grimaud home. Yvonne jumped out and ran ahead; Aunty Nana leaned out from the driver's seat to look around the corner; the driver leaned out, too, and so did Madame Grimaud and myself..

"You dear daring Dido. You light of my life," we heard Yvonne yell. A huge black dog had attacked her in a frenzy of delight. "My baby! My old rascal baby!" said Yvonne, hugging the big writhing mass of dog.

We turned the corner.

"Our house is there! Our house is there!" cried Aunty Nana.

"Yes! Yes!" cried Madame Grimaud, gathering her few possessions into her arms.

"There it is. Stop there," ordered Aunty Nana. "The door is closed. The lock is broken. The roof is on."

"Some windows are broken," cried Yvonne.

Madame Grimaud and Aunty Nana didn't have time to take their belongings out of the waggon. They jumped to the pavement and dashed to the doors. Before they got to it the door opened and three women rushed out, with open arms to meet them. Tears and cries of delight were mingled; there was a torrent of words.

I took the things out of the waggon, put them in the doorway and drove away. They were too excited to notice my departure.

I suppose the women were neighbours who had been burned out of their homes. But I had entered deeply enough, as it was, into the intimacies of the lives of the three wayfarers, and I had no part to play in their homecoming.

ESSENTIAL TO CHARACTER.

It is bitter medicine, but the one thing needed most in the human soul is discipline. It is well to have force, genius, vigour, enthusiasm, love, power; but you may have them and be a criminal, a maniac, or a cad; you become great only when to these you add self-control. The latest movement in education is toward developing the initiative of the child. This can hardly be carried too far. And the old, stupid method of thwarting, denying, and browbeating little ones, just for the sake of discipline, can not be too roundly condemned. But for all that, there is danger that in our new eagerness to find and bring out the child's forces we may forget the prime need of strengthening his self-denial.—Dr. F. Crane, in Woman's World.

MARITAL REST DAYS.

(From the Ohio State Journal.)

There is a new lodge out in Kansas devoted to the object of getting "two days of rest" every week. It is a lodge of married men only, and the two days of rest are to be devoted, one to doing just as their wives please and the other to doing just as the husbands themselves please.

That is the silliest society yet. It is well enough to recognize the wife's day, but the husband's day is absurd, for if the marital environment is at all what it should be he wouldn't please to do just what he wanted, if his wife thoroughly understood her business, and he did, too. A real husband is not intended to do as he pleases. That is what he takes a wife for—to govern him and see that he doesn't do as he pleases.

That society will not last three months. The vows of independence will be broken the first day. Just as soon as John goes to putting on airs, he will hear Jane's voice rippling through the air: "John!" and he will answer, "I'm coming." And that is the way it should be.

TORTURED BY CONSTIPATION

ST. BONIFACE DE SHAWINIGAN, QUE. Feb. 3rd. 1914.

"It is a pleasure to me to inform you that after suffering from Chronic Constipation for 9½ years, I have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". While I was a student at Berthier College, I became so ill I was forced to leave the college. Severe pains across the intestines continually tortured me and it came to a point where I could not stoop down at all, and my stomach became paralyzed. Finally, one friend me to take "Fruit-a-tives" and at once I felt a great improvement. After I had taken four or five boxes, I realized that I was completely cured and what made me glad, also, was that they were acting gently, causing no pain whatever to the bowels. All those who suffer with Chronic Constipation should follow my example and take "Fruit-a-tives" for they are the medicine that cures".

Batch of Letters From the Front

COL. SEELY'S MOTOR CAR.

Mention is made of Colonel Seely in a letter received at Chester from Captain J. Lintmon Shore, of the 1st Battalion Cheshire Regiment. He says:

A note was received from the Duke of Westminster, saying that His Grace had written home for socks and shirts, but in the meantime he was doing what he could to get them from Paris, nearly 60 miles away. Within five minutes of receiving the note Col. Seely arrived with a motor car full of kits for the men of the battalion, including 400 pairs of socks, 400 pipes, and some wine and cigars for the officers—a most welcome present from the Duke. I cannot tell you how grateful the men were to get the socks. Many were unable to get their socks off at all without cutting them off, after their heavy marching for nearly a month.

THE CROWN OF WILD OLIVE.

Told by a sergeant of the 5th Lancers:

I came on a wounded man of the Lancashire Fusiliers. He had two ghastly wounds in his breast, and I thought he was booked through. He was quietly reading a little edition of Ruskin's "Crown of Wild Olive," and seemed to be enjoying it immensely. As I chatted with him for a few minutes he told me that this little book had been his companion all through, and that when he died he wanted it to be buried with him. His end came next day, and we buried the book with him.

HOW THE REFUGEES CAME TO LOWESTOFT.

Letter from a soldier on duty at Lowestoft to his wife (October 15):

I have just seen the sight of my life. Ostend fishing smacks are coming in here (fetched in by our tugs) with refugees from Belgium. They are coming out of the gateway next the drawbridge. Hundreds of private cars are taking them to their own houses and away to some place close to Pakefield. The thousands of people that rushed to see them, and hardly a dry eye to be seen, men and women alike!! In one little procession came a coffin, another on a stretcher, women with hardly anything on. Two Scottish fishing girls took off their skirts in the street and put them on two Belgian women. On the other corner there was an old gentleman crying like a child, giving all the women a shilling and the children pennies. More boats are coming in to-night.

"GOOD SPORT CHASING UHLANS."

Told by a marine who was at Antwerp:

Private Ben Blake, a Northampton man, who was with the force of British marines at Antwerp, is now resting at home. Giving an account of his experiences to an interviewer, he said of the 150 of his company only 30 got away. Many were killed and wounded, and others are missing.

Blake was one of the party of marines landed at Ostend some weeks ago. They had what he describes as "a nice holiday" before being sent back to Britain, but they had not been in England many days before they were ordered to Ostend again.

"We were not kept in Ostend this time," he said, "but were sent out in motor cars chasing Uhlans, who were making raids north of Lille. It was good sport, that was. We saw plenty of Uhlans and had pops at them, but they never stayed long in one place, and didn't seem to want to fight."

Speaking of Antwerp, Private Blake said the bombardment had begun when his party took up positions in trenches between the forts (of the outer ring of defences, at ten o'clock at night. "People may say what they like," he said, "but the German artillery is grand. We soon found we couldn't hold on where we were. We had no guns bigger than Maxims, and they were no more use than rifles. We retired on the inner ring of forts and then we had to clear quick. When the Germans found the range of those it was like h——, and no force without guns as good as theirs could stand it. The Belgians have very good artillery and use it well, but it is not big enough."

War, Death's Twin Brother, Great Leveller of Classes in France—Women Trick German Officers Into Death Plunge

Longwy, Oct. 29 (By mail to New York)—War, death's twin brother, is a great leveller of classes. In this part of France, where the war has actually passed, master and man, mistress and maid, mingle as one family.

I am writing this in the only tavern in the place which remains open. I had dinner with the proprietor, his wife, daughter, son, boutler, chambermaid and cook. And a good time was had by all." Everybody laughed and cracked jokes at the expense of the Prussians and by the light of candles studied maps showing the positions of the fighting armies.

I had a hard time finding a place to eat and spend the night. And it was cold and raining, sleeping out of doors did not appeal. The Hotel of the Golden Nail (Auberge du Clou d'Or) took me in.

"Come right in, Angleesh," called out the smiling proprietor. "We have just returned from Vichy to-day and the hotel isn't running, but an Englishman is welcome to what we have."

I explained that I was an American.

"Oh, American and English—they are all the same in France," he returned. "You've got a fine hospital down in Paris. My oldest son, wounded at the battle of the Marne, is getting well there now."

We shook hands. The proprietor—whom everybody addressed as "patron"—called his "patronne," his wife, and we shook hands. Daughter, married but three months ago, stepped up and shook hands. Son shook my hand, the hired man shook my hand, and the chambermaid and madam's maid shook my hand. Then they all smiled hospitably and bade me welcome. And the nice part of it was the genuineness of the whole proceeding.

It was a fine dinner. Just back from up-country where eating was poor, it was a feast for me. We all sat together, at the same table, and there was no table cloth; the linen had all been hidden from the Germans and there had not been time to uncover it. The maid aired her opinion of the "sales bouches" ("dirty mouths"—slang for Prussians) and the hired man went her one better. When we reached the ham and eggs, three more refugees came in, a man, his wife and little girl, the latter just able to walk and talk. They were given an all around welcome after which they tackled the soup in a way which showed determination to catch up with us before we got to the strawberry preserves.

"Does 'oo like the Germans?" the little girl's mother asked, showing off the kid.

"Cochons!" (Pigs! Pigs) the little one responded just as other little children say "Nasty! Nasty!" And everybody laughed to the fond mother's satisfaction.

"That was a good joke they played on those three German officers up the river wasn't it?" the hired man exclaimed.

"What was it?" the little girl's father demanded.

"Why, haven't you heard?" the chambermaid exclaimed, eager to be in the telling of the story. "Why, three German officers, in a big automobile, dashed up in front of Mme. Durand's house and asked the road to Longwy. 'It's that way,' replied Mme. Durand, pointing down the road, which led to the Marne. The big auto whirled away and—off the end of the stone bridge into the river. The bridge had just been blown up."

"And the three officers were drowned—or killed," the landlord's daughter added.

"Served 'em right," said everybody.

"The door creaked and the landlord's son's fox terrier came in from the stable and started to brush himself off along the skirts and trousers-legs under the table.

"Prussians! Prussians!" hissed the boy, quite as an American boy says "Rats! Rats!" and the fox terrier scampered about the room, poking his nose into the dark corners and whining.

I was shown to my room by the landlord, candle in hand. I am writing by the same candle, quilts wrapped about me—for it is cold and damp here and there is no fire. There are thousands and tens of thousands of households in France just like that downstairs. To-night they all had dinner and talked and joked and laughed and grieved a little, perhaps in just the same way.

France is not taking the war too seriously. She is not brooding all the time. From what I have seen she appears to be facing things with a stout hearts and waht griefs she had she hides just as the landlord's daughter hides hers.

Good-night.

THE COSSACK

Every Cossack is a born horseman. Before he can walk he has sat on one of the small, strong and swift Cossack horses—the real horses of the steppe, therefore almost wild and extraordinarily intelligent.

Removed as they are from the ordinary population, possessing unique rights, bearing arms for so many years, and growing up with only one career in view, it is only natural that the Cossacks should have but one idea, and that is to serve faithfully and blindly the government, which has always shown itself considerate and generous toward them. They are far less civilised in many ways than other Russian peasants, for the communities having remained isolated for centuries, their traditions of hostility to other "camps" have been greatly modified by outside influence.

In aspect they are picturesque, and have retained the characteristics which have belonged to the Cossacks for centuries. As a rule they intermarry among their own kind.

They are in general larger than the average Russian. Strongly built and bearded, with high cheekbones and the far-seeing eye of the steppe dweller, fierce, excitable, and ruthless, used to physical fatigue and hardship, indifferent to pain and suffering, both where he, himself, and others are concerned—such is the Cossack.

In time of war the Cossacks supply Russia with 900 squadrons of cavalry and 108 companies of infantry, with 236 guns—that is, with more than 180,000 soldiers, 150,000 of them invaluable for reconnoitering service. It is natural that men such as are the Cossacks, strong and courageous, with an inherited instinct for guerrilla warfare—a method which even now plays such an important part in every war—should add considerably to the success of the army to which they are attached.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Colour, Gloss and Thickness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn grey, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, grey or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, containing about 60 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While *wispy, grey, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all grey hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

AN EASY WAY TO STOP HEAD NOISES

Good Advice For Those Who Fear Deafness

Men and women who are growing hard of hearing and who experience a stuffy feeling of pressure against their ear drums, accompanied by buzzing, rumbling sounds in their head like water falling or steam escaping should take prompt and effective measures to stop this trouble. Headnoises are almost invariably the forerunners of complete or partial deafness and most deaf people suffer from them constantly. Sometimes these head noises become so distracting and nerve racking, with their never ceasing "hum" they drive the sufferer almost frantic and complete nervous breakdown and even violent insanity have been known to result.

Thanks to a remarkable scientific discovery made recently in Marland it is now possible to almost instantly lessen the severity of these headnoises and in a very short time to completely and permanently overcome them. With the disappearing of the head noises, the hearing also greatly improves and very frequently can be restored to normal. This Marland treatment is known as Parmint and can be easily and safely self administered at home. Leading druggists in Peterborough and vicinity now have it in stock. Get from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength) and mix it at home with ½ pint of hot water and 4 oz. of granulated sugar. Stir until dissolved and then take one tablespoonful four times a day until the noises disappear and hearing improves. Parmint is used double strength in this way not only to reduce by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian tube and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum but to correct any causes of secretions in the middle ear and the results it gives are both remarkably quick and effective.

Important: In ordering Parmint always specify that you want double strength; your druggist has it or he can get it for you; if not, send 50c to the International Laboratories, 11 St. Antoine St., Montreal, P.Q., who make a specialty of it.

Everywhere the Enemy Has Been Repulsed

BRILLIANT BAYONET CHARGE BY FRENCH TROOPS

GERMAN ATTACKS END IN DEFEAT ALLIES ARE MAKING PROGRESS

Official Communique To-day Shows That the Enemy Has Been Repulsed at all Points While in Different Districts the Allies Have Advanced.

FRENCH CAPTURE WOODS WITH THE BAYONET

PARIS, November 18.—Brilliant bayonet charges by the French Zouaves, driving the Germans from a wood which had been disputed for three days, was reported in the official communiue to-day. Terrible encounters have occurred all along the line betwen Dixmude and Ypres for the possession of patches of the wood in which the Germans have taken up positions. The allied troops have without exception, been forced to resort to the bayonet to clear these woods. The charge of the Zouaves reported to-day is a duplication of the feat performed by the British. In general, the statement says, the allies have repulsed all attempts of the Germans to advance, and have themselves made progress at several points.

PARIS, November 18. — The weather conditions along the coast are improving. To the north the fog has lifted sufficiently to enable the allied warships to get into action. The heavy rains about Nieuport and Dixmude have practically ceased. It is now turning very cold, and the suffering of the men in the trenches is allayed but little.

Fresh French troops of the second line are about to take up their positions along the battle front. The Belgian and British troops, which have been in the field constantly, are being relieved. Fresh levies are also available to take the place of the French troops which have been in the trenches for the past two months.

Heavy artillery fighting continues along the Aisne. The bombarsdment about Rheims has been resumed. The altar of the famous Cathedral is said to have been damaged by a shell.

WASHINGTON, November 18. — Admitting that a shot had been fired at the launch from the cruiser Tennessee, flying the Stars and Stripes, in Turkish waters, high administration officials declared emphatically today that there was no immediate cause for alarm. The fact that the shot had been fired, is all that is at present known by the Navy Department. Secretary of State Daniels has demanded complete information from Captain B. C. Becker of the cruiser. In the absence of these particulars, the United States will "mark time."

The Tennessee is now in the Turkish Harbour of Chios. It was from there that Captain Decker's preliminary report was received by the Navy Department. According to this report the cruiser sent a launch to Smyrna to investigate conditions there, and to determine how much truth there was in report that American interests in Smyrna were in danger, and that the Europeans in the city were in peril. Secretary Daniels reported the matter to President Wilson, and then took up consideration of it with Acting Secretary of State Lansing. The latter at once attempted to get into touch with Ambassador Morgenthau at Constantinople so the Ambassador can take whatever steps may later be deemed necessary in the matter.

LONDON, Nov. 18. — England has paid the heavy toll of 3,677 officers and men killed in naval engagements to date.

Winston Churchill, the First Lord of the Admiralty, to-day announced in the House of Commons that British naval losses were 222 officers and 3,555 men, killed, 37 officers and 426 men wounded; five officers and one man missing.

TORONTO, November 18. — Corporal Paul Mauser, aged 20, of the 48th Regiment, was arraigned before Magistrate Denison to-day, on a charge of high treason, punishable by death. He was remanded for one week,

EVIDENCE IS HEARD IN AN ASSAULT CASE

Simcoe Street Second-hand Dealer Claims That he Was Assaulted By Two Local Men.

CASE IN POLICE COURT

In this morning's Police Court Eric Lundgren and John Swantson were charged with assaulting Abraham Shenikoff, the Simcoe Street second-hand dealer. On this charge, through their counsel, Mr. D. O'Connell, both elected to be tried summarily, and pleaded not guilty.

In the witness box Shenikoff said that on the 12th of October Lundgren came to him with a silver watch. He bought it for $1. A week or two later defendant returned and wanted his watch back again. Witness replied that he would sell the watch. Lundgren offered $1.25, which witness refused. He thought he should get $1.75 for it. Lundgren went out.

Last Saturday Lundgren returned with Swantson, who was half drunk. They wanted the watch but Shenikoff told them he had sold it.

Mr. Hatton—How much did you get for it?

Shenikoff—Two dollars.

Witness took the two men to the show case to show them that the watch had been sold. When he came out from behind the show case they both pounced on him and threw him to the floor. Swantson had appropriated an iron stove shaker from a stove that was for sale and hit witness on the head several times. Both pounded him severely, and one cut which he received on the head needed several stitches. His clothes were saturated with blood, and he was very badly bruised. They dragged him out on to the sidewalk and threw him down there.

To Mr. O'Connell Shenikoff said that he had been in this country nine years. He had been in the second-hand business several years. He had never been in the Police Court on any charge, and never on any occasion loaned money on goods. He always bought them outright. The watch in question would be worth about $4 when new. It had no jewels in it, so he knew it was a cheap watch.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, who was on his way home when the row occurred, said that Swantson and Shenikoff were scuffling in front of the latter's store. Mrs. Shenikoff was also present, trying to release her husband from Swantson. Shenikoff was asking Swantson to let him go.

Dr. Morgan, who attended Shenikoff, said that he found a cut on his head an inch and a half long, and nearly a quarter of an inch deep. It might have been caused by the stove shaker.

Mrs. Shenikoff also gave evidence regarding the assault. She told of the visit of the two men to her husband's store. When they pounced on her husband Swantson hit her husband twice on the head. The two men dragged Shenikoff outside and would not leave him alone. She did not have the stove shaker at all.

John Huxley, clerk in the butcher shop next to Shenikoff's, said that he saw the small man (Lundgren) and Shenikoff scuffling on the street.

P. C. Blade said that Swantson and Shenikoff were grappling on the street when he came on the scene. Witness separated them, and Swantson retained the stove shaker.

The case was adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon.

NAMES OF THE MISFITS WILL NOT BE STATED

Forty-two of Contingent are Being Returned to Canada, and the Minister of Militia Issues A Warning.

ARE THE BLACK SHEEP

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 18. — The names of the forty-two men of the Canadian Contingent being returned to Canada for excessive drinking, insubordination, disorderly conduct or other causes, will not be given out by the Department of Militia.

The returning "Misfits" will be known only to those to whom they return in their homes in Canada. It is supposed that excessive drinking, insubordination, and disorderly conduct were some of the causes of rejection. They are merely the black-sheep in a family of thirty-three thousand men.

"You may say for me," said Gen. Sam Hughes this morning, "that no men who allows himself to be carried away by intemperate habits can hope for preferment, promotion or consideration of any kind in any of the Canadian overseas contingents."

CANADIAN GENERAL ELECTRIC CO. HAVE FORMED THREE COMPANIES

Enthusiastically Endorse the Home Guard Project and Organize 3 Units With the Proper Officers to Join the Association.

MR. LAYFIELD'S ADDRESS

So great was the enthusiasm at the meeting held in the Public Library building, last night, by the employees and exemployees of the Canadian General Electric Company, to form Companies of the Home Guard of Peterborough, that instead of organising two companies, as was originally planned, three have been formed. Not only has this been carried out, but officers and non-commissioned officers for the three companies have been selected as well as a qualified instructor, Mr. Chas. Peters.

Last night's meeting was very largely attended and the enthusiasm was great. Mr. S. E. Layfield presided and gave a most interesting address on the aims and objects of the Home Guard.

Mr. E. G. Patterson, General Superintendent of the C. G. E., addressed the meeting and encouraged the men to assist in the movement, while Lt.-Col. Miller aroused enthusiasm in a patriotic speech.

Afterwards the gathering took part in the discussion.

Mr. Layfield's address was as follows:

The General Superintendent has called this meeting together to-night to give the employees and ex-employees of the Canadian General Electric Company an opportunity to join as a body the Home Guard of Peterborough.

This movemnt is general all over Canada and men of all walks in life are giving up the comforts of home and the relaxation of leisure hours to turn themselves into soldiers. They are drilling by night in armouries, parks and school yards—lines of earnest, determined men intent on mastering the technique of the military art. Among the various movements centering in the main problem of home defence, none is more significant than the splendid scheme which has been worked out by the leaders of the Home Guard movement.

In Case of Emergency.

In joining the Home Guard or Rifle Association movement, a man is brought automatically under the jurisdiction of the military authorities in case of emergency, or in the words of the regulations, "in case of emergency, the members of rifle associations and clubs shall become membrs of the Militia and shall be under the command of the divisional or district officer commanding, and so long as the emergency exists and until lawfully discharged, all members of such associations and clubs shall remain members of the militia and shall be subject to drill, training and discipline to the same extent as other members thereof."

The oath or declaration required of a man who wished to join is as follows: "I the undersigned, do sincerely promise and swear (or solemnly declare) that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to his Majesty, King George V., his heirs and successors, so help me God."

While of course there is nothing about this declaration making it obligatory for a man to take up arms and fight on the overseas continent, yet no conscientious citizen would do other than consider his undertaking to be faithful and bear true allegiance to the King, as involving the duty of service.

Special Course of Drill.

A special syllabus drill has been prepared. It embodies the infantry training regulations and the rules governing rifle practice for 1914 and is the latest word on the subject. Stress is laid strongly on drill and, while the value of expert shooting is not being minimized, the importance of men knowing how to conduct themselves in the event of attack is to be emphasized.

As the work is being conducted on the simplest and most economical lines there will be no uniforms. Should the worst come down to the worst and the men be called out for defence purposes, a band on the arm will be quite sufficient, according to the Hague convention, to distinguish them from civilians proper.

The Association is getting all sorts of men. Professional and business men, merchants, clerks, even clergymen, are falling in line and taking up the work with enthusiasm. As for instructors, a great many of whom are needed, these are being drawn from the ranks of ex-militia officers, and veterans from the Old Country line regiments, all of whom are giving their services voluntarily. The syllabus supplies a uniform system, ensuring that all the men being trained will be able, if necessity arises, to act in unison.

EXAMINER'S WAR SERVICE SURPASSED BY NONE

An evening contemporary claims to have the best war service in the city, basing that claim apparently on the fact that it published on Saturday the story as reported from New York of the loss of the British battleship Audacious. As a matter of fact the Examiner on Saturday informed its readers of the reported accident, but the news was not prominently displayed because it was merely an unconfirmed story—one that has not even yet been confirmed by the British authorities. Readers of the Examiner can rest assured that they will get the latest and best war service in this paper. Through the Examiner's association with the Toronto Star and the Star News Service, it has at its command for the benefit of its readers, all the Toronto Star's news service, including connection with the United Press, and the benefit of the splendid staff of correspondents employed by the Star and the United Press. This gives the Examiner a war service that is unsurpassed. You have but to compare the Examiner's war news with that given in other local papers to decide which paper has the best service.

Private Herb Carpenter Writing From Salisbury Plain Satisfied With Conditions in the Camp

HOW THEY ARE FED

Mr. Ed. Courtney, East City, has received the following interesting letter from his grandson, Pte. Herbert Carpenter, who is at Salisbury Plain with the 57th contingent:

"The boys are all enjoying themselves, not worrying about anything ahead of them. Each battalion has its own canteen, and beer can be bought by those who desire to have it for four pence a quart; nothing stronger than beer. Major Gen. Hughes would not allow any liquor at Valcartier, and of course some men gave him a bad name. He certainly deserves great credit for the way he arranged everything there. We had better food there, and the sanitary conditions were far ahead of those here. Very poor accommodation for washing mess tins and clothes here. Our rations are served out once a day, so much to a tent, there generally being nine men in a tent. For breakfast we have bread, jam, cheese, tea and a small portion of bacon, for dinner stew, potatoes, bread jam and cheese, and for supper what is left of the bread, cheese and jam. The nine men for the three meals get, or are allowed, one pint of jam, one lb. of cheese and five loaves of bread and the above mentioned.

We have straw ticks and pillows and a board floor in our tents. Some say we are going into barracks. The sooner the better, as the weather is very changeable. Some of the men are complaining of rheumatism. I am toughing it out all right. The battalion go out for a ten mile march in the afternoons over the plains, which are eaten up with rabbit burrows. All day to-day we have been getting instructions in the way to use the bayonet.

So the Canadian papers say that the Germans are going to invade England. They never will, and if you saw the British battleships you would say it was impossible. They will never get into Paris, let alone England. The allies are winning at every point, and we Canadians will be lucky if we ever see Germany. I have lots of news, but not much time to write. I may say that I want for nothing, plenty of warm clothes and no worry.

PETERBOROUGH CHORAL SOCIETY

The Executive committee of the Peterborough Choral Society met last night after a fine practice of "St. George and the Dragon," by Sir Edward Elgar. Mr. Walter Stocker presided over a good attendance. In addition to Elgar's work, after considerable discussion it was decided to put into practice some standard choral compositions for the annual concert, of which the choral ode in honour of music, "The Unseen Choir," by E. A. Dicks, F.R.C.O., (dedicated to Sir John Stainer), will be one. Special numbers for ladies' chorus and male chorus are also on the list. The committee adjourned at 10.30 p.m.

Don't miss seeing these two funny fellows at the Grand, Feldman & Christie all this week.

Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 18, 1914

SOUL NOT SIZE.

A military medical examiner or other official who rejects a recruit because he is a little under 5 ft. 6 inches, will do well to remember that inches alone do not make the man. Lord Roberts, the greatest warrior of his century, who has won too so many medals for the limited expanse of his chest, was only 5 ft. 3 inches, quite under the regulation height. Also Napoleon, who made a very considerable reputation as a soldier, was undersized. The mind's the measure of the man—the soul's what weighs.

TWO GOOD MOTTOES.

By a paragraph in our news columns it will be seen that the employment office, of the Peterborough Branch of the Industrial Association of Canada is doing a good deal of good work quietly and unostentatiously.

The Association asks further assistance so that it can add to the thirty-three cases in which it has found work for the unemployed. Its motto is the right motto—"work not charity."

That is a motto which our City Council might apply more largely and add to the considerable employment the city has given this autumn.

Though the thermometer, dropped to zero last night, it is not probable that winter is here so permanently as to put an end to all outdoor work; and the Counil might do well in preparing to give such employment, as may be offered.

If the weather hereafter should prove favourable, we might as previously suggested, have a large number of men put on the work of cleaning the streets and clearing the gutters of the mud and leaves that prevent the off-flow of water and interfere with the first condition of good earth streets—good drainage.

This is light work, and many citizens who could not do trench work, or work requiring much physical strength, could be thus employed.

The city can get the money if it is in earnest in meeting the spirit of the slogan "work not charity," and if it doesn't provide more work it will have to provide more charity.

Straight charitable assistance gives no material return. It is money wasted in a double sense; there is nothing good to show for the money expended; and there is the pauperizing influence of charity doles.

The city will also find it "good business" to find work for many of its citizens, even if special effort have to be made to provide means—such as short-term bonds.

These are the two parts of the alternative before them—either give work or give relief—either spend money in charity or help self-respecting men to honestly earn their way, and give full value in needed work in the public interest.

Not only is the City Council called upon to make special effort, to take care of the conditions created by the war. We are all in duty bound, to help soften the suffering caused by the war—of which unemployment is a certain, if indirect, result.

There are many demands, but the patriotic fund has collateral branches. The city can help it by providing employment; the Industrial Association is helping it by providing employment; and the citizens by contributing to the fund, can help those who cannot be helped directly or fully by means of employment.

There is good for us all to cooperate in striving to give effect to another good motto, the slogan—

$20,000 FOR THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

MODESTY AND MERIT.

Without being patronizing one may remark that divine Providence knows its business. We have often seen illustrations of the fact that no man, however great, is indispensable—is altogether it. The remark is often made upon the death of some great statesman, that his passing makes a blank in the world that cannot be filled. But providence or fate, or fortunate accident, has a man ready and the world rolls on doing "business as usual." We all felt when Lord Roberts answered the last roll call, that his equal did not remain; but we were mistaken. For behold there is a greater than Bobs here. One might doubt this; but we can't doubt it for we have the word of the man himself. Referring to some fault-finding in certain quarters with the Valcartier encampment and the first Canadian contingent, Col. the Hon. Major-General Sam Hughes, Canadian Minister of War, in an interview with the World, said:

"I am quite content to abide by the opinion of Lord Roberts who said to me privately and repeated in public on many occasions that the mobilization, equipment, and transportation of the Canadian contingent showed a driving power and a genius for military affairs on the part of your humble servant without a parallel in history."

As Hennessy would say, "there y' are." Lord Roberts never rose to the height of greatness of blowing his own horn. He may have had the trick of doing great things, but he, poor man, was as short of saying things as he was short in stature. Lord Roberts had the foolish confidence that his deeds would speak for him. Otherwise he was a fairly good soldier, and did a little for the Empire, but, bless you, nothing to what—some one else will do. No doubt Lord Roberts' modesty, if it had chosen to speak, would have suggested a little epitaph like this:

"And be the Spartan's epitaph on me,
"Sparta hath many a worthier son than he."

GREY KNITTING.

William Briggs has brought out a beautiful little holiday booklet, "Grey Knitting," from the poetic needles of Katherine Hale, one of the most graceful and poetically gracious of our Canadian woman writers. "Grey Knitting" is a brochure of only fifteen pages, yet the book-maker has given the poems an artistically dainty setting. It is paper bound, in grey, and tied with the familiar grey yarn that so many Canadian women are weaving the webs of mercy with to-day, with front page illuminated very fetchingly in scarlet and gold — a worthy setting of the worthy contents. It is timely in a double and contradictory sense—songs for soldiers in the grim work of the most wasting war of the world, make an especial appeal at the season when we feast the coming of the Prince of Peace. Most of the poems are original in this little book, though two are reprints from the Canadian Magazine and Cassell's Magazine, respectively.

"Grey Knitting" should get a wide reading at this Christmas tide. It's price, 25 cents, adjusted to the conditions of financial famine, is an inducement which knowledge of the compelling merit of its song, renders unnecessary. The poems are tender, dainty, gracefully worded, and of a spiritual quality so straitly seasonable; so direct in appeal; so poetic and pertinent; so soulful and thought-stirring, that their mission will be one of mercy—quiet but keen appeals to benefaction. The opening poem will give a taste of the whole—

GREY KNITTING.

All through the country, in the autumn stillness,
A web of grey spreads strangely, rim to rim;
And you may hear the sound of knitting needles,
Incessant, gentle, dim.

A tiny click of little wooden needles,
Ellin amid the gianthood of war;
Whispers of women, tireless and patient,
Who weave the web afar.

Whispers of women, tireless and patient—
"Foolish, inadequate!" we hear you say;
"Grey wool on fields of hell is out of fashion,"
And yet we weave the web from day to day.

Suppose some soldier dying, gayly dying,
Under the alien skies, in his last hour,
Should listen, in death's prescience so vivid,
And hear a fairy sound bloom like a flower—

I like to think that soldiers, gayly dying
For the white Christ on fields with shame sown deep,
May hear the fairy click of women's needles,
As they fall fast asleep.

AGENTS AND THEIR PRINCIPALS.

Excluding a reporter from the Ottawa City Hall by order of the Mayor has been declared illegal by Mr. Justice Riddell. This line of exclusion, closely allied to the presumption shown by secret sessions, is the natural course of a Mayor who fancies himself the owner of a City Hall. A reporter has the same right as any other citizen anywhere and every-where. Because Parliaments, Legislatures, Municipal Councils, and courts are public property, instituted and maintained by the public to carry out the public will, and as the newspapers are the very best medium for informing the principals what their elected and appointed agents are doing from day to day, reporters are generally accorded special facilities for obtaining information. Their position is not official.

The business of a reporter is to inform the public as to what is being done in their name, with their money, and on their property. They have a right to this information. The representative body that holds private or secret sessions is simply presumptuous, and the special exclusion of a reporter is a piece of foolishness. It is well that the rights of all citizens including reporters, have been thus publicly declared, but it is a discouraging reflection on the people who elect representatives in need of such a judicial admonition.—The Globe.

STILL BLAMING THE WOMAN.

"Ignorance on the part of housewives is responsible in large measure for the high cost of living," is the opinion expressed by Mayor Mitchell of New York's Special Supply Committee, which has been investigating this question. Modern man has not progressed very far from the time of Adam, who blamed his fall on the housewife of the day. Undoubtedly ignorance plays a part, but it does not begin to compare with trusts, tariff, unnecessary middlemen and other factors.—Journal of Commerce.

AT SUNSET

AT SUNSET.

Slowly the sun on its even way
Ploughed to the West—The Autumn Day
Blazed to its close in a gold array
Aureoled in splendour.

Sadly we rode, my Friend and I,
Faces turned to the Western sky,
Striving to meet that last good-bye
Bravely in our sorrow.

Still as the march of the spectred dead
Timed by the ponies' measured tread,
Sat we our saddles while o'er head
All the sky was burning.

Then we stopped where the trails divide
Stirrup to stirrup and side by side,
And, Oh, in vain we tried to hide
Ill-controlled emotion.

Long ere we stood there hand in hand,
Far in the heart of Lonesome Land,
Well had we learned to understand
Th' eloquence of silence.

Then he turned toward the West
And with head low on his breast,
Rode straight over the hills' brown crest
Into the Sunset's Glory.

P. L. BROWN.

Practice Economy Says Duty

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—It may be thoughtlessness, but there is a proneness on the part of people to expend their money and energies in this dreadful war crisis just the same as if no self-denial was demanded of us. Any thoughtful person must recognize that it is our bounden duty to concentrate our attention upon the task that is thrust upon us, for our own self-preservation, even though our loyalty was at a low ebb.

Everything which calls for money beyond the necessaries of life should cease, or certainly be curtailed during the continuance of the war, and the money be diverted to the uses of the various war funds, and for those who suffer in consequence of the war.

In this connection I might mention concerts, theatres and shows of all kinds, strong drinks, tobacco in all its forms, candies, jewellery, and not the least, Christmas and New Year's presents, which have become an intolerable expense to the poor, even when the shadow of war did not darken our prosperity. The ladies could do much in ignoring the frequent changes in the realm of fashions, which too entail an expense far beyond the majority of persons, and sometimes leads to evil tendencies. Above all let the Ministerial Association set the pace and put a stop to the various devices for raising church funds which can be better applied to the sufferings of those who have gone to the battle front for their sakes as well as others.

Any scheme, such as we experienced lately, by an outsider, which makes a "scoop" upon the pockets of our citizens instead of being applied to the patriotic funds, aids and abets the Germans, whether it is done for selfish reasons, or is the act of a German spy or agent.

Yours truly,
DUTY.

New Use Suggested For Christmas Gift Funds

The following from the Christian Science Monitor, applies and should appeal equally to Canadians:

It must appear to every thinking person in the United States who reflects on the subject, that, less than ever, is this a time in which to indulge in unnecessary and extravagant expenditure merely for personal or selfish satisfaction, because it is only reasonable to presume that every person in the United States who is capable even of casual observation knows that human distress, unparallelled within a century, prevails in countries across the sea and cries pleadingly and urgently for relief. Of all the reports that come out of the war zone comes with greater title to credence than those that tell of the hardships of noncombatants, and especially of women and children. Most of these reports have verification. There is no room left for doubt either as to the extent or the immediateness of the need which prompts the repeated appeals of the various organized agencies for help.

Much is being done in the United States to succour the multitudes of people that for the time being are unable to help themselves. Much more remains to be done. Winter is coming alike upon homeless and hungry millions of the United States. The latter for the most part are prosperous, and they are approaching a season of the year when indulgence in giving is practiced on every hand, practiced generously, lavishly, extravagantly, and too often practiced senselessly and harmfully.

Why cannot this giving be directed by better, wiser, nobler impulses? Why is it not possible in the name of the Christ who usually is so little remembered in the observance of such customs, to turn the vast expenditure of the Christmas holidays in the United States into food and clothing and other necessaries for the unfortunate people of the afflicted countries?

The United States is at peace and intends to remain at peace with all the world. Its good will extends without partiality, it will probably have a great deal to say and a great deal to do with the making of international peace and with its permanent maintenance. All the more reason, then, why it should be ready now to make greater sacrifices than any involved in this proposition in order to establish not only the universality but the practicability of its sympathy.

ORDERS PLACED AT HOME.

No Footwear Contracts Have Been Awarded in the United States.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The War Office yesterday assured the High Commissioner's secretary that no orders for boots or shoes had been given outside the United Kingdom, which disposes of the assertion in Canada that such order had been extensively placed in the United States.

The War Office further said they were anxious to place such orders in Canada, whenever the opportunity offered. Ten thousand saddles were yesterday ordered by the Government through the High Commissioner. Orders also for clothing will probably follow.

The War Office has arranged for frequent interviews with Secretary Griffiths in relation to placing commissions for goods in Canada.

He Specialized in River Plans.

QUEBEC, Nov. 18.—Hoffman, the alleged German spy, arrested some days ago by the Winnipeg police and in whose possession were found plans of the Hudson Bay Railway, worked in Quebec for a few months up to recently. He was on the draftsman's staff of the Harbor Commission.

It was soon learned that he had been a regular customer of a local photographic studio, where he had blue prints copied. It is said he paid particular attention to charts of the River St. Lawrence, of the harbor and of the various points along the route.

WILL RAISE DUTY ON BEER AND TEA

To Secure War Funds, Sugar, too, May be Taxed Further—Two Great Loan Issues to be Made.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Much interest is taken in a statement that David Lloyd George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, made in the House of Commons yesterday on financing the war. The general belief is that in addition to the issue of a loan of 200,000,000 pounds sterling ($1,000,000,000), the chancellor will propose new taxation to meet the extra 25,000,000 pounds ($125,000,000) required.

It is supposed that this will take the form of a substantial increase of the duties on beer and tea, and possibly on sugar, and that the question of raising the income tax will be reserved for the Budget statement next March. The secret, however, has been well kept and nothing will definitely be known until the Chancellor makes his statement.

The Daily News, in speculating on the forthcoming announcement of the Chancellor on what means will be taken to finance the war, says that two war loans will be floated of 250,000,000 pounds each.

The Times says the war loan will bear interest of 3½ per cent. and will be issued at a price to yield four per cent. to subscribers.

LITTLE BOY WEAK AND SICKLY

Mother Tells How Her Little Son Was Made a Strong, Healthy Boy by Vinol After a Severe Sickness.

New York City.—"About five years ago my little boy, then seven years old, was very ill with gastritis, then he contracted measles from the other children, pneumonia soon followed, and there seemed no hope of saving his life. However, we fought off the disease and he recovered, but was in a very weak and delicate condition.

"The doctor prescribed cod liver oil, but his little stomach swelled up like a drum, and the doctor said there was no cure for him. I decided to try Vinol, as I had used it myself with splendid results, and it seemed to agree with him. That bloated condition soon disappeared, and now he is a strong, healthy boy, thanks to Vinol."—Mrs. THOMAS FITZGERALD, 1090 Park Ave., New York City.

In all cases where the healing, curative, tissue building influence of cod liver oil, or the strength-creating, blood-making properties of tonic iron are needed, Vinol gives immediate benefit, for it is easily assimilated and acceptable to the weakest stomach, because it contains no oil or grease, and tastes delicious.

Finds German Soldiers Ready But Lack Initiative

Observation in Field Impresses Correspondent with Good Preparation of Teutons and Inferiority in Emergencies to Their Opponents.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—Discussing German war tactics, of which he has had ten weeks' observation in the field at the Belgian army headquarters, a corespondent writes that the impression left on his mind leaves two outstanding points. One is the wonderful thoroughness of preparation on the part of the German nation for this war, and the other is the failure of the German nation to assert a superiority over, or even an equality with, its British, French, and Belgian antagonists in unforeseen contingencies calling for individual initiative.

In all that could be provided for by thought before hand, in all the book work and routine of war, in the matters of discipline and of equipment, the German force generally was above criticism. In those other things which tell of the character of the race, of its native wit and its natural courage, the German has taken second place to the Belgian, the Frenchman, and the Briton. Constantly, therefore, on considering the German at war, apart from the strategy of his campaign, one is moved to astonishing alternations of applause and censure.

But perhaps there is an explanation which will do away with the astonishment. It was impossible that an intelligent and methodical people should devote their whole energies to the perfection of a scheme of aggressive war without obtaining great results; impossible that this devotion to a single and inhuman end should not have dehumanized the people somewhat, lowered their general intelligence, injured their spirit of initiative.

Germany has profited in the field by the scientific exactness of her war equipment and the blind obedience of her slavishly drilled people. She has lost in the field by the failure of these people under circumstances when equipments failed and a "common-sense shift" was called for, when obedience was not sufficient and an individual elan and judgment was callen for.

In regard to equipment, the first days of the campaign disclosed how perfected was the German war machine in this regard. The first German dead gave up many secrets. The German soldier was clothed in a cloth of a colour which, on an average of European days, gives a greater degree of invisibility than khaki. This cloth was excellently woven to withstand weather and strain. Each soldier carried a little equipment for mending his clothes, as also a little first aid Red Cross bandage of adhesive plaster.

His boots were of wonderfully strong and supple leather, such boots as only civilians in good circumstances can buy. His pack of cowhide, tanned with the hair on, was most ingeniously furnished with straps and removable bolts of white metal, for ease of carrying and ease of packing and unpacking. Its contents, disposed in various little cupboards, gave the maximum of food reserves and clothing comforts for the space and weight.

Quite regardless of the value of the soldier's life at the critical moment of an action, the German arrangement at least equipped him perfectly at the outset, even with materials to facilitate the work of pillage and incendiarism which had been mapped out for him. The order books of officers and non-commissioned officers showed the same meticulous devotion to detail. During all the years of preparation the German mind evidently devoted itself with passionate industry to providing for every possible emergency of the soldier's life in the field.

As the equipment was the zenith, the cavalry tactic was the nadir of the German army. Whether against the Belgian, French or British cavalry the German cavalry was always inferior. The much advertised Uhlans might appear from episodes to have done good, daring work; but in real fact they were simply shot out from headquarters like stones from a catapult, recklessly, non-intelligently, to raid somewhere, anywhere. With so many of them out they had to blunder on some successes. In the aggregate their record was one of failure. Repeatedly they were trapped and almost exterminated by far inferior forces.

On the march they had no idea of scouting. In the first phase of the war the German idea of cavalry on the march in hostile country was for a squadron of twenty-five to precede by 800 yards the regiment, without flank scouts or advance scouts. Taught by heavy losses, they modified that a little, but never did they seem to learn the scouting side of cavalry work. Nor did their cavalry seem to know how to follow up a retreat.

To give another proof from personal experience, when the Germans after a victory were about to enter a town on three occasions I went forward on a cycle to get in touch with their advance cavalry and make sure of the direction they were taking. Never was ther any real ground for uneasiness in doing this. The German cavalry had no eyes. Its courage was of the blind sort and rapidly evaporated on a hot challenge. Whether the cavalry was able to shine in any charges such as used to be rehearsed so carefully at Potsdam I do not know, not having seen any charges or encountered any officer who has.

Competent observers say that both the British and the French artillery have outclassed the German in the heroic combats in Northern France. It is a very high record for them, since the German artillery, from the heaviest to the lightest, is without a doubt extraordinarily good in tactics. The way in which it co-operates with its infantry is specially good. Step by step it follows the infantry advance with patient care, and I have Never was there any real ground for own men or leave them in a pinch without the moral support of the guns. In return the infantry sticks well to the guns, and I have never noticed nor have heard recorded an instance where the infantry cleared out regardless of the fate of the guns.

The moral effect of artillery fire is thoroughly understood and exploited by the Germans. Against infantry in trenches, after finding that shrapnel does not cause a quittance, they try high explosive, less likely to be deadly, but more terrifying. On a wide battlefield a proportion of their guns will fire — seemingly without known aim—at points all over the place. This is evidently not only with the hope of finding a chance mark but of breeding terror over the whole field, making troops fire. It is an expensive way of causing fright, but against unseasoned troops can be useful.

The German big guns were laid perfectly. It was always possible to see what they were aimed at and to recognize that the aim was good. In the bombardment of Antwerp in particular I noticed this. The guns clearly had exactly the right elevation and exactly the right deflection. The last stage of that bombardment showed perfection in big gun pointing. Six shells in quick succession came within a few yards of the Hotel de Ville.

The German infantry has to be credited with a very stubborn courage, but it was, so far as can be judged, chiefly "officers'" courage. Left to themselves the German infantrymen were prone to surrender, though the same men under their officers would suffer the most severe punishment without flinching. The virtues and defects alike of the German military system concentrated in the infantry. Educated, partly by godly precept, partly by brutality, into believing that the military officer is a being apart, worthy of worship, the German rank and file follow their officers, or are driven forward by their officers, in positions which seem almost desperate. On the other hand, the rank and file, deprived of their officers, are more helpless than French or British soldiers in the same circumstances.

In entrenching himself the German soldier is as good as the best book work and methodical practice can make him. In taking advantage of natural cover he is far inferior to the British. In this he displays absence of initiative. The virtues and defects alike of his training send him to the charge in close platoons. Thus he is easier to kill, but more terrible if he arrive. His marksmanship is inferior to that of the British soldier, but his volley firing, helped by the flat trajectory of his rifle, can be very effective. He is not fond of the bayonet as a weapon.

In regard to minor points the German air work was far better than was expected in the absence of any special advertisement of her airmen before the war. Her aeroplane proved a very good, very serviceable model, and the aeronauts were, it seemed, standardized. A Taube could always be relied upon for about the same speed and daring.

The German commissariat and transport had astonishingly hard work to do and seemed on the whole to do it very well. Occasionally the men lacked food, but I do not think they ever lacked ammunition. Food problems were in part solved by the system of pillage, but the demands of the wasteful guns had to be supplied from headquarters, and, apparently, always were.

Atlantic City grows more and more overcrowded. Even the sea breeze seems to have a stuffy smell there now."

The speaker was Dr. Adeler, the Denver pioneer of sea-and-sun therapy. He resumed:

"Two ladies sat on an Atlantic City piazza. The first said—

"'The beach is all covered with shells.'

"'Oh, how lovely!' said the second lady.

"'Lovely?' returned the first. 'Why, I think it's horrid to let the excursionists throw their peanut rubbish all over the place like that.'" must be the watchword when the housewife buys baking powder.

Alum is well known to be a powerful astringent, and should never be used in food.

Prof. Geo. F. Barker, M. D., of the University of Pennsylvania, says: "I consider the use of alum baking powder highly injurious to health."

Food economy now, more than ever, demands the purchase and use of those food articles of known high quality and absolute purity and healthfulness.

Georgia Religious Community Worships as Divine a Pretty Girl

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 16—There is a queer religious group in Georgia that worships as divine a pretty 20-year-old girl who believes she has been called, like the Apostles of old, to preach the Word. This female Elijah the second has left home and friends to teach the meaning of simple faith and Christianity to all who will listen to her. The advent of the girl preacher has caused a religious stir in Georgia. People come eagerly to see a young woman worshipped as a divinity.

A few years ago Ida Hawkins was the she daughter in a well-to-do family in Baltimore. Her brother was cashier in a bank there. Both decided that God had called them to preach, and they journeyed together into the Georgia hills, where, in a tent like a white cup turned down on a green cloth, the girl evangelist became a leader of a group of plain Georgia farmers and their wives who look upon her as a religious Joan of Arc.

The sect is undenominational. They are neither Methodists nor Baptists nor Presbyterians—they are all of them. The girl preacher and her helpers journey from place to place—wherever people will listen to them—and the young woman always does the preaching. She believes that it is meant to-day for some people to go out and teach as the Apostles taught—and that she is one of them. She preaches the simple word from the book in her hand—without doctrine and without creed. She speaks from the opening of the tent to the people on the green hills.

The girl's voice is soft, her manner simple, and her delivery clear. The queer group with which she has surrounded herself believe that she is immune from bodily ills, and they declare that at times they can see a supernatural light playing over her face. Ida Hawkins herself does not countenance the divinity that has been thrust upon her.

The people who attend her meetings read from Bibles in their laps or pray. Some lean with elbows on the seats in front of them, both hands closed and resting against their cheeks. All of them are absorbed in the girl who stands before them on the platform, where the light falls on her hair and makes it shimmer. The lower part of her face is in shadow, but a full light rests on her eyes and forehead. This light and shadow effect caused by the tent arrangement gives to her face the expression of a religious painting.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Aganaia., B. C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly completely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

After the War--What?

When the war is over, what then? Are there good times or hard times in store for us? Will the era of high prices continue, with steady work for all, or will we experience a setback that will keep us poor for years?

The answer to that question is very largely in our own hands. It depends on us Canadians—not on the few in high places, but on every one of us.

Every year we are importing hundreds of millions of dollars worth of goods, much of which could be produced just as well in Canada.

Suppose they were produced here. Think of the number of workmen who would be employed. Think of what it would mean in wages, and money kept in circulation. Think of what it would mean to our farmers, to our shopkeepers—to our builders, to everybody.

Think of what it would mean to you.

They can be produced here, they will be produced here, if you just stop and think every time you make a purchase.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Delighted With City of San Diego

Mr. Frank Mason Gives Examiner Readers a Description of Beautiful Californian City Where He is at Present.

MAGNIFICENT FLOWERS

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—To fulfil a promise made you to give a brief description of my trip to California and also of this pace, "San Diego," pronounced (Santago). I will now, after a month's residence here be better able to do. Leaving Peterborough on Tuesday morning, October 6th, by C.P.R., the afternoon of the same day, we got to Windsor, and without any notice, our train was divided into two portions, one part going over by ferry boat, the other part going through the tunnel, we going to one station in Detroit and our baggage, through the tunnel, to another station, as quickly as possible, with the aid of a dollar, we got transferred to the other station, but a few minutes too late for our train and this required a stop-over at Detroit until next morning. I wired from there to Chicago to secure berths. I will not trouble you by relating all the little details of this trip. Two days' travelling through the desert was very monotonous; ascending the mountains, going through thirty or forty miles of snow-sheds and passing many small settlements and mining camps, away up in the mountains, relieved somewhat this tiresome trip through the sands of such an extensive desert; sand and mountains everywhere; very little vegetation to be seen. We caught up with our baggage at Oakland, on Saturday and arrived in Los Angeles on Sunday afternoon. My daughter and grandchild were met by some friends and taken to the country. I found my old Peterborough friend, J. C. Turnbull, and his amiable family, happily situated here and pleased to meet with me. On Monday I arrived in San Diego and met with my sister, whom I had not seen for a number of years. In a few days I located a nice little bungalow, with modern built-in devices, overlooking the harbour and ocean, and can see from my own door vessels coming in and going out, with Point Somoa across the bay. Now that is quite enough about myself. I want to tell you a lot of things about this city.

San Diego, in 1910, had a population of 39000, in 1913 its population had increased to 90,000. One thing which helps its steady growth is its low taxation—about one-half of that demanded in Peterborough. There is nothing so serious in a city, town or country as high taxes. This city is under a commission form of government particulars of which I quote from public record:

Five Councilmen, elected for four years, and a Mayor elected for two years, form the controlling body Each Councilman is at the head of one of the five departments: 1, Finance; 2, Water; 3 Police; 4, Fire; 5 Streets and Buildings. All employees of these departments are appointed by the Council, except the Auditor, who is appointed by the Mayor, with the consent of the Council. The Mayor appoints the Board of Health, composed of five members;; Library Commission, three members; Park Commission, three members; Cemetery Commission, three members; Playground Comission, three members.

The City Treasurer and the Board of Education of five members are elected by the people. All franchises and bond-issues must be approved by the people, and all ordinances are subject to a referendum. The people may also initiate legislation and recall any elected official.

I might say here in connection with the above that there is a Taxpayers' Association, who elect a Board of Directors with committees to look after the different interests of the city and guard as well the ratepayers, each member of this Association paying a membership fee.

The Police Department.

This department consists of 115 persons. It is splendidly disciplined and its administration is along thoroughly modern lines. Traffic men with large powers are placed at congested corners. Aside from these men there are roundsmen, motorcycle men, mounted officers, detectives and auto drivers of sufficient numbers to insure the best of order and security.

The Fire Department.

The personnel of the fire department is of the highest type. This fact, together with the most modern equipment and superb water supply, gives the City ample protection, with correspondingly low rates of insurance. The record of fire loss in San Diego in 1912 was one of the lowest of any city in the world. There are 195 Gamewell boxes, 11 stations and 70 men.

The department is motorized, with the exception of one company.

The value of buildings and equipment is $233,940.00.

The Water Department.

August 15th, 1912, the water system supplying the City of San Diego, became the property of the municipality; previous to that it had been controlled by a private coroporation.

The complete system is the largest of its kind in California, outside of the aqueduct system of Los Angeles.

The water is first taken from the Morena Reservoir, sixty miles from San Diego. This reservoir has a storage capacity of 15,000,000,000 gallons. From here it passes through a natural channel to what is known as the Barrett Dam Site. At this place the City has planned to build another dam, thereby forming a second reservoir of another 15,000,000,000 gallons. From the Barrett dam-site, the water is carried to the Dulsura Creek bottom, through what is known as the Dulsura conduit. This conduit is of concrete, 13.38 miles long, and was completed January 3rd, 1909. The average width is about five feet, average depth four feet two inches, and it has a carrying capacity when full of 40000 000 gallons in 24 hours. The conduit, at its lowest end, delivers the water into another natural channel, known as the Dulsura Creek. This stream carries the water into the Otay Lakes. The upper Otay has a capacity of 1,000,000,000 gallons; the lower Otay has a capacity of 13,000,000,000 gallons. From here the water is taken to the Chollas Heights Reservoir, about four miles from the city limits of San Diego, where it is filtered. This reservoir, itself, holds 90,000,000 gallons.

Public Schools.

One of the prime factors in the making of a great city is its educational advantages. San Diego has a complete system of schools, which ranks among the most modern and up-to-date in a state famous for its educational activities.

The system embraces 21 school buildings, the aggregate value of which, including lands, buildings, and equipment, is $1,559,700.

High Schol.

San Diego has, to-day, the most cosmopolitan, thoroughly equipped, secondary school on the Pacific Coast. There are three departments—literary scientific, commercial and technical—which will accommodate 2,000 students. Cost, $500,000.

Grammar Schools.

San Diego is the home of the one-storey, open-air school, where teachers and pupils work under ideal class room conditions of light and ventilation. Each of the large central schols also has a kindergarten. The Grant and Jefferson Schol plans for open-air schools recently won first prize in competition with 450 schools of different states. Special supervisors are provided for all grades in health and development, busic, drawing, manual training, arts and crafts domestic science, household arts and physical culture.

Normal School.

The scholastic advantages of the city are still further enhanced by the State Normal School. Annual enrollment, 500.

Library contains 12,000 volumes.

Value of grounds, buildings and equipment, $313,000.

Climate.

As a general proposition the climates of California are good; some are better than others, and San Diego's is the best. A climate, to be good, must be neither too hot nor too cold; there must be no extremes of temperature, no violent changes or atmospheric disturbances, such as electrical, rain or wind storms, resulting in the loss of property and human life. Such a climate as this approaches the ideal as far as man's knowledge goes. San Diego has such a climate; it is almost an ideal climate. It is the best climate in California, and this is saying a good deal in its favour. It is the best in the United States, which is covering more territory but perhaps adding very little to the recommendation; it may have its equal in the world, but no superior.

Next to climate, good roads is the greatest asset of San Diego County. The State of California has appropriated eighteen millions of dollars to be used in building permanent roads. San Diego County will get the benefit of State Highways to the extent of one hundred and fifty miles, seventy miles of which will be along the coast in sight of the Pacific, and ninety miles east of San Diego to connect with the great Imperial Valley. The cost of the State Highway is, approximately, $6,500.00 per mile. It is 16 feet wide, with a base of concrete, and surfaced with a mixture of oil and small rock screenings for a wearing surface.

In addition to these magnificent highways San Diego County has spent, approximately, two million dollars in the construction of between five and six hundred miles of wonderful contour roads over the County. Most of these roads have been surfaced with disintegrated granite, and are very durable. The proper bridges have been put in and no grade exceeds six per cent.

I will now say, in conclusion, that this journey across the continent has been a most wonderful revelation to me—the vastness of its wilderness, the grandeur of its mountains, the wonderful fertility of its irrigated soil, its genial, salubrious climate, with the magnificent Pacific Ocean gently washing upon its shores, and to describe the beauty, the unequalled picturesque appearance of this city of San Diego is beyond my powers. Its many and wonderful canyons, with its pretty embowered bungalows and white Moorish designed palaces. Palm trees, for shade, as common as maples or elms, in Canada. Oranges, lemons, grape fruit, figs an dother fruit-growing trees in abundance; flowers everywhere. Bouganvillea climbing to the tops of houses, all out in bloom, in two colours, red and purple; hedges of Santana are all out in bloom; hedges of different kinds of geraniums, all in bloom; large trees of accacia and the Hibiscus trees, single and double flowers, such as we would raise in pots, in green-houses, at home, and many tropical plants, the names of which I am not familiar. The climate is like our June weather in Canada. The gardener may have three or four crops during the year, as there is really no winter here, though the citizens talk about spring, summer, fall and winter, and, in fact, I have seen quite a number wearing furs, with the thermometer from 70 to 75 in the daytime. The nights are lovely and cool so one may sleep soundly.

Yours respectfully,
Frank Mason.

MR. SUTHERLAND AND AS SESSMENT REVISION

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly publish the following facts and let the citizens of Peterborough judge how their affairs are managed by a few persons called a Court of Revision? I occupy the store premises, 323 George Street and premises attached. My business assessment for 1914 was placed at $1,550.00, but on appeal was reduced to $1,020.00. This year it is raised to $1,810.00, and advance of $810.00; for what? I occupy only one room during the summer. I can neither rent nor use it, yet it is assessed at $1,810.00, which I appealed against. I attended the first sitting of the Court and stated these facts, and was asked to let it come up when the George Street assessments were heard, to which I agreed. I closed my store and attended the second sitting of the Court, which was adjourned till Saturday afternoon, the busiest day of the week for me. I tried to get to the Court, but found it impossible to get out, so they simply confirmed the assessment without a hearing, although they promised to send for me when my appeal came up. I was surprised to see the arbitrary way in which the proceedings were conducted. We were told that it was of no use for us to appeal if we could realise the amount the property was assessed, for there seemed to be a decided agreement to resist the appeals. My idea of going to this court was to get justice, but I leave it to the general public to say, if paid servants of the public should use their authority in this way. It comes to this, that I am compelled to go out of business on account of excessive taxation. I observe that some of the appeals in Toronto, Hamilton and other cities were cut down. We are entitled to a reduction. This matter may be referred to a higher court.

Yours truly,
James Sutherland.

Germans Forced To Yield Strong Positions

Offensive of French Forces Results in the Capture of all Positions on Left Bank With Exception of Chauvancour, Whose Outskirts Have Been Taken—Flood Holds up Operations.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The feature of the bulletin issued yesterday afternoon by the French War Office, is the report that the Germans have been driven from strongholds long held by them along the River Meuse, which stream they crossed shortly after the war on their dash to Paris. The French troops near St. Mihiel, have taken possession of the outskirts of the Village Chauvancour, the only point remaining in German hands on the left bank of the Meuse. The successes of the French forces, as given in the bulletin, indicate renewed activity by this section of the French line.

The correspondent of The Times in Flanders telegraphs that the Germans have completely evacuated the left bank of the Yser Canal and that the floods are seriously jeopardizing the Germans' position at Dixmude. The French are nominally holding the south end of the town of Dixmude and the Germans the north side. There is much hand-to-hand fighting.

"Recent days have been entirely favorable," the allies' correspondent says, "and it may be taken as certain that the retreat of the enemy is simply a question of time. Between our forces and the enemy, the whole way from Nieuport to Dixmude, there is a protective sheet of water and all hopes of a German advance have been frustrated."

The country between Bixschoote and Armentieres and the heights of the Meuse appear to be the centres of activity, but elsewhere the combat is confined to artillery duels. Severe losses were inflicted on the invaders in western Belgium and north of the River Aisne and in the Argonne forest district in France. Along the centre of the battle line on the Aisne, near Soissons, there have been some sharp infantry engagements resulting in slight gains for the allies. In the Argonne the French have succeeded in mining and blowing up some of the German trenches.

A detachment of Germans was killed when French mines blew up their trenches. Entire detachments, which tried to capture French fortifications near Vailly, were destroyed by artillery fire. The Germans have been washed out of their trenches at many points in the flooded section about Dixmude. Many have been drowned. commands, separated by the waters have been wiped out by the allied artillery fire. The Kaiser's soldiers made desperate efforts to gain control of the canal dykes, but each assault was repulsed.

An extended movement of troops or guns is now virtually impossible in Eastern Belgium. The trenches occupied by the Germans are half filled with water and in many places the Franco-British are in water up to their knees, but bravely hold their positions in the face of heavy German artillery fire. On account of the danger of electrocution to their own men, both the Germans and the allies have shut off the electric current with which the wire entanglements before the trenches were charged. Numerous fatalities have resulted from the water rising above the entanglements, greatly increasing the deadly power in the charged wires.

It is reported that many thousands of soldiers from the western battle field are passing through Cologne en route to East Prussia. Eight thousand infantry have arrived at Aix-la-Chapelle and are proceeding in the direction of Brussels. From Thielt, two of the big German 40 centimeter guns have passed through Aix-la-Chapelle on their way to Dixmude.

A correspondent in Dunkirk telegraphs that the German losses during the last four days of fighting in western Belgium are estimated at 100,000. The casualties in the allied ranks were heavy, but favorable progress was made. There is no question that the German forces who have made their repeated attacks in the Dixmude-Ypres are utterly exhausted. Beyond doubt their losses have been staggering.

"Annie Laurie"

The World's Best Music—"Annie Laurie."

They sang of love, and not of fame;
Forgot was Britain's glory;
Each heart recalled a different name,
But all sang "Annie Laurie."

Yes, friends, our boys sang "Annie Laurie" in the Crimean war just as they are now singing, "Its a Long Way to Tipperary" to-day in France, and they are no doubt also singing the old song, for "Annie Laurie" has come to mean, the universal soldier's sweetheart, "The Girl I Left Behind Be," and it is pleasant to know that there really was an Annie Laurie, once, two centuries ago, she was a blooming lassie. Here is the record, exactly as it was made in a trueworthy old "Ballad Book," collected by Charles Kirkpatrick Sharpe, of Roddam: Sir Robert Laurie, first baronet of the Maxwellton family (created 27th March, 1685) by his second wife, a daughter of Ridello Minto, had three sons and four daughters, of whom Annie was much celebrated for her beauty, and made a conquest of Mr. Douglas of Kirkcudbrightshire who composed the verses under an unlucky star, for the lady married Mr. Ferguson of Craigdarrock. The present air of Annie Laurie is the composition of Lady John Scott, authoress of both words and music of many songs, which have become popular in her own country. Her maiden name was Alicia Anne Spottiswoode. She married in 1836, Lord John Douglas Scott, a son of the Duke of Buccleuch. A collection of Lady Scott's musical compositions has been published in London. The sentiment of the old song is carried out in the play "Annie Laurie," which will be presented by the Royal Scotch Players at the Grand Opera House, one night only, Monday, Nov. 23rd.

Failure Of Second Attempt

French War Office Announces Close of Great Seven-Day Battle

BORDEAUX, Nov. 18. — (Via Paris.)—The bulletin of the armies of the republic thus sums up the military situation:

"The second battle in Flanders seems to be drawing to a close. At the present date, Nov. 17, after a fierce struggle lasting seven days, the German effort appears to be broken.

"It has been, as with the preceding attempts, a massacre of dense columns of infantry led to the assault by newly-appointed officers whose bravery does not compensate for inexperience. In the presence of such results it may be affirmed that the superior instruction and preparation of which the German infantry gave proof at the beginning of hostilities—qualities which greatly contributed to their successes in the month of August—have disappeared and that today, so far as direction and fighting, fire control and maintenance of contact between infantry and artillery are concerned, superiority has passed to our side."

THE ZERO MARK WAS REACHED

Cold wintry conditions now prevail over the greater portion of the Dominion. The temperature in Peterborough, last night, reached the zero mark. The weather man concedes it to be unusually cold for this time in the year, but looks for a spell of fine weather before real winter sets in. At twelve o'clock last evening, the thermometer registered ten degrees above zero, two hours later, zero was recorded for the first time since April last.

Mid-winter weather has settled on the western provinces and at 8 a.m. yesterday 20 degrees below zero was registered in Winnipeg. The previous night it was 26 below. Eighteen below was registered in Minnesota and Qu'Appelle, 14 below at Battleford, 12 below at Prince Albert, and 14 below in White River, Ont.

On Salisbury Plain.

"It is true that it rains oftener in England than in Toronto or Canada, and yet it does not rain so heavily there. I think the climate around Salisbury Plains is one of the finest in the world. No, the winter there is by no means as cold as the winter season in Toronto. A Canadian might think it cold at 40 degrees above zero, when the air is damp; but the normal temperature for the whole winter at Salisbury is only about two degrees lower than April's average temperature in Toronto. The boys with the Canadian contingent will be better off in England than the ones encampel at the Exhibition."

Thus was the weather of this city and Salisbury Plains compared by Mr. R. F. Stupart, director of the Meteorological Service in Canada, who has travelled considerably. He pointed out that the weather was rainy at Salisbury Plains on five days of the seven in the last week of October. The rainfall amounted to 1.67 inches, double the average fall. This is the rainy season, though, which accounts for the increase in precipitation. On two days of the last week in October a white frost spread itself over the headquarters of the Canadian contingent in the old country.

THE EFFECTS OF HOME TRAINING

Children Can be Taught to Take Intelligent Interest in Civic Beauty

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I noted your recent editorial "Children and Civic Beauty" and wish to support it by a few remarks from personal experience on the effect of home training. My experience is that if children are allowed to use their own playground for initiative purposes and are encouraged to grow plants, the result is an intelligent interest in civic works and a respect for the rights and property of others scarcely credible in children. I experience no trouble with children who come in daily to play on the premises. They soon adopt the habit of playing without destroying plants or other property. Six or eight boys have played spirited games of baseball or cricket without any damage other than a few flower stalks neatly beheaded by a hard ball. The habit of carefulness has become so well established that a group of children often play hide-and-seek among the plants and shrubs without trampling them. A caution or a word of advice once in a while was all I found necessary to remind the children in the beginning if they forgot.

A piece of miniature landscape gardening was done in a corner of the playground by one of my own boys last spring, and although the children used to play about it, often running up and down its tiny walk, yet it remained a thing of beauty all summer. The children acquired the habit of examining the plants from the formation of the buds to the ripening of the seeds. A frequent sight was several small heads close together examining a blossom, seed-pod or other part of a plant. These children often ask me for flowers which I never refuse. They cherish what is given them, either wearing them as button-hole bouquets or taking them home.

I might here mention that our playground, which I supervise myself, was specially laid out for children. The plants, shrubs and vegetables which grow in the borders being of the hardy sort.

A love for wild flowers seems to be inherent in children. Evidence of this may be seen by anyone who cares to watch them. I have met small boys in strawberry time each carrying in one hand a small pail or can of berries, while the other hand held a collection of such wild flowers as grew in the vicinity of the strawberries. Last spring I came across a small boy (entirely alone), in Jackson Park, carefully picking Marsh Marigolds. I stopped a moment to talk to him and found him to be a bright little fellow having not only a love for the flowers but an intelligent interest in the places where different kinds of flowers grow. He showed me where the violet beds were, telling me in his boyish way what kind of violets they were. Perhaps some day Peterborough may be proud of a noted botanist or naturalist in this little lad.

I have observed that children, even very small ones instinctively associate wild flowers with their mothers. When I take small groups of children to the outskirts of the city for fresh air and change of scene, they gather the flowers of the field and tell me they are "going to take them to mother."

Home training is the basis of that education which prepares children for good citizenship when, as you say, "Not only the head, but the heart, the soul, the taste must be developed; the higher faculties cultivated."

To remain effective, home training must be followed by efforts of school teachers and city authorities in the same direction. What can we say when children who have learned to love and respect the things of nature, ask (and they do ask) such questions as, "Why are caterpillars allowed to destroy trees?" "Why are some of the most beautiful trees on our streets cut down?" and "Why are the flowers of Jackson Park mown down and burned?"

I leave it to you, Mr. Editor, to answer.

Sifton Battery To the Front.

TORONTO, Nov. 18. — A Toronto chauffeur has received a letter from a member of the automobile corps forming part of the Sifton Machine Gun Battery, which was mailed twelve days ago from Salisbury Plain. The writer says that the Machine Gun Battery has received orders to prepare to go to the front with the Princess Patricia Regiment. It is probable that the battery and the Princess Patricia Regiment are in France and close to the battlefield by this time.

Gen. von Blankensee Dead.

BERLIN, Nov. 18. — (Via The Hague to London.)—Major-Gen. von Blankensee died Nov. 14 of wounds received in action, according to a statement issued here yesterday.

Suffered Intense Pain in Her Back.

Could Hardly Do Her Housework.

If a pain attacks you in the back "stop and think" what it is and what causes it.

If the kidneys are at fault—and in a large majority of cases of pain in the back they are—doctor them at once, and doctor them persistently, as it is impossible to have a well strong back unless the kidneys perform their functions properly.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure all forms of kidney trouble, and cure them to stay cured.

Mrs. H. F. Jacob, Lavant Station, Ont., writes: "I take pleasure in telling you how much good your medicine has done me. I had suffered from intense pains in my back, and was so bad I could hardly do my housework. My kidneys were also bothering me a great deal. I tried several kinds of patent medicines, and was almost discouraged, and was looking for some other kind of medicine to try when I noticed your advertisement of Doan's Kidney Pills, so I thought it could not hurt to try them. I noticed a great difference when I had used one box, and to my great relief when I had used three boxes I was entirely cured, and I have not been bothered since. I will not hesitate to recommend them to all I know."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c a box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

CANADIAN GENERAL HAVE FORMED THEE COMPANIES

It is a splendid movement and one that deserves the hearty support of every patriotic citizen. It utilizes ready-to-hand equipment, and gives everyone an opportunity to learn without cost and without the expenditure of much time or effort.

Form Three Companies.

From this splendid meeting, there being some one hundred and fifty men present; I have no hesitation in stating we can form three companies to assist in this movement, and it will be necessary for us to nominate officers, to-night, as follows:

Three Captains.
Six Lieutenants.
Three Colour-Sergeants.
Nine Sergeants.
Twelve Corporals.

The expenses of the organization are met as follows:

First. The Governments will furnish as soon as possible, ten rifles for 40 men and on additional rifle for each four men; they also furnish 250 rounds of ammunition to each per annum.

Second. By voluntary contributions by municipalities, corporations, or individuals.

Third. An annual fee of $1 per member.

This fee is payable whenever the members can afford it and the present officers of your association will never ask an individual member for this fee as we well understand that a man working on short time, or not at all, cannot spare any amount. Our motto is "Men, no Dollars," and we hope we will be assisted by everybody. Do not let false pride stand in the way of your tendering your help in this movement.

It is not our intention to encourage men under thirty to join us in this movement as we feel that all young men who are physically capable should join the active militia, but of course if there are reasons that a man cannot see his way clear to join the military we will be pleased to have him with us.

The Service Roll.

The service roll is as follows:

"Service Roll of the Home Guard of Peterborough, Province of Ontario.—We whose names are hereunto subscribed, declare we have taken the oath of allegiance to the Sovereign, and we voluntarily agree to serve in the Peterborough Home Guard (Peterborough Civilian Rifle Association) under the conditions set forth in the regulations prescribed or hereinafter to be prescribed for Rifle Associations."

You will be pleased to know that we will have a first-class instructor from our own staff. Mr. Charles Peters has kindly promised to take us in hand and make first-class "Tommy Atkins" of us, and gentlemen, I can assure you that there is no better instructor in Canada than Mr. Peters, probably no man has passed as many officers through his hands as he has and he is known from one end of Ontario to the other by officers in the regulas and militia and is universally respected.

You will be asked to sign temporary service rolls and will be posted to either one of the three companies. The oath will be taken later and it will be necessary for Company officers to see that each member of his Company signs the Department Service Roll, and takes the oath of allegiance and in addition, to obtain the street address of each member.

Not Alone In.

We are not alone in this movement. It is a time when each man and citizen of our great Empire is facing his own soul and is asking himself where he stands. A large number of our comrades, especially among the men under thirty, have enlisted, and are now at the front, or preparing themselves for the front.

We all hope and pray that no more of our men may be required, but it does seem at the present time that such a hope is far away, indeed. Let us go into this movement with a quiet determination to do our share whatever small, and we may find that our share is a determining factor for peace by declaring to the whole world that the British Empire has, at its back, every citizen of Canada. A man who will not declare himself at this awful period is not worthy of such an honour as to be considered a citizen of the great Empire that Canada is a part of.

The following are the officers:

Instructor—Chas. Peters.

Captains—R. E. Layfield, J. G. M. Wilson, C. E. Sisson.

Lieutenants—George Young, A. G. Grier, John Pilling, Enos Maybee, F. Oxley, S. P. Ecclestone.

Sergeants—Thos. Distin, F. Derocher, F. Pakenham, C. H. Hicks, John Bryette, P. Adamson.

Colour-Sergeants — Frank Joyes, H. W. Christie, F. Hart, Frank Lawess, W. A. Crawley, W. S. Robinson.

Corporals—W. M. Bletcher, C. H. Hill, J. Sanderson, E. Stanley, W. Lyburn W. Shiner, G. A. Salkeld, W. Rogers, E. E. Lord, A. E. Ames, J. Theobald R. S. Rose.

Three Convictions Were Quashed in the County Court

His Honour Judge Huycke Finds That "Joe's" Pool Room is Not a Gaming House Within the Meaning of the Law—Fines Were Set Aside—Game Was Arranged for $125 a Side.

Raymond Sullivan, having charge of "Joe's" Pool Room, was convicted of keeping a common gaming house, and Nelson Parsonson and David Patterson were convicted of being frequenters.

The evidence showed that a game was arranged between Parsonson and Patterson for $125 a side, and that both parties tried to lose on account of side bets. Parsonson won. An appeal was made from the conviction and it was agreed between counsel to submit written arguments instead of having the case re-tried, as is usual in such cases.

Mr. Joseph Wearing acted for the Crown. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for Sullivan.

Mr. Macdonald of Curry, O'Connor Wallace and Macdonald, of Toronto, acted for Patterson and Parsonson.

The Judgment.

Rex vs. Sullivan.
Rex. vs. Paterson.
Rex. vs. Parsonson.

The above are three convictions made by the Police Magistrate of the City of Peterborough and before me in appeal.

The parties by counsel have arrived at a very novel and very ingenious method of bringing the appeals before me. If they are satisfied, I do not complain, but it is somewhat unsatisfactory to me, as the record is necessarily incomplete under the circumstances.

Sullivan is convicted of keeping a common gaming-house, and Paterson and Parsonson of frequenting or being found in the said gaming-house.

A common-gaming house is defined as follows, by the Code, Section No. 226.

"A common-gaming house is a house, room of place kept by any person for gain, to which persons resort for the purpose of playing at any game of chance or at any mixed game of chance and skill; or a house, room, or place kept or used for playing therein at any game of chance or any mixed game of chance and skill in which a bank is kept by one or more of the players exclusively of the others or any game is played the chances of which are not alike favour able to all the players, including among the players the banker, or other person by whom the game is managed, or against whom the game is managed, or against whom the other payers stake, play or bet."

I quite agree with the learned Magistrate in reprehending the conduct of at least two of the defendants, the two frequenters or players. In fact the circumstances surrounding the whole affair are discreditable to a degree and a reflection upon all parties engaged in it.

But that is not the question to be tried.

If the case as proved is brought within the four corners of the above section, the convictions must stand, if not they must be set aside.

Some of the evidence and arguments of counsel and indeed part of the judgments appealed from seem to apply more to the case of a betting the judgments appealed from seem to apply, provided for by a wholly different section of the Code. And even so, there were but two bets, one of which was unquestionably made in the Snowden House. The other, the first one, may have been made, as found, in the pool room in question, and it was so stated in court. On the other hand another witness for the Crown swore with equal positiveness, and perhaps with greater truthfulness, that it was made in the Grand Hotel. But be that as it may it related to the game which was discontinued, "called off," "withdrawn," and neither the game or the bet on it was completed. But even adopting the strongest view against the defendants, "one "instance is proved, or perhaps two, "but that falls far short of what would "be required to attach to it the char-"acter of a gambling house. The legis-"lation is pointed at houses where "gambling is practiced and the house "kept for such purposes." (See Boyd Chancellor in Rex. v. Spegelwon, 9 Canadian Criminal Cases at p. 171.)

The judgment is based on the finding that in this place was played a game of pool, also found to be "a mixed game of chance and skill." The Magistrate so found and the learned Crown Counsel strongly upholds it and says this is the crux of the case. On the evidence adduced no one could say the judgment erred in so finding. I do not quarrel with it on the evidence, nor in these cases, though I do not overlook the fact that many eminent authorities, including the Encyclopaedia Brittanica, last edition, declare that billiards of which pool, the game complained of is a species, is not a game of chance or of mixed chance and skill, but a game of skill and skill alone. But the above finding is not enough, on which to found a conviction. I think not. Assume that pool is thus a mixed game and the table kept there for hire at 40c. an hour as is admitted, that is simply and only keeping a pool or billiard room with tables for hire.

It is also admitted that Sullivan was in charge of "Joe's" poolroom, a place licensed by the City of Peterborough as provided and permitted by the Legislation of Ontario, to keep pool and billiard tables for hire or rent to customers for the express purpose of playing. Sullivan was in charge of such a place doing no more and no less than provided by his license. To convict him is to say that what he did pursuant to a city license issued under a Provincial Statute is an indictable offence under the Criminal Code of the Dominion. This would seem to me a patent absurdity, and I decline to so hold. The conviction of Sullivan is set aside.

Patterson and Parsonson are convicted of being found in Sullivan's gaming house. As I must find it is not a gaming house with the meaning of the law, their fines and convictions must also be set aside, though as I before stated, I think their conduct throughout far from creditable. Costs not asked for and not given.

All three convictions quashed. No costs.

A SIMPLE WAY TO REMOVE DANDRUFF

Prevent Falling Hair and End Itching Scalp.

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need) apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve, and entirely destroy, every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you value your hair, you should get rid of dandruff at once, for nothing destroys the hair so quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless.

WAS INTERNED IN MONTREAL.

Local German Seeks to Become a Naturalized Citizen.

Hans Loescher, formerly of Berlin, has made application for naturalization papers. The applicant, who is now residing in Peterborough, is nineteen years of age. He came to this country three years ago, before he had reached an age where he would be required to enter the ranks of the German militia.

The outbreak of the war found Hans Loescher employed on a steamer plying on the St. Lawrence river. He, together with a number of Germans and Austrians, were removed from their positions, and placed in a detention camp in Montreal. This had the effect of depriving Hans Loescher of about two months' pay in addition to a bonus amounting to about seventy-five dollars that he would have received at the end of the season. He was able to satisfy the authorities that he was not a reservist, and had no intention of returning to his native land, whereupon he was released. He then came to Peterborough, where he has a number of friends. Since arriving here, he has made application for naturalization papers.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Maranville Was Lucky

Might Have Been a Tinsmith If His Father Had Had His Way

Walter Maranville, the greatest shortstop in the game, broke into baseball against his father's wishes. Pere Maranville thought that "Rabbit" would make a mighty good tinner, but as a ball player—bah!

Several years ago the "Rabbit" played amateur baseball in odd moments, and his work attracted the attention of the New Bedford (Mass.) team. "Rabbit" got an offer from the New Bedford club and went to his dad about it.

"Turn it down," said Papa Maranville to "Rabbit," who just then was learning the tinner's trade. "In a few years you'll develop into a good tinner and you will make good wages—at least $25 a week. As a ball player you'll never make good. You're too small."

"Rabbit," however, had ambitions to become a ball player. He thought he could make good even if his father din't. He disregarded the advice of his dad and signed up with New Bedford.

"You'll be sorry—and so will I," said his father when he heard what "Rabbit" had done. "You'll never make good. They'll fire you in mighty short order. And you'll get so used to loafing that you won't want to work at your tinning job again. Instead of having a son that I can be proud of, a son who works hard at a regular trade, I'll have a son who won't be working at anything."

Was papa right—or, was pape wrong?

Incidentally, it might be stated that Maranville, in his two years with New Bedford and three years with the Braves, has earned about twenty times as much money as he would have earned at the tinning trade, and that during the next five years, unless an accident wrecks his future, he will earn more money than he would have earned in forty years as a tinner.

PLAYERS MUST BE PROTECTED

Federal League Contracts Will Have to be Carried Out

"Dave Fultz has once more taken his pen in hand to declaim the rights of the downtrodden baseball player. Now that peace, is under consideration between organized baseball and the Federal League magnates, Fultz is beginning to get anxious as to the lot of the Federal League players in the event of a conciliation between his erstwhile masters and his present bosses.

Mr. Fultz has issued the following statement:

"In the peace negotiations between organized ball and the Federal League much has been said about taking care of the Federal League magnates, but little about taking care of the Federal League players. Should the Federal League be taken into organized ball, the immediate effect of such a move would be to restore automatically to full membership in the Baseball Players' Fraternity all Federal League players who were members previously except the eight or ten contract-jumpers.

MUST CARRY OUT CONTRACTS.

"Hundreds of players, both in the Federal League and organized ball, are under long-term contracts which contain no release clause. Any peace negotiations, therefore, which ignore these contracts will necessarily fall short of their purpose, as the Fraternity and the public will insist that all contracts be carried out.

"There have been reports to the effect that even those players who have gone to the Federal League without violating a contract will be disciplined. Any act of reprisal upon these players would most assuredly not be relished by our organization, and we would see that they received the publicity necessary to their extinction.

MAGNATES TO BLAME.

"The case of contract-jumpers stands on a different footing, but even here the magnates should remember that for every player who has jumped a contract there has been a magnate, an older and more experienced man, who has induced him to do so. If these magnates are to be purged of all alleged guilt and welcomed into organized ball, it is hard to see why the players should not be accorded the same treatment.

"Now that peace is about to be declared it is well for the public to note the fact that out of hundreds of players who have received flattering offers to jump their contracts less than ten of them have been induced to do so. That these men have lost thousands of dollars because they wished to be honest should be a glowing tribute to the integrity of the game and should go far to allay the suspicion which has crept into the minds of the public during these days of crimination and recrimination."

Easily Classified.

Hemmandhaw, who was writing a letter, looked up to inquire:

"Is it ever permissible to apply gender to witnesses?"

"I don't know," Mrs. Hemmandhaw returned, "but if it is they are surely masculine."

"Why?"

Taxes Will Be Increased

Lloyd George Presents Proposals to Meet Cost of War

MUST RAISE $2,500,000,000

LONDON, Nov. 18. — Proposals by Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, to increase the revenue of Britain by $1,697,855 were approved by the House of Commons last night with an outburst of enthusiasm.

The measures adopted include doubling the income tax and the imposition of an extra duty of three pence per pound on tea and one-half penny on the half pint of beer.

In presenting his financial statement, he said that he was making proposals not merely to meet the increased expenditure up to the end of March next, but to meet also the deficiency in the revenue. The total sum for which provision had been made already was £535,000,000, covering ordinary and war expenditure. The additional money which had to be found was £339,571,000. A full year of the war would cost £450,000,000.

He proposed that the income tax should be doubled, but that this year it would only be collected in respect of one-third of income.

The tea duty, he said, would produce £950,000 this year and £3,200,000 next year. The beer duty would yield £2,000,000 this year and £17,000,000 in the year following. The new taxation this year would realise £13,500,000 and suspension of the sinking fund would give £2,750,000.

The additional income tax would amount to a shilling in the pound on earned and one shilling eight pence on unearned income. Next year, he said, the tax would be one shilling six pence and half a crown respectively, with the same rate for the super-tax. The amount collectable for the present year is £12,500,000 and next year £44,750,000.

DAVY BELAND TO GET FORTY DOLLARS

QUEBEC, Nov. 17.—In the Circuit Court Dave Beland, a local sprinter and trainer of the Quebec hockey team, claimed $40 from Alex. Plante, former manager of the Queen City Realty Co. of Quebec.

Last winter a popularity contest was held between the Quebec hockey players, and the proceeds of the vote, a ticket sale, were to be distributed among the Quebec players. The contest netted $40, and the players decided to give Dave Beland the sum, and Beland claimed Plante never gave him the money, hence the action. Today Plante confessed judgment.

ATTACKS HAVE BEEN RESUMED

Germans Have Renewed Activities to East and South of Ypres

PARIS, Nov. 18. — The following bulletin was issued by the War Office last night:

"According to the latest advices, the enemy has renewed his attacks to the east and the south of Ypres, but they have not altered the situation. The impression is satisfactory.

"During the last two days we have registered progress more or less pronounced everywhere we have attacked; at Hetas, on the Yser, between Armentieres and Arras; in the region of Vailly, in the Argonne, and on the heights of the Meuse."

The afternoon communique says:

"From Nieuport to Dixmude, and in the region of Ypres, cannonading has been resumed with greater violence than on the preceding days. On the canal to the south of Dixmude the action of our artillery checked the work that the Germans were endeavoring to carry out to keep down the inundations. The enemy was compelled to evacuate a portion of his trenches which had been filled by the waters.

"Two attacks of German infantry, one to the south of Bixschoote and the other to the south of Ypres, resulted in failure. On our side we have made progress between Bixschoote and the canal.

"Between Armentieres and La Bassee there has been an artillery duel conducted with great spirit.

"On the Aisne certain German detachments which endeavored to cross the river in the vicinity of Vailly were either driven back or destroyed.

"On our positions on the right bank of the Aisne, upstream from Vailly, there has been violent cannonading. This applies also to the Rheims region, and several shells have fallen on the City of Rheims.

"In the Argonne there have not been any infantry engagements. We blew up with mines a certain number of German trenches. On the heights of the Meuse, to the south of Verdun, we have made advances at several points.

"In the region of St. Mihiel we have taken possession of the first houses of the village of Chauvoncourt. These houses served as barracks for the St. Mihiel garrison. This village of Chauvencourt is the only point of support still held by the Germans on the left bank of the River Meuse in this locality.

"On the rest of the front there has been nothing of importance to report."

IRON CROSS CHEAPLY WON

Meyer Waideck's Decoration Will Hurt Germany in Orient

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The news that the Kaiser has decorated Meyer Waldeck, late Governor of Tsingtau, with the Iron Cross and praised the conduct of the defenders of the fort is received here with amusement.

It is being pointed out that more than 5,000 able-bodied men surrendered while they still had plenty of ammunition and supplies.

Some critics declare that the surrender of Tsingtau was a worse case of "lying down" than Gen. Stoessel's surrender of Port Arthur in the Russo-Japanese war.

The Chinese express surprise that the Germans did not put up a better fight while defending the fort. It looks as though much damage had been done by this surrender, to the prestige of Germany in the far east.

CHARGE IS BEING DENIED

Britain is Using Authorized Bullet, Says War Office—Germany is Not

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The War Office last night issued a statement denying German allegations that the British troops have used dum-dum or soft-nosed bullets, but maintaining that these kinds of missiles have been used by the Germans.

The statement describes the British and German ammunition as very similar, the bullets being pointed with steel and the envelope coated with cupro-nickel, covering the core, except at the base, and conforming with the provisions of The Hague conference.

In the opinion of Sir Victor Horsley, a well-known surgeon, this bullet is "probably the most humane projectile yet devised," for the reason that "the long, solid point, consisting almost entirely of a hard nickel sheath, precludes as far as possible, any tendency toward deformation of shape, while the strength of the sheath prevents the bullet breaking up into fragments, except in very exceptional circumstances."

The statement concludes: "There is, however, clear evidence that Germany has not confined herself solely to the use of this unobjectionable ammunition. Her troops in both Togoland and France, prove to have used bullets with soft core and envelope not entirely covering the core, which type of bullet is expanding and is expressly prohibited by The Hague."

HELP FROM IRELAND

Otherwise Irishmen Must Bid Good-Bye to Home Rule Says O'Brien

LONDON, Nov. 18.—"We have got either to bid good-bye to Home Rule or help England honestly in this war," said Wm. O'Brien, member of the House of Commons from Cork, and leader of the Independent Nationalists, in writing yesterday a reply to constituents who had protested against the suggestion of conscription.

Irishmen, he said, were being cruelly led astray and their attitude towards the Government was "inexplicable."

This, he continued, "was furnishing to certain English politicians their only excuse for deserting the cause of Home Rule."

TO GO TO EGYPT?

Canadians May Be Used to Fight Turkey Says Col Shillington.

OTTAWA, Nov. 18. — Col. A. T. Shillington, Ottawa, who recently left Salisbury Plain to take charge of a field hospital in France, has written from the War Office to a friend here as follows:

"The War Office is considering the question of sending the Canadian contingent to Egypt since the Turks have thrown in their lot with the Germans. A Canadian contingent went with the Nile expedition in 1885 and they acquitted themselves most creditably. The climate also agreed well with them. Col. John Currie, M.P., of Toronto, has been called to the War Office for consultation and Col. Victor Williams and Col. Harry McLeod, M.P., of New Brunswick, are also being asked for their views and are in London to-day."

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

The Finance committee of the Peterborough Patriotic Association met last evening. A number of matters requiring attention were discussed and duly disposed of.

Board of Works.

The Board of Works committee of the City Council will meet this evening at eight o'clock. One of their duties will be the acceptance of tenders for snow ploughing. Tenders for this work were turned in last week, but owing to the differences among the aldermen as to the wording of the tenders, new tenders were asked for.

Patriotic Fund.

The Patriotic fund has been enriched to the extent of seventy-six dollars and ninety-eight cents. This amount represents the receipts derived from the "Judas Maccabaeus" concert held under the auspices of the St. George's Choral Society.

Long Service.

It is not generally known that the lock which within the past few days, was removed from the outer door of the city clerk's office, has been in active service for fifty-four years. A new and more modern lock has been substituted.

Will Instal Blinds.

The frosting on the windows of the city clerk's office is to be replaced by roller blinds operating from the bottom of the window instead of the top. This will allow greater latitude in respect to the artificial light supply.

Has Returned.

His Worship Mayor Buller has returned to the city after an absence of two days. The Mayor reports that the trip was very successful in so far as the city's business is concerned. The Provincial Board of Health approved of the city's plans for the location of the sewage disposal plant.

without plea or election, no lawyer appearing for him Mauser was arrested at Bridgeburg, where it is alleged, he was trying to gain passage across the border for three Austrians, enemies of the Empire. The military authorities made the arrest, and on his being brought to Toronto, his connection with the Canadian militia was discovered. Mauser was born in Saskatchewan of Austrian parents. He was brought up in Port Hope, and is well educated. His parents now keep hotel in Port Hope for foreigners, and it is said that in company with three Austrian boarders at this hotel he went to Bridgeburg, planning to leave Canada himself with the three. He saluted the court with the bearing of a soldier, and seemed unaware of the gravity of the charge against him.

GERMANY SALUTES LORD ROBERTS

BERLIN, via Amsterdam and London, November 17.—The Lokal Anzeger, in an editorial on the death of Lord Roberts, says: "On the occasion of the death of Lord Roberts the whole German press expresses itself alike, appreciatively, about the fallen enemy. Even in war moments occur when the fighter salutes the enemy with the sabre instead of striking him with it. Such a moment has arisen with the death of Roberts."

RAIN IN FLANDERS TURNS ROADS INTO LANES OF MUD

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The Times' correspondent in "Northern France," says:

"Heavy rains have fallen almost incessantly for 36 hours. The roads of the plain of Flanders are being turned into lanes of mud, and the troops in the trenches are in some danger of being washed out."

LONDON, Nov. 18.—By Ed. L. Keen.—Under tremendous pressure from the German infantry and very heavy fire from the artillery, the British troops in the vicinity of Arras have held their lines, and at one point driven the Germans back 500 yards.

A statement from the war office to-day tells of a determined attack made upon two divisions of British troops, both of which were repulsed. The third division was subjected to a most determined attack.

During yesterday, the statement declares, the third division was first attacked by the artillery and then by infantry. They were shelled from their trenches by the German guns. The enemy then charged, but the trenches were recovered by a brilliant counter attack. The rush of the British soldiers not only drove the Germans from the trenches, but pushed them back for 500 yards in the greatest disorder. The second attack was made on the brigade of the Second Division. This was also repulsed with heavy loss to the enemy.

After a long siege of rain and snow fresh troops are now taking up positions in the allied trenches all along the line. The great activity in the rear of the German lines also indicates an extensive movement of troops, evidently intended to relieve men who have been bearing the brunt of the fighting along the coast.

GERMAN INVASION OF POLAND HAS BEEN CHECKED

Russians Check the Invasion of Poland

German Advance Has Been Turned and Tsar's Other Forces Continue to Penetrate East Prussia--Battles Fought in Dim Winter Light.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 18—The Russians have held up and are rolling back the new German invasion from Thorn into Russian Poland. The movement is being crushed without the Russians having to abate their energetic penetration northward into East Prussia.

These operations on the part of the Germans demonstrate that Gen. von Hindenburg means to stake his winter campaign on repeated attempts with a great force to prevent an invasion of Central Germany, by flank attacks on the Russian right wing.

Strategy That of Von Moltke.

This strategy was plain to von Moltke fifty years ago at the time of the Schleswig-Holstein campaign when he held that if Germany had to conduct a war on two fronts it would be impossible to maintain a frontal defence of Silesia against an invasion from the east.

Gen. von Hindenburg is following the dictates of this strategy and all reinforcements from the west are being concentrated around Thorn. His immediate danger is from continuous strengthening of the Russian column to the north and their crossing into the railway system region of East Prussia.

Other German measures for gaining time in Silesia, consist in the destruction of all frontier communications. The Germans have soaked all the wooden bridges in the region from Kalisz southward to Velbun with oil, and have undermined all the iron bridges across the River Prosena. They are taking fresh hostages in all frontier towns.

Fighting Stubborn and Slow.

The fighting in the swampy forests to the northward is very stubborn and slow. The Germans and Austrian staffs are disputing about the course to be pursued at Cracow. The Austrians, for political and strategical reasons, favour putting a virtually passive defense, reserving their main strength to protect the roads to Vienna. The German staff vetoed this plan on the ground that the early surrender of Cracow would necessitate a radical change in all German plans. The Austrian Emperor is expected to support the contention of his own generals.

Signs are accumulating that the Kaiser is determined to stake everything in the eastern campaign on the operations developing from Thorn. These are still separated by nearly a hundred miles from the terrible hand to-hand struggle in the Mazura Lake region, where the Russians are beating the eastern-most German army to the ground.

Laid Mines Everywhere.

The battles are fought in a dim winter light. The Germans, advancing over what seems to be clear spaces, know only by the terrific explosion that they have fallen among mines.

Thousands of fragments of men, horses and weapons are thrown through the fire and smoke into the surrounding darkness.

Other German columns behind still resist attacks in dense masses and the Russians are able to cover a few miles only through indescribable carnage, the ground being covered with heaps of bodies mixed among the wreckage of transport columns which have been shelled by the Russian artillery.

At last the fight is to the westward of Augeraburg. A broad space was forced in the Geramn column which it was impossible to fill because all the reserves had been killed. Only because of this the Russians made substantial gains westward.

The Czar has conferred the Order of Saint George, set in diamonds, on Gen. Irman, commander of the Siberian army, in the recent batles in Poland.

WATERLOO MAY BE SCENE OF LAST DEFENCE

Germans Preparing for Retreat to Famous Field Which is Strongly Entrenched.

ALLIES ARE CONFIDENT

NORTHERN FRANCE, Nov. 18.—A stinging hail storm swept the [illegible] yesterday and covered them and their human prisoners with a white layer of icy, cold dampness. At the time, which was towards midday, heavy guns thundered from their concealed emplacements from Nieuport to La Bassee, and since the German offensive was again due, our men had to lie prone and wait. They waited patiently, good-temperedly, willingly and bravely, although they were cold to the marrow-bone and their clothes wet and sticking to their skins, their boots clogged with heavy mud and their feet soaked by insistent drips from their great coats. Theirs was a wretched plight, yet they remained with their benumbed fingers on the triggers ready for the first evidence of battle.

Allies Are Confident.

Our men are waiting for the next German offensive movement with confidence. Some are wondering whether another attack will be made on our position before the end of the year, while others, also well informed, state that the Germans are on the point of retreating. A Belgian, who states he walked through the German lines from Brussels, informs me that the German transport waggons have been choking the roads to Brussels for several days. He believes these are being removed into safety before the fighting line has to be drawn back.

Trenches at Waterloo.

The Germans have a line of defence from Waterloo to Namur before defending the line of the Meuse. This line has been strongly entrenched. The field of Waterloo is stated to be full of concrete trenches laid in such a way that they can be defended indefinitely and occupied in spite of the rigours of winter without causing discomfort to the troops. Here one of the great battles of the near future will be fought. In some important quarters there is undisguised hope that the Germans will make a few more attacks before retreating.

Soldiers Suffering From Winter's Chills

Terrible Conditions Are Almost as Trying to the Allies as to the Germans---Field Hospitals Filled With Rheumatic Sufferers.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 19.—With snow and sleet and cold now prevailing in Flanders, rheumatism and pneumonia are claiming more victims than bullets, especially in the German ranks.

The terrible grip of the elements is upon both the Allied and the German armies. Skillful cunning in the mining of trenches and sudden night bombardments have largely taken the place of open attacks. Each day that goes by with the Germans still in the wet and storm swept trenches in the lowlands, is regarded as a gain for the Allies here, but the effect of the fighting under such terrible weather conditions is almost as trying upon the British and French as upon the Germans.

With the advent of snow, the suffering among all the combatants has become intense. German prisoners have declared it has gone especially hard with untrained levies of youthful volunteers now in their ranks. Many a German charge is made in sheer desperation from the cold. It is only the dash in the open, though in the face of a fire, that sends scores to death, that the men are able to get warm.

SUNKEN ROAD SWALLOWED AUSTRIAN CAVALRY REGIMENT

Examiner Special:

MUNICH, (by messenger to London), Nov. 19.—Austria has its sunken road like Waterloo's. The Honved cavalry, Vienna's bluest blood, butchered itself in a hollow in Galicia on Oct. 4th. In charging over unknown ground they piled into a deep ditch.

The bodies of nine hundred men were mashed to a bloody mass with the bodies of their horses. All the horrors of the charge at Waterloo were repeated. Under the hoofs of oncoming horses the dying men writhed and tried in vain to escape being crushed into the great bloody mould. Within ten minutes, what had been Vienna's proudest cavalry regiment, was only a gigantic mass of mixed man and horse flesh.

MINED VILLAGE DESTROYED AS ALLIES ENTERED

PARIS, Nov. 18.—The Government report to-night gave the news that the battle in Flanders and Northern France has resolved itself for the time being into a tremendous artillery duel. There have been reports for many days that the Germans were sending heavy guns from their bases in Belgium to add to their already tremendous artillery strength. It is concluded here that they have realized the hopelessness of any attempt to break through the allied line with infantry, and that their new plan is an attempt to drive back the French and British, mile by mile, by the power of big guns.

Position Was Mined.

A sentence in the night communique may have been a guarded admission by the Government that a detachment of French troops was annihilated to-day at Chauvoncourt, the only position held by the Germans on the left bank of the Meuse and across the river from St. Mihiel. The communique states that the Germans blew up the western part of the village, where they had planted mines. It is assumed that the French, in a successful attack on Monday, advanced from the west, when they occupied houses which had served as barracks for the Germans. It is possible that the French force occupying these houses was destroyed when the Germans exploded the mine trap.

The report of the afternoon was substantially that the incessant collision of infantry and the increasingly violent artillery fighting have produced no decisive results, but have been generally favourable to the allies. The centre of the German effort, as previously, was in the region between Dixmude and Ypres, where the Germans threw themselves desperately, but unavailingly, against the granite-like lines of the French and British.

Always on Offensive.

An interesting feature of the report was the plain indication that the allies never surrender the offensive altogether, and are always poised for a spirited counter-attack when the onslaught of the Germans has been weakened. Near Bixschoote the Zouaves, who have distinguished themselves on several occasions by furious valour in hand-to-hand fighting, drove the Germans at the point of the bayonet from a wood which had been contested for three days. No effort by the Germans could dislodge the British from their defence of Ypres.

Impossible.

U. S. DEMANDS EXPLANATION

Turks' Firing Upon Cruiser Tennessee By Land Forces Creates Uneasiness

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—The United States Government has directed Ambassador Henry Morgenthau at Constantinople to ask the Ottoman Government for an explanation of the firing by Turkish land forces at a launch from the American cruiser Tennessee, proceeding from Vourlah to the American Consulate at Smyrna, Asia Minor.

Secretary Daniels, with the approval of President Wilson, simultaneously cabled the commanders of the Tennessee and the North Carolina, also in the Mediterranean, to take no action which might embarrass the American Government, and to await specific instructions from Washington concerning the general situation.

These steps followed the receipt of a message from Captain Benton C. Decker, commander of the Tennessee, which was paraphrased in this statement from the Navy Department:

"Captain B. C. Decker, in command of the Tennessee, wired Secretary Daniels this morning that while proceeding from Vourlah to Smyrna to make official calls his boat was fired upon. The Tennessee is now at Scio (Chios), Greece, from which Captain Decker's telegram was sent. Secretary Daniels wired for fuller information."

Although without definite details as to just what occurred, high officials of the Washington Government had no doubt that the incident, no matter where the responsibility lay, would be promptly adjusted through diplomatic channels. President Wilson is determined that, under no circumstances, shall the United States be involved in war with Turkey. If the Turkish officers acted without authority of the Ottoman Government, and the firing was not justified by naval procedure in a closed port, it is confidently believed here that the Ottoman Government will render apology.

PREPARE THE GERMANS FOR UGLY TRUTHS

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 18.—What is considered evidence of a desire of the German authorities to prepare public opinion for ugly truths is, in fact, that the censor permits so many complaints to be printed as to the lack of news from the front, and the explanations he permits the papers to publish in reply. In a general sense the papers have brought home to the readers that the German forces have almost entirely abandoned the offensive on all sides, but they try and make believe that this is not so much by reason of any progress on the part of the Allies as owing to the new strategical conceptions destined shortly to bring the enemy's career to an inglorious close.

From the severe lesson read to pessimists by The Frankfurter Zeitung it would appear as if these efforts of the newspapers are not meeting with the success they hoped for. This paper describes the situation as eminently satisfactory, seeing that the Germans are everywhere putting up a most victorious defensive. Under these circumstances German public opinion is wrong to allow itself to be alarmed by the assumed optimism or mere bluff of the Allies, or to fall into the trap so cleverly spread for it to engender a panic throughout the land. The paper is constrained to admit that the official bulletins are somewhat laconic and inclined to dwell too much on minor facts, but it says that all this will soon be changed, and in any case the public should have the good sense to trust the Kaiser and his gallant army.

ARRAS RAZED BY SHELL FIRE

Roads, Churches and Homes Destroyed in the Valley of Scarpe.

BOULOGNE, France, Nov. 18. — A clergyman, who remained in Arras through every bombardment, has given me this description of the town as it exists to-day:

"I have stayed and I am going to continue to stay at my post in this ruined town. Yesterday the place had another bombardment, the fourth. Arras is now a grave. The churches and the cathedral are all gone. Four hundred houses have been burned. The roads are disappearing and leaving enormous cavities. Yesterday the civil and military hospital at St. Jean was shelled for the tenth time. The wounded and sick were placed in the cellars. One of them was the Chief Magistrate, who was badly wounded by a shell.

The Hospice is also a victim of the explosion of shells, 30 people being killed and 37 injured. The dead and wounded are all huddled together in cellars. The only people still seen in the streets are priests and soldiers. For over a month we have heard a constant cannonade, and the enemy has been within two miles of our town for nearly four weeks."

Tests of a recently patented fuel for internal combustion engines, composed of naphthalene, water and a secret ingredient, indicate that it is more powerful than gasoline.

NAVY'S CASUALTIES 6,823.

The Dead Number 4,852, and the Missing 1,971 — Winston Churchill Gives Figures.

LONDON, Nov. 18.— Winston Spencer Churchill, the First Lord of the Admiralty, stated in the House of Commons to-day, in reply to a question, that the total British naval casualties to date were:

Officers killed, 223; wounded, 37; missing, 5.

The list, the First Lord said, did not include the missing officers and men in the Royal Naval Division at Antwerp and on the British cruiser Good Hope, sunk off the Chilean coast, which totalled 1,000 and 1,075 respectively.

The missing men of the naval division are probably those interned in Holland; the crew of the Good Hope were undoubtedly lost. This would make the total casualties: Dead, 4,852; wounded, 535; missing, 1,971, or a grand total of casualties of 6,823.

OLIVE OIL AS FOOD

ONE of the most sensible things to recommend of late is the use of Olive Oil as Food and Medicine. Physicians have advised each ounce of the oil, but it has really many more uses than it has learned. It has been proved in many cases to be not only a corrective of the liver, but a fluid for the system as well and is of great benefit for weak stomach and bowels. The dose is usually a teaspoonful at all to be taken half an hour before breakfast and half an hour after supper. The oil may be flavor with wintergreen and so rubbish, as it is beneficial and beautifies. The use may be continued for years, and in assisting the liver to do its work (it is its most essential ingredient), the complexion is cleared of the ugly brown spots and bilious yellow appearance due to torpidity of the liver. The taste is not unpleasant, although a little for it in most instances, to be overcome. The very few offensive conditions are really fully destroyed, although any impurities and toxins can be dispelled. Many physicians strongly recommend its use, both internal and external. It is excellent to use after the bath, and many delicate preparations for toilet purposes greatly improved by being prepared with it. The best quality oil can be procured at 50c & 80c Bottles.

PLOT AGAINST GERMANS IN TURKS' CAPITAL.

LONDON, Nov. 19.— The Standard has the following from its correspondent at Rome: The German Ambassador at Constantinople goes in fear of his life, and is daily in receipt of threatening letters. A plot has been discovered for the assassination of General Von Sanders, and also of a number of high Turkish officials, for favouring Germany's designs. Prince Burhand-Dine is declared to have been implicated in the conspiracy.

Shuqri Pasha Leads Revolt.

An influential committee of Turkish military authorities has been formed to endeavour to counteract the present policy and to rid the country of German domination. Djahid Pasha, Vice-President of the Chamber, is taking an active part in this movement, and is exerting all his influence, as he puts it, "to prevent Turkey from committing suicide," but the prime mover in this revolt against Germany is Shukri Pasha, the heroic defender of Adrianople in the Balkan war, who is seconded by Marshal Feud Pasha.

A sensation has been produced in Government circles by the action of a large number of army and navy officers who went in a body to the War Office to complain that the Germans have taken all the authority out of their hands to the point even that the German non-commissioned officers in the Turkish army have refused to recognize their right to give them orders. The deputation withdrew after warning the authorities that they would retire in a body from the army unless the Germans were put into their proper place.

LARGE ORDERS N CANADA.

France Has Placed Them and Many More Are Coming.

MONTREAL, Nov. 18.—That France has already ordered an immense amount of goods for its army in Canada and intends to order more was made known to-day by A. E. Forget, ex-president of the Republique Francaise Society in this city. Mr. Forget offered his services to the French Government as a volunteer, going to France for that purpose, but was sent back to purchase goods for that republic here.

Mr. Forget says that already 300,000 pairs of shoes and 200,000 suit of underwear have been ordered in Canada, and that future orders will include the same outfits, several thousand horses, leather, sheepskins, canvas, khaki cloth, and preserves.

Probably Not.

HAVE AN ORDER FOR 100,000 RIFLES.

U. S. Arms Company Also Has Order For 100,000,000 Cartridges.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 18.—The New Haven factory of the Winchester Repeating Arms Company is being operated night and day with more than 5,000 hands employed in the day shift and half that number at nights. They are turning out war material. The company is putting up new buildings to cost $500,000 and the construction work is being pushed twenty-four hours a day.

It is reported that the company has an order for 100,000 army rifles, and is under contract to complete 300 rifles every working day for six months. These guns are said to be similar to the standard rifles used in the French army.

Officials of the company have been questioned as to the destination of the arms and of a recent order for 100,000,000 cartridges, but all they would say was that they were owned by a missionary from South America who dropped into the factory a few days ago while he was on a vacation.

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Gen. Allen England

"Harken, master, that I may tell it in few words! Later, when we reach the colony whereof you have spoken, we can make all things clear; but now is no time for a great talking."

"Go on quickly!"

"Yea, I speak. We waited for you many days, O Kromno; but you came not again. Days on days we waited, as you measure time. Sleepings and wakings we waited eagerly, but no sign of you was seen. Then uneasiness and fear and sorrow fell upon us all."

"What then?"

"We held a great charweg there at the Place of Bones, near the Blazing Well, to take thought what was best to do. For you were our chief; and our very ancient law commands that if any chief be in distress, or deemed lost, the Folk must risk all, even life, to save and bring him once more to his own.

"For many hours our wisest men spoke. Some declared you had deserted us, but them the Folk cried down; and barely they escaped the boiling vat. We agreed some calamity had befallen. Then we swore to go to rescue you!"

"Ye did?" exclaimed Stern, much moved. "Gods, what devotion! But — how did ye ever get out of the Abyss? How find your way so straight toward Settlement Cliffs?"

"That is a strange story, and very long, O Kromno! All our elders took thought of what ye had told us so often, and they made a picture of the way. We fashioned protections for the eyes and skin, as ye had said.

"Then the wise men recalled all the ancient traditions, which we had long deemed myths. They looked, also, upon certain records graven in the rock beyond the walls, past the place of burial. They decided the way might still be open past the Great Vortex and through the long cleft, whereby our distant fathers came.

"But they said it might mean death to try to pass the Vortex. They forced none to go. Only such as would need try."

"A volunteer expedition, eh?" thought Allan. "And look at the size of it, will you? These people are without even the slightest understanding of fear!"

"Thus it was arranged, master," continued Rigvin. "Eight score and more of us offered to go. All things were quickly made ready, and much food was packed, and many weapons. In fifteen long canoes we started, after a great singing. Men went in each canoe to bring back the boats—"

"They didn't even wait for you? But if ye had been lost, and sought to return, what then?"

"There was to be no return, master. All swore either to find you or die!"

"Go on!" exclaimed Allan, deeply moved.

"We sailed across the Sunken Sea, O Kromno, and reached the islands of the Lanskaarn. There we had to fight and thirty were killed. But we kept on, and in two days, watching for the quiet time between the great tempests, entered the Vortex."

"You all got through?"

"No master. There was not time. Many were lost; but still we kept on. Then on the fourth day we reached the great cleft, even as our traditions said. And here we camped, and sang again, and once more swore to find you. Then the boats all returned, and we pushed forward, upward, through the cleft."

"And then?"

Rigvin shook his head and sighed.

"O Kromno," he answered, "the story is too long! We be weary, and would reach the place whereof ye have told us. Later there will be time for talk. But now we cannot tell it all!"

"Ye speak truth, Rigvin!" he exclaimed. "I, too, have many things to tell. It cannot be this day. We will lead ye to the colony. We, too, need rest. My men are in sore straits, as ye see!"

He gestured at the groups gathered along the edge of the ravine. A great noise of talking rose against the heated air; and food and water, too, were being given to the Settlement men by the newcomers.

Stern knew the day was saved. Deep gratitude upwelled in his heart.

"Nothing that I can ever do will repay men like these!" thought he. Then, all at once, a sudden hope thrilled him, and he cried:

"Oh, Rigvin, one thing more! Tell me, in your long journey from the brink, have ye chanced to see a cleft mountain with two peaks on either hand?"

"You mean, master—"

"A mountain; a high jut of land, with two tops, side by side—like two grave-mounds?"

Rigvin stood a moment in thought, his soot-smeared brows wrinkled with the effort of trying to remember. Then all at once he looked up quickly with a smile.

"Yea, master!" he cried. "We saw such!"

"Where, where? For God's sake, where was it?" ejaculated Stern, gripping him by the arm with a hand that shook with sudden keen emotion.

"Where was it, master? Thus one day's marching."

Rigvin wheeled and pointed to north-westward.

"And ye can find it again?"

"Truly, yea. Why, master?"

"There, near that mountain, lies the wreck of the viyn b'hotn, the flying boat. Rigvin! Lead us thither! We must find it. And then Settlement Cliffs!"

Through all his exhaustion and his pain he knew that now the goal was close at hand. And beyond toil, suffering and hardship once more beckoned prosperity and peace and love.

CHAPTER XXXIII.
FIVE YEARS LATER.

Long before daybreak that morning, the thriving village of Settlement Cliffs, capital and market-town of the New Hope Colony, was awake and astir.

For the great festival day was at hand, the fifth anniversary of the founding of the colony, to be celebrated by the arrival of the last Merucaans from the depths of the Abyss.

The old caves, now abandoned save for grain, fruit and fish storehouses, were closed and silent. No labour was going forward there. The nets hung dry. From the forges, smithies and workshops along the river-bank at the rapids arose no sounds of the accustomed industry.

The road and bridge-builders were idle; and from the farms now dotting the rich brule across the river—each snug stone house, tiled with red or green, standing among its crops and growing orchards—the Folk were coming in to town for the feast-day.

The broad wooden trestle-bridge across the New Hope echoed with hollow verberations beneath the measured tread of two and four-ox teams hauling creaking wains heaped high with meats, fruits, casks of cider, generous wines, and all the richness of that virgin soil.

On the summer morning air rose laughter from the youths and maidens coming in afoot. Sounded the cries of the teamsters, the barking of dogs, the mingled murmur of speech—English speech again; and the fresh wind, bearing away a fine, golden dust from the long roads, swayed the palm-tops and the fern-trees with a gentle and caressing touch.

All up and down the broad, well-paved street of the village—a street lined with stone cottages, bordered with luxuriant tropic gardens, and branching into a dozen smaller thoroughfares—a happy throng was idling.

Well clad in plain yet substantial weaves from the vine-festooned workshops below the cliff, abundantly fed, vigorous and strong, not one showed sickness or deformity, such as had scourged the human race in the old, evil days of long ago.

Loose-belted garb, sandals and a complete absence of hats all had their part in this abounding health. Open-air life and rational food completed the work.

No drugs, save three or four essential ones, and no poisons, ever had crept in to menace life. Wine there was, rich and unfermented; but the curse of alcohol existed not. And in the Law it was forever banned.

On the broad porch of their home, a boulder-built cottage facing the broad plaza where palms shaded the gravelled paths, and purple, yellow and scarlet blooms lured hummingbirds and butterflies, stood Beatrice and Allan.

Both were smiling in the clear June sunlight of that early morning. A cradle rocked by Geeafam — a little older and more bent, yet still hardy—gave glimpses of another olive-branch, this one a girl.

The piazza was littered at its farthest end with serviceable, home-made playthings; but Allan, Junior, had no use for them to-day. Out there on the lawn of the plaza he was rolling and running with a troop of other children—many, many children, indeed.

Beatrice and Allan watched the play they smiled; and through the man's arm crept the woman's hand, and with the confidence of perfect trust she leaned her head against his shoulder.

"Whoever could have thought," said he at last, "that all this really could come true? In those dark hours when the Horde had all but swallowed us, when we fell into the Abyss, when those terrible adventures racked our souls down beside the Sunken Sea, and later, here, when everything seemed lost—who could have foreseen this?"

"You could and did!" she answered. "From the beginning you planned everything, Allan. It was all foreseen and nothing ever stopped you, just as the future beyond this time is all foreseen by you and must and shall be as you plan it!"

"It shall be, with your help!" he murmured, and silence came again. Together they watched the holiday crowd gradually congregating in the vast plaza where once the palisade had been. Now the old wooden stockade had long vanished. Cleared land and farm extended far beyond even Newport Heights, where the Pauillac had first come to earth at New Hope.

Well-kept roads connected them all with the settlement. And for some miles to southward the primeval forests had been vanquished by the ever-extending hand of this new, swiftly growing race.

"With my help and theirs!" she rejoined presently. "Never forget, dear, how wonderfully they've taken hold, how they've laboured, developed and grown in every way. You'd be surprised—really you would—if you come in contact with them as I do in the schools, to see the marvellous way they learn—old and young alike. It's a miracle, that's all!"

"No, not exactly," he explained. "It's atavism. These people of ours were really civilized in essence, despite all the overlying ages of barbarism. Civilization was latent in them, that's all. Just as all the children born here under normal conditions have reverted to pigmented skin and hair and eyes, so even the grown-ups have thrown back to civilisation. Two or three years at the outside have put back the colouring matter in every newcomer's iris and epidermis. Just so—"

A sudden and quickly growing tumult in the plaza and down the long, broad street interrupted him. He saw a waving of hands, a general craning of necks, a drift toward the north side of the square, the river side.

The shouts and cheers increased and cries of "They come! They come!" rose on the morning air.

"Already?" exclaimed Allan in surprise. "These new machines certainly do surprise me with their speed and power. In the old days the Pauillac wouldn't have been here before noon from the Abyss!"

Aluminum is the most abundant of all metals, being an essential constituent of all important rocks except sandstones and limestones.

Is 83 Years Old

And Her Heart Does Not Bother Her.

Thanks to MILBURN'S Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. McLaren, Commanda, Ont., writes us under date of February 9th, 1914. "Sixteen years ago I took bad with my heart and nerves, and was not able to do anything. I tried a good many doctors, but they did me no good; in fact one doctor gave me up to die. I heard about Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I thought I would give them a trial, and after using a couple of boxes I saw that I was improving. I kept on using them for quite a long time. I am eighty-three years old and my heart does not bother me at all.

"I am raising a little girl who was never very strong, and the doctor said that she had palpitation of the heart, so I started to give them to her. She is now twelve years old, and they are doing her more good than I can possibly tell you. I would advise anyone who has a weak heart to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, as they have done wonders for us."

TWO WOMEN AVOID OPERATIONS

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Chicago, Ill.—"I must thank you with all my heart for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I used to go to my doctor for pills and remedies and they did not help me. I had headaches and could not eat, and the doctor claimed I had female trouble and must have an operation. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken it and feel fine. A lady said one day, 'Oh, I feel so tired all the time and have headache.' I said, 'Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound,' and she did and feels fine now."—Mrs. M. R. KARSCHNICK, 1438 N. Paulina Street, Chicago, Illinois.

The Other Case.

Dayton, Ohio.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound relieved me of pains in my side that I had for years and which doctors' medicines failed to relieve. It has certainly saved me from an operation. I will be glad to assist you by a personal letter to any woman in the same condition."—Mrs. J. W. SHERAN, 126 Cass St., Dayton, Ohio.

Was Personally Attended by Dr. A. W. Chase

Before He Became Famous as the Author of Dr. Chase's Receipt Book.

MR. O. D. BARNES.

Here is a letter from an aged gentleman who consulted Dr. Chase, long before his Receipt Book attained a world - wide circulation or his family medicines became known to the ends of the earth.

Like most people of advanced years his kidneys were the first organs to break down and when doctors failed to help him he remembered the physician who cured him of pleurisy in his younger days.

Mr. O. D. Barnes, R.F.D. 1, Byron, Mich., writes:—"About fifty years ago, when living in Ann Arbor, Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous Receipt Book author, was called on to treat me for pleurisy. Ever since that I have used and recommended Dr. Chase's Medicines, and have two of his Receipt Books in the house.

"Some time ago a cold settled in the kidneys, causing backache, frequent urination, dizziness, and affected the eyesight. My appetite failed and I could not sleep nights. Two doctors failed to do me any lasting good, so I started using Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. The results have been highly satisfactory to me. Appetite improved, I gained in weight, sleep and rest well, and feel strong and well. My kidneys resumed their natural functions, and I believe that my cure was due to Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. I am 78 years old, superintend work on my farm, and can turn in and do some work myself."

Conspicuous Nose Pores

How to reduce them

Complexions otherwise flawless are often ruined by conspicuous nose pores.

In such cases the small muscular fibres of the nose have become weakened and do not keep the pores closed as they should be.

Instead these pores collect dirt, clog up, and become enlarged.

Begin tonight to use this treatment

Wring a cloth from very hot water, lather it with Woodbury's Facial Soap, then hold it to your face. When the heat has expanded the pores, rub in very gently a fresh lather of Woodbury's. Repeat this hot water and lather application several times, stopping at once if your nose feels sensitive. Then finish by rubbing the nose for a few minutes with a lump of ice.

Woodbury's Facial Soap cleanses the pores. This treatment with it strengthens the muscular fibres of the nose pores so that they can contract properly. But do not expect to change in a week a condition resulting from years of neglect. Use this treatment persistently. It will gradually reduce the enlarged pores and cause them to contract until they are inconspicuous.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is the work of a skin specialist. It costs 25c a cake. No one hesitates at the price after their first cake.

Do this today—now! Tear out the illustration of the cake below and put it in your purse as a reminder to get Woodbury's and try this treatment. Tear out the cake now. Take it to your druggist today. Begin tonight to get the benefits of this facial soap.

WELL EQUIPPED GERMAN RED CROSS—A detachment of German Red Cross soldiers, in Belgium. They are equipped with guns and dogs, used to scent out the wounded.

"Day Not Far Off" When Italy Will Enter Conflict On Side of the Allies

Italian Journalist, in Letter to Pall Mall Gazette, Asserts That No Countryman of His Will Ever Consent to Take Up Arms Against England.

LONDON, Nov. 14—That the "day is not far off" when Italy will come into the war and why Italy has remained neutral till now is the subject of an article contributed by Signor Gino Calza Bedolo, London correspondent of the Giornale d'Italia, to the Pall Mall Gazette.

"We Italians are eager to discuss fully and clearly the reason and the result of this neutrality forced on us by circumstances," he says, "and we invite the judgment of public opinion of the nations to whom, for reasons of old friendship, we owe to-day an explanation.

"The Austro-Hungarian ultimatum to Servia, conceived and executed at Vienna and Berlin at the end of July without having secured Italy's approval, marked the tumbling of a political structure in which Italy had until then found her own security — namely, the Triple Alliance. The Austro-German plan for the destruction of the Servian national independence injured irredeemably to our danger one of the principal clauses of the Triple Alliance treaty — the equilibrium in the Balkans.

Military Feudalism Feared.

"Had we joined in this we would of necessity have become their accomplices, no matter how unwittingly, in the execution of the vast imperialistic pan-Germanic programme, concerned with the end in view of imposing upon Europe the regime of a military feudalism.

"Considering that the participation in the execution of this programme would injure their country's interests, the liberal government of Italy, interpreting the unanimous thoughts of the citizens, openly dissented, refusing to her allies both moral and material support. It required courage to give this refusal, based as it was upon an honest interpretation of the spirit and letter of the treaty.

"Thus, the best and most certain hope of Germany and Austria for a successful issue of the great war became doomed to disillusion. Italy became hostile to her allies, in spirit if not in fact, at a time when England's intervention had not become a reality and when the participation of France in the conflict was still somewhat in doubt. Italy's courageous action placed her in the perilous position of isolation, which even to-day constitutes the greater reason for any fears of our nation.

"Many of those who warmly applauded this decision regret to-day not to see Italy figuring on the side of the Allies. Many forget that Italy is still legally bound to Germany and Austria, and that neither one nor the other has endangered Italian interests, thus justifying an honest breaking of the present treaty.

Treaty Not "Scrap of Paper."

"Declaring that our vigilant and armed neutrality will continue until the time when 'the Italian interests will be at stake,' our government does not intend to follow in the footsteps of the opinion of Berlin and Vienna that regard treaties as merely "scraps of paper.' Italy believes that, no matter how difficult her present situation may be, she will be called upon some day to render an account to the nations of Europe. And probably many of those who clamour to-day for war will doubt some day the correctness of their present attitude.

"To summarize, Italy will preserve neutrality until the day when her national interests will become involved. This day is not far off. From the very first day of this war it has been apparent that the map of Europe is to undergo tremendous changes. Italy's spirit of pride cannot permit for long an inactivity that will not be judged merely speculative by those who understand the spirit that guided Italy's destinies in the past.

"The Italian people understand that the present war is, in greater part, between the military imperialism of Germany, which seeks to impose itself upon the entire world, and the liberal nationalism of Europe, that defends itself against such a conquest. From this point of view young and democratic Italy cannot and will not be affiliated with the pan-Germanic eagle.

England Her "Sincere Friend."

"Great Britain, which knows the Italians, cannot doubt their sentiments. In the hour of grave decision the eyes of Italy will be fixed upon London, because we believe that only there can we find sincere friends at a time that is grave with danger for our destinies, because no Italian will ever consent to take up arms against England.

"But it is important," says the writer in conclusion, "that Great Britain should know Italy's views of the future. We have no illusions as to the danger that is facing us, due to our having assumed an isolated position, which for many reasons of the European political situation it is difficult to abandon. Whether the Triple Alliance be politically, if not materially, dissolved; whether the Triple Entente will be more firmly cemented as the result of this war, we are resolved now and for the future to remain in isolation."

HAD ARM BROKEN PLAYING AT SCHOOL

News of Interest From the Village of Hastings.

HASTINGS, Nov. 17.—The social held in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening last was quite a success, notwithstanding the inclement state of the weather. However, those who braved the elements and turned out enjoyed a social hour together.

Much regret was expressed when the news came to hand of the death of Mrs. J. Dunlay (nee Lizzie McCarthy) of Peterborough, but a former resident of Hastings, where she spent her girlhood days, and where she was married only about two years ago. She leaves to mourn her loss, besides her husband, a little infant, about three weeks' old, who has been early in life deprived of a mother's tender care. The sorrowing husband, as well as the brothers and sisters may be assured of the heartfelt sympathy of a large circle of friends in their sad bereavement. The funeral service was held on Wednesday last, and the body was interred in the R. C. Cemetery here.

Miss F. Williamson attended the Teachers' Convention in Peterborough on Thursday and Friday last. The school was closed during her absence.

Mr. Ray Waters has leased Mr. Shaughnessy's farm for a term of years.

The whole Village was shocked when word came to hand of the accidental death of Mr. Soucee of Lindsay, who was killed while on duty as railroad hand, near Midland. Mrs. Soucee, who is left bereaved, was a native of Hastings and lived here until her marriage, only a few year ago. Her friends deeply sympathize with her in this her hour of severe trial and loss.

Mr. Ad. Humphries left on Monday for New Ontario, to spend a few weeks.

Mr. George Ford of Norwood called in Town on Thursday.

Mrs. Jas. Long of Dummer, has been the guest of Mrs. Brown of Town.

An electrical storm passed over this section on Friday last. No damage is reported.

Miss Gladys Stevenson entertained a few friends to tea on Saturday last, the occasion of her birthday. Those present report a most enjoyable time. Everett Greenley is suffering from a broken arm, the fracture being sustained during play hour at school.

Mr. Alex. Fleming has been visiting his brother, John, who has been seriously ill. We are pleased to learn that he is much improved and hopes to soon be around again.

A party of deer hunters returned home on Saturday well laden with the result of the chase.

Mr. and Mrs. Sid Fisher of Campbellford were in Town last week, renewing old acquaintances.

Miss Minnie Clysdale was married on Tuesday last to Mr. Le Brash of Campbellford. Congratulations.

Miss Bessie Campbell of Morganston, has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. M. Baker.

Mr. Staples, Public School Principal, spent the week end at his home near Peterborough.

Miss Evelyn Beavis visited with her sister, Mrs. J. Stevenson, Saturday and Sunday.

A very pleasing social event took place on Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Redpath of Birdsall, when a large number of their friends and neighbours assembled to bid them farewell on the eve of their departure to reside in Keene. During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Redpath were presented with a nice address and two handsome chairs, showing the high esteem in which they were held during their sojourn here. Those present were loud in their praises and many were the expressions of regret occasioned by their departure. Mr. and Mrs. Redpath leave during the week for their new home, followed by the best wishes of many friends, who earnestly hope for them both a happy residence among their new friends.

AN EASY WAYT O GET FAT AND BE STRONG

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on dragging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods; rubbing on useless "fesh creams," or following some foolish physical culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes unheeded. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

Thanks to the remarkable new scientific discovery, it is now possible to combine into simple form the very elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This master-stroke of modern chemistry is called Sargol and has been termed the greatest of flesh - builders. Sargol aims through its re-generative, reconstructive powers to coax the stomach and intestines to literally soak up the fattening elements of your food and pass them into the blood, where they are carried to every starved, broken-down cell and tissue of your body. You can readily picture the result when this amazing transformation takes place and you notice how your cheeks fill out, hollows about your neck, shoulders and bust disappear and you take on from 10 to 25 pounds of solid, healthy flesh. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient. Leading druggists of Peterborough have it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied, as per the guarantee found in every package.

Caution:—While Sargol has given astonishing results in overcoming nervousness, dyspepsia and general stomach troubles it should not be taken by those who do not wish to gain ten pounds or more.

WINTER CAMPAIGN IN RUSSIA HAS NO GREAT OBSTACLES

German Military Writers Declare Freezing of Ground Will Hamper Russians

CITE MARCH OF NAPOLEON

BERLIN, Nov. 16.—The prospect of a winter campaign in Russia presents no terrors to the German military writers, now dealing with the problem of a long continuance of the war. Far from anticipating a repetition of Napoleon's disastrous experience in the Moscow campaign, they look upon the great Corsican's conquerors, General December and General January, as allies who will remove for them two of the greatest obstacles to operations against the Russians, namely, the transportation problem and that of overcoming the natural defences of the country, its swamps and rivers.

The expert of the Deutsche Tageszeitung points out, too, that the Russians, in order to stem the German advance, have relied largely on entrenchments laid out on a tremendous scale. Once the ground is solidly frozen the construction of such works for defence will be greatly hampered.

"Every battle has demonstrated the value to the Russians of the trenches and other military field works," says the writer. "It has been difficult in all cases to take positions so protected and the Russian successes have been mostly due to the laying out of fortified positions in the open field.

"With the ground frozen and no longer easily worked with pick and shovel, the laying out of earthworks will be made extremely difficult, and the Russians, whose forte from the times of Napoleon to Mukden, has lain in the defence of field fortifications, will thus lose the most important factor in defensive tactics.

Deal With Fifth Element.

"Troops operating on the offensive must deal with the 'fifth element,' as Napoleon called the Russian mud. In the winter the bad roads are covered with snow and may then be used by sleighs, and the great rivers and swamps which form the principal factors in the Russian defence lines will then be covered with ice, permitting easy crossing everywhere.

"The idea that winter was the best season in which an attack on Russia might be made is that of a genial soldier of history, Charles XII. of Sweden, who afterwards demonstrated the correctness of his own conclusion. He waited with his advance into Russia in 1707 until cold weather had set in, and after the rivers and swamps of Poland had been frozen over, he crossed the Vistula on 29th December and advanced rapidly as far as Wilna, where he intended to overtake the retreating Russians. The enemy, however, retreated again, and this winter campaign brought no result, because King Charles could not get the Russians to stand.

"Napoleon counted on the aid of winter in his campaign in 1806. But the weather was against him. December of that year left the roads as soft as they had been in the autumn, and the French were obliged to quarter themselves upon the Poles and wait for cold weather. Frost finally came on 1st February, and six days later the battle at Prussian-Eylau was fought. Napoleon, as well as King Charles, availed themselves of the opportunity offered by harder roads and frozen rivers.

"As Carl Bleibtrau in his work on the campaign of Napoleon in Russia in 1812 has shown, it was not the cold that demanded the greatest sacrifices in human lives. Napoleon lost 200,000 men on his advance into Russia and only 100,000 men on his retreat. It was also shown then that the Russians suffered as much from the cold as did the French and that both armies were hampered by the ice. Napoleon's retreat was due to a shortage of powder, only one-half of the quantity thought available being on hand. The supply service had failed altogether."

Major Moraht, the military expert of the Tageblatt, points out that railroads have also revolutionized conditions since Napoleon's time. Railroad construction now advances almost as an army and to an army provided with half a dozen lines of steel leading back to its base the problem of ammunition and food supply presents no difficulties, even in Russia.

THE BURDENS OF AGE.

The kidneys seem to be about the first organs to wear out and fail to properly perform their work. The result is backache, aching back, rheumatic pains and failing eyesight. Many people of advanced years have recovered health and comfort by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They enhance the healthful action of liver, kidneys and bowels.

MISFITS ARE COMING BACK

LONDON, Nov. 17.—As recently hinted, a squad of "misfits" from the Canadian contingent, numbering 48, are being shipped back from Salisbury Plain to Canada in the interests of discipline. They left the camp under a strong escort in charge of Captain Grover, and will be embarked at Glasgow after deprivation of their rank and uniform.

The Princess Patricia's have left Bustard Camp, Salisbury Plain, and have gone to Winchester, in order to be nearer Southampton. It seems probable that they will be merged with the home division, and are therefore likely to see active service before any of the other Canadian regiments.

RED WAVES OF HUMAN CARNAGE ROLLING HIGH

LUXEMBURG, Oct. 21 (by courier via Maestericht and Rotterdam to New York)—From war to peace is but a step here—literally less than three feet. Crossing from war-swept France where the blood-red waves of human carnage are rolling high, to this little "island" of peace, quiet, prosperity and happiness, the contrast is most impressive.

An imaginary line separates the horrors of war from the blessings of peace. Coming from the fortress of Longwy, the gateway through which the crown prince smashed his way into France, opening from destruction and desolation, peace was in the very air as the border of Luxemburg was crossed. Sleek cattle browsed in the pastures, farmers were ploughing or gathering crops, birds twittered in the trees.

Looking back across the line across the French fields not a man, a horse or cow was in sight. Empty waste and desolation was all that met the eye. Along the roads of Luxemburg men passed — not in uniform but in the attire of peaceful callings, the slouchy garb of the farmer and workingman.

In the French villages only old women and aged men and children were seen. Seldom were boys over 12 years of age in evidence, but rollicking along this Luxemburg road was a crowd of sturdy, happy school boys between the age of 12 and 17, apparently on a day's vacation tramp through the country.

Then it was that I thought of the French boy soldier with a shattered hand I had seen; another with three bullets in his body; of the German boy of 17 who went home to his mother with both eyes shot out. Then there were the English boy buglers shivering in the chill fog in the prison camp at Doberitz, near Berlin.

"What a difference" was the quiet remark of Commander W. Gerhardi, of the U. S. N., as the capital of the duchy was entered and the panorama of peace unfold more and more. Commander Gerhardi is no sentimentalist, but a big-hearted bluff sailor-man but he was impressed by the difference.

The little duchy of Luxemburg is a triangular oasis of peace surrounded on every side by war. There are happy, contented faces everywhere. True, there are indications of war here. There are wounded being cared for by the Grand Duchess Adelheid and the good people of her little domain. There are German lines of communication. The Luxemburg "army" has just marched by. It consists of about 250 "regulars" and 150 volunteers.

Having seen the "army" it is possible to testify as to its existence, so that reports that the Germans "killed off" the Luxemburg defenders are obviously untrue. It is said here that Germany has just paid Luxemburg $100,000 for whatever damage the army did in marching through the duchy.

Luxemburgers do not seem to be worrying about the violation of their neutrality a great deal. They are making good business out of the war. The duchy is rich in iron ore, farm products and leather and many other things the Germans need and want. They are thus getting prices which spell prosperity for them. So long as Luxemburg is not a battleground, which is within the range of possibility should the Germans be defeated, the people of Luxemburg appear to be very well satisfied.

The city of Luxemburg has a population of about 22,000. It is beautiful and quaint. Until 1867 when the forts were dismantled, Luxemburg was considered the strongest fortress in Europe, next to Gibraltar, as the casements were in solid rock.

For the first few weeks of the war the Kaiser made his headquarters here and now often pays a flying visit to the city.

Letters From The Trenches

"AN ACTOR CALLED LORRAINE."

Letter from an officer of the Royal Irish Lancers to friends at South Shields:

We left our favourite chateau about five days ago, and have done some fine marching since, billeting one day in a very small cottage, and the next in some palatial residence. . . . We stayed at a very beautiful chateau the other night, and it was rather surprising to see so little damage done. All trinkets and jewellery had been taken, drawers ransacked, but that might be expected. One picture had a bullet through the middle. It was a painting of a French military charge during the war of 1870, and no doubt had annoyed some German officer. To-night we are living in a farmhouse and are very comfortable. The people in the villages are still most hospitable, but many villages are deserted. As the troops march on they become full up again, and it is one of the signs of the improved situation to see a little life and smiling faces once more. It would be sad to have to retire again, but at present there is no thought of it, thank goodness. . . . I think the Germans are at last beginning to realize that they are up against it, and I hope it will not be long before they crack up.

I was talking to two or three airmen the other day, one of whom was an actor called Lorraine. They are a splendid lot of fellows, and all of them are worthy of the D.S.O. at least. It is rum to see an actor, unmistakeable both in appearance and speech, armed to the teeth, and sailing away in an aeroplane. He cleared off when I was there, and a few minutes afterwards we could see the shells bursting round them—all to no purpose, as their course remained unaltered.

THE MEN WHO NEVER COMPLAIN.

Letter from Nurse Eva Shofield to friends at Morpeth:

There is ever so much to do, and the Tommies are ever so grateful. They are so very fine and brave, and they never complain about anything. They are always smiling and seeing the bright side of things, even when wounded. We get the men straight from the trenches. Sometimes they have hardly any clothes on, and socks and boots which have not been off for days, and perhaps weeks. We go with the patients on the train and take them to the ships and return empty. The officers, too, are just as fine. It really does one good to meet so many fine, brave, heroic men. One forgets the sadness in the midst of so much greatness, and our only thought is how to make them more comfortable in the long train journey.

Ask those who are knitting socks or making shirts to address some to me at No. 6 General Hospital, British Expeditionary Force. They are wanted more on the trains than anywhere else. If those who send could only see the poor men's faces when they get their boots off and their warm clothing on they would feel more than repaid.

FRENCH SOLDIERS ENTRENCHING ON THE FRONTIER OF LORRAINE

Earthworks Now are in Higher Favour Than Steel or Stone Fortifications—Travellers Challenged and Troops Work Hard While Awaiting Call to Front.

BLAMONT, via Paris.—At nearly every furlong within the fighting zone on the frontier of Lorraine the challenge "Halt!" is sharply shot at the passer and a sentinel brings his rifle with fixed bayonet to charge while the commander of the post closely scrutinizes the challenged person's permit.

On each side of the road, in the fields, hundreds of soldiers labour with pick and spade at entrenchments, which are now regarded as better than stone or steel built fortifications as defensive works. These trenches when approached by an attacking force are almost invisible. They are at least five feet deep with a ridge about one foot high and of the same breadth above them. The depth permits the occupants of them to stand erect.

Over all are spread logs cut from neighbouring forests which are covered thickly with branches of trees and bushes with interstices, which permit riflemen to fire without being seen. At intervals are transverse trenches through which the soldiers can retire to other trenches in the rear without exposing themselves.

Along the roads march many regiments of reserve troops with heavy packs on their backs and with entrenching tools. These men are training for future eventualities. At any time they may be called upon to advance in support of the forward lines.

In the village farms all about the country are regiments of cavalry getting mounts, mostly requisitioned horses, into shape for service. In many fields are encamped supply columns and ammunition parks.

Along the roads dash automobile omnibuses conveying fresh meat, bread and vegetables to the men on the firing line. Occasionally a motor cycle despatch bearer dashes past, carrying messages from the headquarters staff to the commanders at the front. Leaning over, he whispers the password to the sentries, and swiftly goes on his way.

At some points of the line, however, even despatch riders are compelled to halt, for the sentinels have erected barricades composed of upturned carts on each side of the road with a ladder or a pole stretched between them, effectually barring passage. Even when one person in a vehicle possesses a valid pass, it is not sufficient to cover his companions, each of whom has to show a personal permit, containing all partculars regarding his identity and his errand.

As a traveller approaches a fortified city or position the precautions become still more severe. At every bridge, railroad crossing, or cross road sentinels are posted who never relax their vigilance. After dusk lights are prohibited and the frequent challenge of the sentries in the darkness causes a thrill to the man in the road. He halts without hesitation, for a bullet likely would follow the challenge at a short interval, unless there was a response to the command to stop. Several persons who were not prompt in replying to a sentinel's challenge have been killed.

At the gates of every fortified city the chiefs of posts take the full names and descriptions of persons entering or leaving.

Aviator, Landing in German Lines, Escapes by a Ruse

LONDON, Nov. 7.—Although the charming narratives of the "Eye-Witness" issued from Headquarters give us a good deal of news of the doings of the Royal Flying Corps, one hears indirectly of many other fine performances by our military aviators which are not issued officially, and possibly never reach the ears of Headquarters.

One of the best of these came my way recently, and, although one may not give the name of the officer concerned, knowing the particular officer to whom the performance is attributed, one feels more than inclined to believe it. It appears that in the retreat to the Marne this officer, who is a squadron commander in the Royal Flying Corps, went out on a long reconnaissance with a passenger. In their absence the British troops had withdrawn from the stretch of country from which he had started and the ground had been occupied by the Germans.

On returning he descended into a field which he knew afforded good landing surface, and, as the machine was running along the grass, much to his surprise he saw a couple of mounted German officers galloping toward him, while infantry, who had been hidden from view by some trees, came running out behind the officers.

Waves Hand to Enemy.

Fortunately the propeller of the aeroplane had not ceased revolving, so, opening the throttle, the pilot set the engine going again at top speed, and, without rising quickly from the ground, flew along quite close to the German officers, waving his disengaged hand amicably as he did so. His passenger quickly grasped the situation and followed the pilot's example. In this way the machine flew right along the front of the German troops at a height of only some ten or twelve feet from the ground, the aviators being cheered by the Germans, who thought they were two of their own air scouts.

Turning at the point where this particular detachment of Germans appeared to cease, the pilot flew back again across their front, rising a little higher, in this way, of course, increasing their confidence in his amicability. Then, instead of flying right away from them, and thus possibly arousing their suspicions, he proceeded to circle round them, gradually rising higher and higher, till at a height of some five or six thousand feet he headed the machine to the south, and his observer was not only able to hand in the report of the reconnaissance on which they originally set out, but was also able to give useful information about the advance detachment of German troops with which they had, for the time being, made friends at a respectful distance.

The pilot showed his cleverness in continuing to circle over the troops who had already been so successfully taken in, for he was assured of being able to reach a proper height for cross country flying without being fired at, whereas if he had gone right away without returning over the same ground he would very probably have encountered other German troops or possibly French or British troops who might have fired at him while at a height of only one or two thousand feet.

Aeroplanes Now Carry Colours.

Of course, in these latter days the aeroplanes of the various combatant Powers are marked by big badges painted on their wings, so that they can be identified at considerable heights, the British carrying a Union Jack in a shield shape, the French a tri-colour disk, and the Germans a black Maltese cross on a grey ground. Therefore, one assumes that this particular incident took place before all our machines had been so marked, or else that the pilot intentionally flew in such a position that the Germans got a view of only the top side of the wings. This could be assured fairly well by continually turning with a fairly steep bank on the machine, so that the near wing tips pointed down toward the Germans and the under side of the wings was thus kept away from their view.

The pilot in question is quite skilful enough as a flier to carry out such a manoeuvre, and quite clever enough to think about avoiding identification in that particular way.

The story of another adventure of one of our aviators reached me recently. This, however, did not end so happily, though it illustrates the pluck and skill of our flying officers. This particular pilot started off alone with the intention of dropping bombs on one of the captive balloons which are largely used by the Germans for observation purposes. As he was out on this particular mission and wished to carry as many bombs as possible he left his usual firearms behind him. On approaching the German lines he was met by a German aeroplane, which he naturally decided to destroy before he went after the balloon.

Bomb misses Mark

As the German machine, like his own, was a "tractor"—that is to say, was drawn by a "tractor screw" in front, instead of being pushed by a "propellor" behind, he manoeuvred so as to approach it from the front, so that the passenger on the German machine could not fire at him without danger of blowing his own wheel to pieces. This manoeuvre succeeded well enough the first time but unfortunately the bomb missed its mark.

Turning quickly he tried to get into the safe position again but before he could do so a bullet from the German passenger's rifle hit him in the hip, and carried some French coins which were in his trousers pockets into his body. This occurred at a height of about six thousand feet, and knowing that he could not hold out very long, he shut off his engine and started to glide down towards the British lines. In doing so he caught sight of a field in which there were some aeroplanes, and though of course he could not make sure whether they were British or French or German, he decided to land there. Fortunately for him the machines turned out to be British.

So far as one can gather through those who received him on his arrival he must have been practically unconscious for the last one hundred feet of the glide. Despite this, in some curious subconscious way he managed to make a perfect landing without breaking anything but the machine, which was promptly and properly attended to.

Unfortunately the German machine got away unharmed on that particular occasion, and the passenger may reckon that he and his passenger have gone part of the way to wiping off a score, for this particular British officer had previously displayed great skill as a bomb dropper, having successfully destroyed a transport column of ammunition and having stampeded several camps.

One hopes that he will soon be well enough to return to duty and score some more points for himself.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast; continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

THE LOST ART

The Stupendous Task That Was Set a Lover

By CHAUNCEY THOMAS

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

"No, sir!"

"But why not?"

"Young man, I have not the slight est objection to you personally. Your family, your character, are above reproach, but financially, my dear sir, financially. Ethel has been raised accustomed to everything that money can buy, and to be candid, my dear sir, what have you?"

Old Herrington, millionaire president of the First National bank, tilted back in his chair and gazed, half in compassion, half in amusement, yet with a show of regard, at the doleful young man before him.

A fine, strapping specimun of manhood Philip Stone was, but just now he appeared all dejection.

"Then I cannot marry Ethel?" he asked ruefully.

"I am very sorry, but I must say no."

"But could I had I the money?"

"Well, my boy, that is another question, but I am not certain. Yes, I will say positively that if you were able to support her you would have my full consent."

"How much?" asked the young man laconically.

"Good! That sounds like business," responded the banker, bringing his feet flat on the floor. "Well, I think I would risk you with a hundred thousand dollars."

"A hundred thousand sums!" muttered the young fellow. "To tell you the flat truth, Mr. Herrington, I have nothing but an income of less than a hundred dollars a month from my salary."

"My dear Stone," said the elder man earnestly, "I admire you immensely, and of all young men I know I would choose you, if you had the money, for Ethel's husband. Now, Ethel is barely eighteen and can well afford to wait. You may have her on this condition: I will advance you $1,000 in cash today upon your promise not to see Ethel for a year, and if at the end of that time you have not $100,000 in cash or the prospects of it, which I alone must decide, then you will never see Ethel again. On the other hand, if you have the money you may marry her a year from today if she is willing."

The young man looked up eagerly.

"Yes, Philip, that is what I mean."

The young man gazed thoughtfully at the carpet for many moments.

"Agreed!" he said, putting out his hand.

With one hand the banker took the proffered grasp, while with the other he reached for his private check book.

Three minutes later Philip Stone was bidding his all but to be father-in-law goodby. In his pocket was a check for $1,000.

"Tell me, Mr. Herrington, what shall I do to get this fortune and Ethel within a year, for get both of them I will?"

"Go to the ant, thou sluggard," smiled the old man, with a kindly grasp of Philip's hand that took all the sting out of the epithet.

Philip Stone left the bank and sought the seclusion of a quiet, sunny nook in the park. For awhile he sat and planned and schemed, but to no purpose.

Then the old man's advice came to his mind. "Go to the ant, thou sluggard," and as a forlorn hope he began idly to watch a city of insects at his feet.

Red ants they were, busily engaged in repairing the havoc wrought by a passing boot.

Then an inspiration thrilled him. With his penknife he carefully tore the ant hill to pieces, stepping here and there and brushing vigorously to avoid the stings of the brave little home defenders. In his handkerchief he placed a double handful of the white larvae—embryonic ants.

Gently knotting the handkerchief together and putting it carefully in his coat pocket, he caught the nearest cab and gave the order, "Keen & Bishop, Broadway, bullion dealers."

An hour later, when he returned home, in one pocket was a pint of red ants' eggs, in the other a thousand dollars in the shape of six pounds of unrefined gold dust.

Then he sent Jones, the man of all work about the house, to the florists for some very fine earth free from all sandy particles.

On Jones' return he took a pack of this earth and sifted it through a fine sieve; then with it he mixed the gold dust and put all but a handful in a glass jar.

He carefully deposited the ants' eggs in the jar on top of the earth and over them lightly sprinkled the remaining handful. This done, he put the whole in the sun.

In a week they came, several hundred vigorous young ants with unheard of energy for ant hill building, but with no material with which to work except the grains of gold dust scattered throughout ordinary sprinkle dust. But nevertheless industrious as they were, they went ruefully to work.

In two weeks a tiny hill, a pygmy ant hill of pure gold, was erected within the jar. Philip watched the process with mute delight. Soon that golden hill was alive with white marvels, eggs of a new generation. Which they, too, had become able to destroyed the hill and once more mixed the gold with the dust. Again the little workers sorted it all out and built a hill of gold.

Before long the house was full of white larvae, which in time turned into a third generation of ants accustomed to handling nothing but gold.

But this was not his plan. Six months had passed, and still he was no nearer the hundred thousand dollars or Ethel than before. But he had gained this much—he had a plan that, to his mind, at least, promised certainty, so that day he applied for a two weeks' vacation from the fruit house where he was bookkeeper.

Incidentally he asked for and received a pass to Arizona and return. Then away to Arizona went Philip Stone and his trained ants.

He returned to New York, went quietly to work recording peaches and prunes and said nothing.

Five months passed, still no $100,000. But two weeks more were left when Philip appeared one morning before Mr. Herrington, the millionaire banker.

"Well, Philip, my boy, have you got it?" asked the old gentleman eagerly.

"Don't know, sir. That is what I want you to go and see," responded the young man.

"Where?" asked the elder.

"Arizona," said Philip.

"Mining?" said the old gentleman.

"I don't know, sir," said Philip. "I want you to go and see with me. Will you?"

The old man rubbed his bald pate reflectively.

"Philip, you're a genius. My physician told me I needed a change of scene and a higher altitude. We'll go to Arizona. Be ready to start in the morning."

A week later Philip Stone and Banker Herrington stood on the high arid plateau thirty miles west of Phoenix, Ariz.

"Philip, my boy, I don't see any mine here," said the old gentleman. Then he looked at Philip suspiciously.

"Perhaps the poor boy is unbalanced," mused the old gentleman, "brooding over all this. I was cruel to him, for he is not the kind and he is not the breed to plan anything irregular."

"No mine?" said Philip, with the sunshine in his face.

"No mine," repeated the old gentleman.

Banker Herrington looked instantly at his feet, at the ant hill. It was a mound two feet high of pure gold.

"There's Ethel, sir," said Philip.

The old gentleman gazed with open mouth. He reached down, took a handful of sand—gold it surely was, half a bushel, and easily $100,000 worth.

He reached over and took Philip by the hand.

"Allow me to congratulate you, Philip, my boy; you have done it. Tell me, how did you find it?"

"I find it, sir? I didn't. I did it by forcing three generations of hill building red ants to collect gold dust when they'd nothing else with which to build. I bred into them the instinct to collect nothing but gold. Six months ago I brought them out here and planted them. You see the result."

The old gentleman saw and then and there gave Philip his full consent. On their pack horses they took that ant pile to civilization.

Philip had won Ethel. The old man was delighted. Philip was still more delighted, but the most delighted of all was Ethel.

Banker Herrington enthusiastically proclaimed that he had the most intelligent ant-in-law in existence, for the supply of ants is unlimited, and in the sands of Arizona are undoubtedly billions of gold dust that, for lack of water, can never be washed.

But in destroying that golden ant hill for the sake of its gold they had unwittingly killed all the trained inhabitants.

Philip could never again breed another hill like them. It is now one of the lost arts.

Believes Canopus Is Safe.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Reports that the British battleship Canopus had met with disaster were scouted by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, in replying to questions put to him in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Churchill declared he believed the Canopus to be safe.

At the time of the recent British defeat off the Chilian coast many enquiries were made as to why the Canopus had not been with the Good Hope and Monmouth.

United States Cruiser as Guardian.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—A despatch to Havas agency says: "The U. S. cruiser Tennessee, in command of Capt. B. C. Decker, has arrived at the Port of Vourla, Asia Minor, and has put a stop to the ill-treatment of British, French and Russian residents. The authorities of Smyrna, fearing a bombardment, have left for the interior. The garrison at Smyrna at present consists of 35,000 Turkish troops.

BRONCHITIS

If Neglected Will Surely Turn Into PNEUMONIA.

Bronchitis comes from a neglected cold. It starts with a short, painful, dry cough, accompanied with rapid wheezing, and a feeling of oppression or tightness through the chest. At first the expectoration is of a light color, but soon becomes copious and of purulent character.

You have, no doubt, wakened up in the morning and have had to cough half a dozen times before you could raise the phlegm from your bronchial tubes, and when you do succeed in doing so you find that it is of yellowish or greenish color, and you get some relief right away. When this happens to you, you may rest assured that you have a touch of bronchitis, and if not cured immediately it will sooner or later develop into pneumonia or some other more serious trouble.

Cure the cold, and thereby prevent bronchitis and pneumonia taking a hold on your system.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

Mrs. Rebecca Have, Mahone Bay, N.S., writes: "My little boy, aged six, was always troubled with bronchitis, and when he had whooping cough he was worse. Doctors advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. It gave him instant relief, and positively cured him."

Girl Drops Dead in Ballroom, But Hundreds Go On With Dance

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—One hundred dancers were dancing in the ballroom of the Martinique Hotel last night when Miss Mabel Norton, of San Francisco, who was dancing with Richard Gabert, a steamship officer, dropped to the floor and died in a few minutes of heart disease.

Her death did not stop the dancers. Dancers glided around her as Mr. Gabert knelt beside her. As he carried her to the seats at the side of the ballroom the dancers changed their steps and dipped and trotted in another direction.

Most of them believed that Miss Norton had fainted. When a glass of water failed to revive her, after she had reached the seats, the hotel physician, Dr. Lewis, was summoned.

"She's dead," he said, as soon as he saw her. He looked closer, felt the wrists and opened the eyelids. "She died almost instantly from heart disease," he added. "She never should have danced."

As her body was carried from the ballroom the dancers still believed she merely had fainted and they continued the dance without interruption.

Miss Norton came to this city several days ago to be the guest of her friend, Miss Dorothy Kearney, of 253 East Kingsbridge Road, Bronx. Miss Kearney was in the ballroom at the time Miss Norton collapsed, and she was one of those who stopped dancing. She obtained the permission of Dr. Otto Schultz, a coroner's physician, to have the body sent to an undertaker's rooms.

Mr. Cobert is senior officer of the steamship Washingtonian, of the American Hawaiian line, which is now at pier No. 42, Bush Terminal, South Brooklyn. It was said he had known Miss Norton in San Francisco when they happened to be in this city at the same time, he called upon her and escorted her and Miss Kearney to the dance at the Martinique.

When Miss Norton died she had with her $626 and jewels valued at $500. Miss Kearney took charge of these and sent a telegram to Miss Norton's relatives in San Francisco.

Mr. Cobert was deeply affected by the sudden death of Miss Norton. For quite a time he refused to believe that she was dead. It was only when Dr. Schultz arrived and confirmed the hotel physician that he would cease his efforts to restore life.

Condemned for Treason.

CHALONS-SUR-MARNE, Nov. 18.—A Frenchman, Alfred Peyrot by name, has been sentenced to death by court martial for treason.

During the battle which raged around Libeims on Sept. 9, the French artillery operating near the village of Puisieulx was subjected to a terrific bombardment by the Germans, no matter how often they changed their position. A careful watch was kept and it was discovered that a mile in front of the French batteries a shepherd was tending his flock, among which were five snow white goats.

AIRMEN FROM UNITED STATES ARE WITH BIG FRENCH FLOCK

France is Preparing an Aerial Corps to Hurl Against the Germans—Have More Aviators Than Are Needed—Four Styles of Planes Will Be Used.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Three aviators formerly living in this city are serving in the new aeroplane line which France is preparing to hurl against the Germans when its equipment is complete. They are Ladis Lewkowicz, a Russian airman who was among the first to fly across Manhattan; Frederick C. Hild, an American, who flew a monoplane at Hempstead several seasons; and Albert Filieux, long employed at the Moisant monoplane school at Hempstead. Each expects to act as the pilot of one of the new Voisin biplanes armed with mitrailleuses, which are among the aircraft built for the new flying corps.

A letter from Lewkowicz, received by his friend Leon Spilo, 250 West Fifty-fourth street, says there are to be in all sixty escadrilles, each of six aeroplanes, or a total of 360 flying machines. Four types of aircraft will be included, he states. They are the Voisin biplane and Morane monoplane, armed with mitrailleuse, for scouting; the Maurice Farman biplane and Caudron machine for auxiliary work with cavalry and artillery. All of these are to be driven by motors of 130 horse-power. This is a considerable advance over the German types in use, nearly all of which have 100 horse-power engines. Lewkowicz says that Hild and himself are both delighted by their assignment to the biplanes, armed with machine guns, which they prefer. Lewkowicz writes from Tours:

"I was surprised to meet among the aviators the American, Hild, and Filieux, who flew with Bleriot across the Channel. Hild has passed his military examination. Filieux met with an acident in testing a new type of military machine, and hurt his leg, but is better. Every one here is certain of final victory for the Allies.

"Our aviators are doing very good work. Not a day passes but there is one of these poor German aviators brought down like a bird by a good shot, but they find they are not birds.

"The Germans are well organized well mounted on aeroplanes, which have pretty good motors, but they have not enough aviators. It is different in France, where they more aviators than they can use, among the men of all countries."

Lewkowicz in making a flight from Long Island to New Jersey, in 1911, found himself without gasoline when 9,000,000 feet above Manhattan, and began a volplane across the Hudson. In a few minutes he espied a great green field which promised a fine landing place, and descended upon it. Too late he found himself in mud and water in the Hackensack meadow beyond Lennia, N.J. Mr. Spilo, who had followed him in an automobile, and others went to his rescue and extricated the monoplane he used.

New Home Treatment For Banishing Hairs

(Beauty Topics)

With the aid of a delatone paste, it is an easy matter for any woman to remove every trace of hair or fuzz from face, neck and arms. Enough of the powdered delatone and water to mixed into a thick paste and spread on the hairy surface for about 2 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed. This completely removes the hair, but to avoid disappointment, get the delatone in an original package.

Modesty.

Dribbler: In my opinion a man who writes an illegible hand does it because he thinks people are willing to puzzle over it. In other words, he is a chunk of conceit.

Scribbler: Not always. Sometimes a man writes illegibly not because he is conceited, but because he is modest.

Dribbler: Modest? What about?

Scribbler: About his spelling.

THE LONDON BUS DRIVER AT THE FRONT

Stories of the Unsung Heroes Who Bear Their Share of the Burden of Fighting

PARIS, Oct. 15.—When you have read this go out in the streets and take off your hat to the first motor bus driver you meet. You may have often abused him for the cheery nonchalance with which he splashes you on a muddy day. You may often have mentally resolved to "write to the company" when he airily ignores your frantic signals to stop. But write that all off and doff your hat when he passes. He is a hero. Just as he is a new type in the London streets, so has his class created a new type of hero in war. The man of the moment at the front is the London motor bus driver. At home he may be just a driver with a police badge and a reckless way with the brakes. At the front he is a private in the Army Service Corps, driver of one of the splendid fleet of motor lorries which has made the British Army Transport the envy of the continent, serving in a corps whose services are one of the noblest features of the British Army's splendid record in the present war.

As a class he cannot shoot. He probably does not know the first element of drill. But he can drive an omnibus. Whether he has to drive it down the Strand on a wet night "with the theatres coming out" or along the shell-swept roads in France is all alike to him. He is quite content to leave strategy to Sir John French and the care of the immediate future to his officer. "Go ahead!" is the only order he wants to hear. Such interwening circumstances as shells, or parties of Germans wishing for nothing better than to kill him and seize his lorry, are of little consequence to him as long as the engine runs nicely. When it stops, according to his rough-and-ready philosophy, it will be quite time enough to turn to the unfamiliar weapon by his side. He does not bother his head much about gallantry, so he is often a hero unawares.

Jollied German Officer.

This happened on the retreat from Mons. A lieutenant of the Army Motor Transport found himself, with a group of twenty motor lorries, confronted by a large party f Germans. At the wheel of every single one of those motor vans sat a London bus-driver stolidly awaiting events. Along the straight white road, flanked with its tall poplars, the German officer advanced jubilantly to receive the submission of the Britons. He triumphantly stepped up to the first of the long string of lorries bearing the names of firms all over the United Kingdom, from John o' Groat's to Land's End. The British lieutenant sitting beside the busman on the driving seat, silently waited the German.

"Of course you will surrender," said the German officer.

"Surrender?" was the British reply. "Certainly not!" And a ripple of laughter ran along the line of motor lorries, for your London bus-driver has a delicate sense of humour.

The German officer looked first perplexed, then worried. He turned round nervously and noticed that he was quite alone and some way from his own men.

"At least you will grant me the courtesy of fifty paces!!" he said, bowing to the Britons.

"Certainly, sir," replied the British lieutenant, with a salute.

The German saluted in his turn, and walked back to his men, straggling right across the road.

Then the British officer stood up in his seat. He turned round so that he faced the long line of vans, and shouted: "Now, then, boys; let's make a dash for it!"

Motor Lorry Charge.

Not a man flinched. There was no hesitation. Every lorry moved forward behind the first, and the whole line dashed straight on and through the Germans, who, taken completely by surprise, scattered on all sides. There were a few minutes of wild shooting, but the British all got through in safety with the exception one lorry, which, I believe, fell into German hands. The British officer confessed afterwards that he had had a momentary qualm as to whether his busmen would respond to his call. But the busmen were all right. Now he swears by them.

The Army Motor Transport Service is the joy of the high road in France. The monotony of the endless straight routes nationales is delightfully broken by an encounter with one of these trains of motor lorries, the merits of somebody's pickles, somebody else's steam laundry, and somebody else's soap flaunting from their dust-stained sides. "Oh! the bittar irony of life!" a weary interpreter said to me the other day, "to meet on a hot and dusty march a motor van advertising someone's delicious rustic ales!"

What a merry lot of fellows are with these motor transport trains! Here is a covered van bearing the inscription, "Harry Tate's Knockabout Troupe," with a bevy of grinning faces under the cover. On one lorry I fell in with both the driver and the soldier at the back, a kind of military vanboy, were wearing German helmets front to back and shouting, "Pardon! Pardon!" (a familiar German cry during the Germans' recent successful backward advance from the Marne) to everybody they met.

Loved by the Peasants.

The French peasants love the Army Motor Transport. They have fairly taken them to their hearts. When the army motor lorries are on the move the villagers wait all day long in front of their houses with baskets of apples and papers and loaves of bread and bottles of wine and cigarettes. The children dance round the vans as they rumble through the winding village street, and the driver mostly slows down so as to allow himself and his pals time to give a hand to the youngsters. "Makes one feel a bit homelike," he would probably say.

Not all the drivers are busmen, of course. Many are the original drivers of these private commercial vans. On the outbreak of war they drove the vans to Army headquarters for requisitioning and enlisted themselves, something like the Arab and his steed offering themselves for service. Rain or shine they are all indomitably cheerful, with flowers in their caps and snatches of French on their lips. I heard of a large detachment of the Army Motor Transport which arrived at ten o'clock the other night at a village and found they had to camp in the open, their muddle-headed officer having omitted to send on in advance to secure billets in the houses which, with an hour's notice, the villagers would have been delighted to place at the free disposal of the men. With very little grumbling they cooked their bits of meat and boiled their tea in petrol cans, then lay down composedly to pass the night in the open. A frosty dawn found them cheery and joking as usual,, just as if they were starting out from the London bus yards after a good night's rest. The frost was on their tunics and their eyes were red and weary, but they never lost heart.

One Result of The War Is Certain

CANADA must Manufacture for part of the World now involved in War.

Europe can no longer supply the Export Markets.

If you are proud of Canada, you want to see our Factories hum, our Stores alive with Business, and our Offices piled with Orders.

Let Peterborough enlist in this movement to boom Canadian Made Goods.

Let Peterborough Manufacturers get on the job, and let us read, mark and hear more of "Made in Peterborough" Goods.

How many good-going factories in Peterborough never tell our own Citizens what they manufacture.

And if they don't tell, how can they expect to sell.

Much of the European trade that was exported into Canada should now become our own. Who but our own Manufacturers should now make the Foodstuffs, the Hosiery, the Underwear, the Toys, and much of the Chemicals, Dye-stuffs, and other things Germany has supplied us?

Advertising will soon reveal which of our industrial enterprises are most worthy and best prepared to profit by Europe's need. The Firms first to advertise for this business will be the first to profit.

INCREASE IN ACREAGE OF FALL WHEAT SHOWN

Estimate in Ontario is For 1,043,000 Acres Compared With 898,000 Acres Last Year, an Increase of About 16 per cent.—Total Value of Potato Crop is $41,598,000.

OTTAWA, Nov. 17, 1914.)— The monthly crop report of the Census and Statistics Office, deals with the area, yield and value of potato, root and fodder crops during the past season, with the area and condition of fall wheat sown for next year's crops and with the progress of fall ploughing and summer fallowing.

Root and Fodder Crops.

Root and fodder crops in Canada, consisting of potatoes, turnips, mangolds etc., hay and colver, alfalfa, fodder corn and sugar beets, occupied this year a total area of 2,070,700 acres as compared with 2,263,900 acres in 1913 and their estimated value is $238,000,000, as compared with $197,-238,000 in 1913. Potatoes give a yield of 85,822,00 bushels from 475,000 acres showing the excellent average yield per acre for the Dominion of 180 bushels, which is higher for this crop than in any year since 1908, excepting only in 1909, when the average reached was 733 bushels. At an average price per bushel of 49 cents—the same as last year—the total value of the potato crop is $41,598,000 against $69,416,000 in 1913. The potato yield in the Maritime provinces is especially good, the yield per acre being 313 bushels in Prince Edward Island, 220 bushels in Nova Scotia and 240 bushels in New Brunswick. Turnips and other roots yielded 89,083,000 bushels of the value of $18,934,000, compared with 98,788,-000 bushels, value $19,043,000, in 1913, hay and clover 10,[illegible] tons, value $145,000,000, compared with 10,000,000 tons, value $124,000,000 in 1913, alfalfa 235,000 tons, [illegible] $3,000,000, compared with 237,500 tons, value $2,819,000 in 1913, fodder corn 2,951,-500 tons, value $15,000,000, compared with 2,316,300 tons, value $12,508,000, in 1913 and sugar beets 148,000 tons, value $1,062,000, compared with 148,-000 tons value $906,000 in 1913. The average yield per acre of turnips, etc., is 394 bushels against 366, of hay and clover 1.38 ton against 1.33, of fodder corn 10.25 tons against 8.69 and of alfalfa 2.42 tons against 2.44 and sugar beets, 9.42 tons against 8.71 in 1913. The average quality of these crops for all Canada is high, ranging from 89 p.c. of the standard for sugar beets to 96 p.c. for fodder corn.

Acreage and Condition of Fall Wheat

Estimates of the acreage sown to fall wheat this year for the crop of 1915 were collected from correspondents at the end of October. The completion of the results shows an area in the five fall wheat provinces of 1,204,000 acres, compared with the area sown in1913 of 1,184,000 acres and the area harvested this year of 973,300 acres. The acreage sown for 1915 represents a net increase over that sown for 1914 of 9.2 p.c. Last year the acreage sown was reported as 7.37 p.c. less than in 1912. The bulk of the fall wheat crop is grown in Ontario, where, this year, the estimate is for 1,043,000 acres, as compared with 898,000 acres, the area sown in the fall of 1913. The increase under fall wheat for Ontario therefore is in the ratio of about 16 p.c. In the three Northwest provinces, the area sown to fall wheat has again decreased in continuation of a decline attributed to consecutive discouraging seasons for this crop. Alberta however, is the only western province where fall wheat is largely grown, and the area estimated to be sown is 230,000 acres, compared with 283,000 acres last year, a decrease of about 12 p.c. In British Columbia there is an increase from 5,500 to 6,000 acres, or 10 p.c. The condition of the fall wheat crop on October 31 is reported for the five provinces at 98.6 p. c. of the standard, which upon the assumption that average conditions prevail between now and the next year's harvest, indicates a yield per acre of about 1.5 p.c. above the average of the past four years, 1910-13. In Ontario the condition on October 31 was 99, in Manitoba 92, in Alberta 93 and in British Columbia 96 per cent. of the standard.

Progress of Fall Ploughing.

The early harvest and favourable conditions for threshing in the western provinces enabled farmers to make excellent progress with fall ploughing on land intended for sowing in the spring. Measured in percentage of the total land intended for next year's crop it is estimated that in Manitoba 92, in Saskatchewan 77 and in Alberta 56 p.c. of fall ploughing was completed by October 31. These figures compare very favourably with the two previous seasons, when the highest percentage was not more than 58 in Manitoba (1913) and the lowest only 24 in Saskatchewan and Alberta (1912). The progress made this year, therefore, augurs well for next year's crops. In Eastern Canada the percentage of fall ploughing completed by October 31 ranges from 81 in Nova Scotia to 7 in Quebec; but in the East, especially in the Maritime provinces, there is a longer fall ploughing season. The average figure for all Canada is 71, compared with 54 last year and 44 in 1912.

Summer Fallowing in the West.

The practice of summer fallowing in the west shows further progress, an increase of about 6 p.c. being reported in Manitoba and of 3 p.c. in Saskatchewan, as compared with last year. Alberta, however, shows a decline of about p.c.

MUNICIPAL NURSES SAFEGUARD HEALTH OF BERKELEY SCHOOL CHILDREN

BERKELEY, Cal., Nov. 16—Medical health inspection is among the younger offsprings of the school department here.

Nurses are employed by the school department to examine the children and report of their condition, the schools being divided among the nurses so that each one keeps as nearly as possible the same schools and records the results.

The child is taken into the room set aside for this purpose and examined for vision, hearing, throat or mouth trouble, condition of breathing, general nuritian, etc. The child is not disrobed, but any malformation that can be detected is noted. And effort is made to get the confidence of the child and excite interest in health. For this purpose a mental picture of the ideal man or woman is kept before the pupil and the means of attaining that ideal, rather than the defects found are dwelt upon.

The children are examined for decayed teeth, and are given a mouth breather. Eyes, ears, nose and throat are examined by the nurse and recommendations are made to parents of serious cases.

The throat is examined by a wooden blank tongue which is afterwards thrown into a waste can. They are especially made for the purpose of examination.

Six per cent. decrease of retarded children in the public schools here during the school year of 1911-12 is no doubt largely the result of the Berkeley health inspection. Infectious diseases have materially lessened and the appearance and cleanliness of the children has very much improved.

PARALYZED LIMBS.

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Hembarner, 10 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using two boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work, and now feel better than I did for 20 years."

$160,000,000 A YEAR.

Believe Sufficient to Cover War Outlay of Canada.

OTTAWA, Nov. 6.—The recent estimate of $160,000,000 a year for the maintenance of Canada's expeditionary forces seems to be sufficient to cover the necessary outlay on the basis which is now proposed for the despatch of contingents, and having regard to the cost of the equipment of the contingents which have gone.

The financial arrangements which have been made are complete, Premier Asquith's announcement bearing out the recent declaration of the Canadian Minister of Finance that advances to the Government will be made through the Bank of England, and subsequently covered by a general loan.

One thing which is perfectly clear is that, whatever may be the extent of the requirements of Canada for war purposes, the whole credit of England is at her disposal on the terms which have previously been indicated.

GIRLS! DRAW A MOIST CLOTH THROUGH HAIR

Try This! Hair Gets Thick, Glossy, Wavy and Beautiful at Once

Immediate!—Yes? Certain!—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair clease. Just try this —moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few week's use when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it, surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

The natives of New Guinea are the shortest lived people in the world, which is attributed to their diet of the larvae of certain beetles and their practice of drinking sea water.

EVIDENCE IS CONTRADICTORY IN COURT CASE

Witnesses Disagree on Important Points in the Assault Case Heard in Police Court Yesterday Afternoon.

JUDGMENT RESERVED

There are times when the position of Police Magistrate in this or any other city cannot be said to be an enviable one, and just now is a time in local Police Circles when the presiding Magistrate has to make a decision out of a mass of contradictory evidence that would challenge the wisdom of Solomon.

The case referred to is that of Chernikoff vs. Lundgren and Swanston, in which Chernikoff charges the other two with assaulting him last Saturday night, with intent to do him grievous bodily injury. The case results out of the fact that Chernikoff took a watch from Lundgren and paid him $1 for it. Right here is where the contradiction of the evidence begins. In a straightforward manner the Hebrew, in the witness box, said that he bought the watch outright, and in an equally convincing way Lundgren said that he only borrowed a dollar and gave the watch as security.

About the only fact that they agree upon is that the watch was a silver one. The Hebrew said it could not have been worth more than $4 when new, while Lundgren swore that he paid over $10 for it in Sweden.

In any event Lundgren returned a week later for his watch and offered Chernikoff $1.25 for it, being 25 per cent. interest on the money for one week. The dealer refused saying he had bought the watch. Then, according to Chernikoff's story, Lundgren, who, he says, was alone, became excited and looked as though he was going to fight so the Hebrew retreated out of danger. But in his account of this visit Lundgren says he was not alone, but that Swanston was with him. He says that when Chernikoff refused to return the watch for less than $2 (Chernikoff claims this figure should be $1.75) Swanston, who, according to the other side of the story, was not even present, threatened to report the matter to the Police. Whereupon Chernikoff became angry, reached for a hammer, and with it in his hand, ordered them out. To avoid contact with the utensil they left the shop without a word.

The Assault.

On Saturday night, shortly after 6 o'clock, Swanston and Lundgren again repaired to Chernikoff's. They both had five or six "beers" that afternoon. Lundgren says Swanston was not drunk. Swanston, himself, says he was not; but Chernikoff says he was. Dr. Sharp says that Lundgren was not drunk, and Lundgren says he had just the same amount of drink as Swanston. The two men entered the store and asked for the

NO MORE TEST MOBILIZATIONS

Militia Department Says That Nothing of This Kind Should Be Held Without Warning the Public.

DROP PLATOON SYSTEM

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 19. — Cable despatches received here are interpreted by the Militia Department as intimating that the platoon formation of companies which is ordered by the nineteen fourteen drill book has been dropped, and the old formation of one hundred men to a company substituted. This order will of course be followed in the training of the second contingent. The Militia Department has issued orders to the Canadian divisional commanders that in future there shall be no test mobilization of the militia regiments until the public has been warned, so that panicky feeling among the population will be averted.

WON SPLENDID SET OF DISHES

Mr. E. Morley, Chamberlain Street, won the set of dishes donated to the Trades and Labour Council by R. J. Soden for the Labour Day demonstration. At the time of the drawing no one held the lucky number. It had probably been thrown away or mislaid by some one who felt he had no chance with his number. After waiting practically two months for the number to be presented, a drawing was held among the members with the above result.

DEER HUNTERS RETURN LOADED

The Nicholls deer-hunting party of eight has returned to the City with their full quota of deer. The party consisted of N. Nicholls, and Oscar Nicholls, Peterborough; Peter Nicholls, Theadore Nicholls and Levi Harris, Hall's Bridge; John Nicholls, Deer Bay; Dr. W. A. Baker, East City, and Dr. Sinclair of Aylmer, Ont.

The party, which hunted at the head of Eagle Lake, found deer fairly plentiful, but it took them the whole two weeks of the season to get their quota. They got the eighth deer on the last day of the season and of their stay. It may be mentioned that Oscar Nicholls, aged only 13, (son of N. Nicholls, barber, 151 Simcoe street), proved himself the mightiest Nimrod of them all. He got his deer the first morning of the hunt.

LORD ROBERTS LAID TO REST IN CRYPT OF ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL

"In Streaming London's Central Roar, Let the Sound of Those He Wrought For, and the Feet of Those He Fought For, Echo Round His Bones for Evermore."

Special Cable:

LONDON, November 19.—London paid its last tribute to "Bobs" to-day. In a cold drizzle of rain, thousands stood reverently uncovered as the funeral cortege of Lord Roberts moved through the streets from Charing Cross Station to St. Paul's, where the funeral services were held. The vast crowd revealed a coronation throng. Thousands of Belgian refugees stood uncovered with Englishmen as the casket wrapped in a Union Jack and mounted upon a gun carriage, passed by towards the last resting place of Britain's most illustrious soldier.

Six Field Marshalls, six Generals, and two Admirals, were the pall bearers. King George, the Cabinet Ministers and representatives of President Poincare of France, the Czar, the Mikado, and King Albert of Belgium, attended the funeral services, as well as representatives of both Houses of Parliament.

With family services at All Saints' Church, Ascot, the body of Lord Roberts was conveyed to the station on the gun carriage in the defence of which his only son lost his life at Colenso, South Africa. Arriving at Charing Cross at 10.30, the procession then moved to St. Pauls, with the full Field Marshall's escort of approximately 3,000 men of all branches of the service. The shadow of the war for which "Bobs" so urgently pleaded that England be prepared, was upon the cortege. All the soldiers were clad in their khaki service uniforms. The escort included Canadian and Indian troops, all marching with arms reversed, and to the dirges of muffled bands. The Canadians included 30 picked men of the first battalion, first brigade, from Ontario points, Major Kimmins, of Winona, Ont., in charge. Several of the Canadian staff officers were in attendance. Bagpipes and muffled bands followed with the escort. As the procession passed St. James' Park an artillery salute boomed out. The route was along Northumberland avenue and the Victoria Embankment, and then up Ludgate Hill to St. Paul's.

There were but few wreaths but they included offerings from the King, Lord Kitchener, General Sir John French, General Joffree and the Belgiums.

The funeral service began at 1.20 o'clock and included the reading of the Episcopal service beginning, "I am the Resurrection and the Life," 23rd Psalm, and the rendering of "Peace, Perfect Peace." As the strains of Chopin's funeral march died away the services were concluded by artillery trumpeters sounding the Last Post. After lying in state all the afternoon the body of "Bobs" was interred in the crypt near those of Wellington and Nelson.

LONDON, November 19. — The government has no intention of attempting conscription in Ireland.. In the House of Commons to-day, Premier Asquith denied that there was a plan to apply for such conscription. His statement was made in reply to a question from John Redmond.

LONDON, Nov. 19. — Captured Russian sailors have been marched through the streets of Constantinople in an effort to impress the people and arouse the war spirit, despatches from Athens to-day declare.

A Turkish auxiliary cruiser captured and sank a Russian merchantman west of Asia Minor, a despatch states. The crew was then taken to Constantinople and paraded through the streets.

There are times when the position of Police Magistrate in this or any other city cannot be said to be an enviable one, and just now is a time in local Police Circles when the presiding Magistrate has to make a decision out of a mass of contradictory evidence that would challenge the wisdom of Solomon.

The case referred to is that of Chernikoff vs. Lundgren and Swanston, in which Chernikoff charges the other two with assaulting him last Saturday night, with intent to do him grievous bodily injury. The case results out of the fact that Chernikoff took a watch from Lundgren and paid him $1 for it. Right here is where the contradiction of the evidence begins. In a straightforward manner the Hebrew, in the witness box, said that he bought the watch outright, and in an equally convincing way Lundgren said that he only borrowed a dollar and gave the watch as security.

About the only fact that they agree upon is that the watch was a silver one. The Hebrew said it could not have been worth more than $4 when new, while Lundgren swore that he paid over $10 for it in Sweden.

In any event Lundgren returned a week later for his watch and offered Chernikoff $1.25 for it, being 25 per cent. interest on the money for one week. The dealer refused saying he had bought the watch. Then, according to Chernikoff's story, Lundgren, who, he says, was alone, became excited and looked as though he was going to fight so the Hebrew retreated out of danger. But in his account of this visit Lundgren says he was not alone, but that Swanston was with him. He says that when Chernikoff refused to return the watch for less than $2 (Chernikoff claims this figure should be $1.75) Swanston, who, according to the other side of the story, was not even present, threatened to report the matter to the Police. Whereupon Chernikoff became angry, reached for a hammer, and with it in his hand, ordered them out. To avoid contact with the utensil they left the shop without a word.

The Assault.

On Saturday night, shortly after 6 o'clock, Swanston and Lundgren again repaired to Chernikoff's. They both had five or six "beers" that afternoon. Lundgren says Swanston was not drunk. Swanston, himself, says he was not; but Chernikoff says he was. Dr. Sharpe says that Lundgren was not drunk, and Lundgren says he had just the same amount of drink as Swanston. The two men entered the store and called for the

DROP PLATOON SYSTEM

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 19. — Cable despatches received here are interpreted by the Militia Department as intimating that the platoon formation of companies which is ordered by the nineteen fourteen drill book has been dropped, and the old formation of one hundred men to a company substituted. This order will of course be followed in the training of the second contingent. The Militia Department has issued orders to the Canadian divisional commanders that in future there shall be no test mobilization of the militia regiments until the public has been warned, so that panicky feeling among the population will be averted.

WON SPLENDID SET OF DISHES

Mr. E. Morley, Chamberlain Street, won the set of dishes donated to the Trades and Labour Council by R. J. Soden for the Labour Day demonstration. At the time of the drawing no one held the lucky number. It had probably been thrown away or mislaid by some one who felt he had no chance with his number. After waiting practically two months for the number to be presented, a drawing was held among the members with the above result.

DEER HUNTERS RETURN LOADED

The Nicholls deer-hunting party of eight has returned to the City with their full quota of deer. The party consisted of N. Nicholls, and Oscar Nicholls, Peterborough; Peter Nicholls, Theodore Nicholls and Levi Harris, Hall's Bridge; John Nicholls, Deer Bay; Dr. W. A. Baker, East City, and Dr. Sinclair of Aylmer, Ont.

The party, which hunted at the head of Eagle Lake, found deer fairly plentiful, but it took them the whole two weeks of the season to get their quota. They got the eighth deer on the last day of the season and of their stay. It may be mentioned that Oscar Nicholls, aged only 13, (son of N. Nicholls, barber, 161 Simcoe street), proved himselm the mightiest Nimrod of them all. He got his deer the first morning of the hunt.

Still Another Blow at Liquor

PANAMA, November 16. — Col. George W. Goethals, governor of the Panama zone, signed an order placing all persons engaged in canal transportation on a strict temperance basis.

The order provides all persons employed on the canal, who have marine licenses, must abstain absolutely from liquor. This includes pilots taking ships through the canal, the captains of tug boats, mates and others.

GOT NINE DEER AND A BEAR

Stoney Creek Party Had a Most Successful Hunt

One of the most successful hunting parties of the season was the Stoney Creek party, who returned from their quarters on Stoney Creek on Tuesday, bringing with them nine deer and one of the biggest black bears ever brought out of the north country. The party was composed of Messrs. Jos. Jopling, Fred. Jopling, Harry Jopling, Isaac Emmett, J. W. Kelly, T. N. Kelly, Chas. Forsyth, of Bridgenorth. Zack Knott, of Indian Village, and Dr. Kelly and Fred Dobson, of Peterborough. Monsieur Bruin was brought down by Harry Jopling and Zack Knott.

"In Streaming London's Central Roar, Let the Sound of Those He Wrought For, and the Feet of Those He Fought For, Echo Round His Bones for Evermore."

Special Cable:

LONDON, November 19.—London paid its last tribute to "Bobs" to-day. In a cold drizzle of rain, thousands stood reverently uncovered as the funeral cortege of Lord Roberts moved through the streets from Charing Cross Station to St. Paul's, where the funeral services were held. The vast crowd revealed a coronation throng. Thousands of Belgian refugees stood uncovered with Englishmen as the casket wrapped in a Union Jack and mounted upon a gun carriage, passed by towards the last resting place of Britain's most illustrious soldier.

Six Field Marshalls, six Generals, and two Admirals, were the pall bearers. King George, the Cabinet Ministers and representatives of President Poincare of France, the Czar, the Mikado, and King Albert of Belgium, attended the funeral services, as well as representatives of both Houses of Parliament.

With family services at All Saints' Church, Ascot, the body of Lord Roberts was conveyed to the station on the gun carriage in the defence of which his only son lost his life at Colenso, South Africa. Arriving at Charing Cross at 10.30, the procession then moved to St. Pauls, with the full Field Marshall's escort of approximately 8,000 man of all branches of the service. The shadow of the war for which "Bobs" so urgently pleaded that England be prepared, was upon the cortege. All the soldiers were clad in their khaki service uniforms. The escort included Canadian and Indian troops, all marching with arms reversed, and to the dirges of muffled bands. The Canadians included 30 picked men of the first battalion, first brigade, from Ontario points, Major Kimmins, of Winona, Ont., in charge. Several of the Canadian staff officers were in attendance. Bagpipes and muffled bands followed with the escort. As the procession passed St. James' Park an artillery salute boomed out. The route was along Northumberland avenue and the Victoria Embankment, and then up Ludgate Hill to St. Paul's.

There were but few wreaths but they included offerings from the King, Lord Kitchener, General Sir John French, General Joffree and the Belgiums.

The funeral service began at 1.20 o'clock and included the reading of the Episcopal service beginning, "I am the Resurrection and the Life," 23rd Psalm, and the rendering of "Peace, Perfect Peace." As the strains of Chopin's funeral march died away the services were concluded by artillery trumpeters sounding the Last Post. After lying in state all the afternoon the body of "Bobs" was interred in the crypt near those of Wellington and Nelson.

LONDON, November 19. — The government had no intention of attempting conscription in Ireland., In the House of Commons to-day, Premier Asquith denied that there was a plan to apply for such conscription. His statement was made in reply to a question from John Redmond.

LONDON, Nov. 19. — Captured Russian sailors have been marched through the streets of Constantinople in an effort to impress the people and arouse the war spirit, despatches from Athens to-day declare.

A Turkish auxiliary cruiser captured and sank a Russian merchantman west of Asia Minor, a despatch states. The crew was then taken to Constantinople and paraded through the streets.

PITY THE POOR KAISER.

If the Kaiser has left one drop of the milk of human kindness uncurdled in a human breast, it would almost pity him for the bumps his imperial bumptuousness has got and is getting in fuller force every day. The meats for his banquet in Paris are getting cold, the market for his "kultur" is 'way below par. Ireland hasn't created any trouble except for himself. His expected East Indian rising, is rather "taking a rise" out of himself; his South African insurgency hasn't surged very successfully. His war machine has slipped several cogs; Belgium, Britain and France on the west and Russia on the east are closing in—making ready at an early date as possible to keep Berlin where it is—on the Spree. The poor Kaiser is disappointed all round. We hope that another disappointment awaits him—that of seeing Peterborough act up to the slogan—

$20,000 FOR THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

SAVE THEIR SELF-RESPECT.

The local committee of the Patriotic Fund has received an important and pertinent message from the Patriotic Fund authorities at Ottawa—to the effect that they strongly object to the Patriotic Fund being disbursed by municipal relief officers. Properly so; which is not, however, to say that Relief Officer Miller is not a thoroughly trustworthy, judicious and sympathetic official. But his official title and position spell "charity"—something that is offensive to self-respecting men and women, who do not look to the Patriotic Fund for charity, but as a right, something that has been earned by the breadwinners, that have gone to the fighting line. Personally Mr. Miller is all right; officially he is all wrong in the regard in question. If the angel Gabriel, took the role of a "porochial" Bumble and in that capacity dispensed the Patriotic Fund, he would be objectionable. Women have sacrificed enough in sending husbands and sons to fight, without being asked to sacrifice self-respect, by becoming the objects of charity—alms-takers. We should save all the humiliation, we have to hand out, for the German Emperor, and not ask the wives and mothers of the Canadian agents of his humiliation, to take a share. We should avoid the very appearance of evil, and even earned and legitimate relief though honestly and thoughtfully dispensed becomes tainted, by even the lightest guise of charity. This will become all the more important when by a strong and united effort we make good the slogan— ....

$20,000 FOR THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

SINK PARTY AND DO SOMETHING.

The Toronto Globe and the Toronto News are wrangling a little over the Canadian naval question. This is hardly in keeping with the spirit of the party truce that has been declared at this time of war. However, if the controversy is carried on in a temperate spirit, it should be useful and bring us to a state of preparation, in knowledge and sentiment, for the adoption of a naval policy in the interests of Canada, and the Empire. There is little use barking back and exchanging reproaches unless we revive the past to learn wisdom from its past; profit by our mistakes.

There is little room for controversy as to the facts unless they are twisted by partisan bias, which should not enter into such a controversy. Both parties are one upon the principle of Canada's duty to provide her share of imperial naval defence. The means is the only debatable subject. What we need to keep most in mind is that, through differences of opinion as to method, Canada is in a humiliating position; behind her sister Dominions. In 1909 Parliament unanimously—both parties voting as a unit—adopted the policy of a Canadian navy, to be built in Canada, as Mr. Borden—now Sir Robert Borden—put it, "of our own material, of our own resources, and by the skill of our own workmen." In obedience to this unanimous mandate, the Laurier government, at the first opportunity, introduced a bill providing such a naval force as had been agreed upon. The Opposition instead of adhering to the policy for which they had solidly voted a year before, took the ground that there was an "emergency" that demanded action more "speedily" to adopt Mr. Borden's amending phraseology, than it was thought to be possible otherwise; and the policy of contribution of Canadian money to build Dreadnoughts in Britain became an alternative policy. The Naval Bill, providing for a Canadian navy passed into law and the Government called for tenders for just such ships as the Australian Sydney, which has shown us what kind of ships are most useful as a dominion navy acting, automatically, as a part of the Royal navy. The Laurier government was forced to the country on the Reciprocity issue, and had not time to act upon the tenders that had been received, even if it had been proper for a government whose life was uncertain, to take such a momentous action. The government was defeated and Mr. Borden came into power in October, 1911. He did not sign the contracts, as the law permitted him to sign contracts that could have been based on the tenders he found awaiting him. If he had done so in October, 1911, Canada could have had two or three cruisers like the "Sydney" in addition to the "Niobe," 5,000 tons heavier, with ten more six-inch guns than the Sydney. Instead of acting "speedily" as Mr. Borden amended the naval resolution of 1909, he did nothing at all to act upon the "emergency," upon which his change of policy was based, for one whole year—not till 1912, when he announced his contribution policy to meet an emergency that had had a year added to its life. The result has been that Canada entered the war with only the dismantled "Niobe" and the "Rainbow" as her fleet of war vessels.

Whoever was to blame is not now the great question. What to do in the future; what naval policy to adopt, is the question. We might come to some definite agreement as to future action. Already a proposal is suggested, to adopt the plan once favoured by Winston Churchill, that the home navy might look after the North Sea, and the Dominions—Canada, Australia and New Zealand—might unite to maintain a strong Pacific fleet, by each providing a Dominion navy. We should let by-gones be by-gones, should take warning from the evil that has come from partizanship in naval matters. Squabbles to fix the blame for past inaction won't do a "blamed" bit of good. We should unite to do something, and the form of that something is perhaps, distinctly revealed by recent developments. If the Australian policy is not the best; it is at least better than Canada's policy of doing nothing.

STEADY!

We must keep cool—remain steady. There is not the slightest occasion for panic, either in relation to the progress of the war or in regard to our own home safety. Major-Gen. the Hon. Sam Hughes, our Minister of War, may not have a very powerful steadying influence. He seems to be erratic especially in the use of the mother tongue, but to give him credit he does things, and sometimes talks to the point. Speaking in Toronto, he condemned, with quite unnecessary rudeness, the recent mobilization of troops there as "one of the worst military tactics of which he had ever heard." In the course of his speech, the War Minister referred to the German invasion scare—

> "I was surprised to find in Toronto a panicky feeling abroad last Sunday over a suspected German invasion from the States. I'd like to see abroad a spirit that would like to see them come."

This was well said. There was the right pith in the General's desire "to see a spirit abroad that would like to see them come." He went on talking more sense. He said that "we must be cool"; that "we must not entertain such notions about the States, a nation on the whole as loyal to the British Empire as those within the Empire." This was well said, for perhaps it is practically true; the two Sams must know each other. The further statement was also wise; "that this panicky feeling must be quelled; we must lose our fears of a few thousand Germans sneaking over the border with rifles in their pantlegs." We are a little too much prone to catch scares. There seems to be more danger of our being captured by panic than by German raiders from the United States. Uncle Sam, who has showed himself a good old scout, won't permit a breach of the neutrality he has so far fairly maintained. Our people must not give too much room to rumours. The other day we had a story sneaking through the city that a big force of Germans had crossed into Canada at Bridgeburg. Scared citizens whispered to each other; women discussed the yarn over the 'phone; citizens came to the newspaper offices to find out if anything had been heard of the invasion, and seemed quite indignant that the news editor had not received despatches confirming the rumour. We must, as General Sam says, "keep cool." We have too true gruesome news from the front, and we shall have more, to worry ourselves over rumours. We have too much stern work to do to keep business going "as usual." We have to do a good deal to cover the wounds of war—to provide for the suffering caused by the war. We must get ourselves together in an energetic effort to make good the slogan—

$20,000 FOR THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

HUGHES AND LESSARD.

Is Sir Robert Borden to continue the maintenance of a respectful silence while Major-General Sam Hughes goes on talking? It is time the Minister of Militia was taught to speak with discretion inside the Government or compelled to exercise his present gifts of speech on the far side of his own resignation.

Was the test mobilization of the Toronto garrison a mistake or a wise and timely action?

The mistake, if the erroneous nature of the mobilization order be established, was due to an excess of zeal. Such a mistake was not deserving of the humiliating rebuke which Gen. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, aimed at Gen. Lessard, who ordered the mobilization.

Gen. Hughes should restrain a tendency to make his associates or subordinates "look small" in the process of making Gen. Hughes "look big." The first element of true executive power is that a man should treat his associates or subordinates as he would like to be treated if positions were reversed, and the man were a subordinate dealing with a superior. Would Gen. Sam Hughes have enjoyed the experience if Sir Robert Borden had seized upon every mistake made by Gen. Hughes and utilized that mistake in public speech as a pretext for direct or indirect references to his subordinate. Gen. Hughes, as humiliating and insulting as the indirect rebuke with which Gen. Hughes belittled his subordinate, the author of the Toronto mobilization order, Gen. Lessard?—Toronto Telegram (Conservative.)

NO LEISURE TO PARADE.

(Boston Post)

From present indications it would seem that the naval display at the formal opening of the Panama Canal will be confined to American vessels, as nearly all the warships of other nations are apparently much occupied. There is no question but even under these circumstances there will be a worthy exhibition, but it would have been much pleasanter to have the neighbours present at our canal warming.

The Newspaper Controversy Re The Canadian Naval Question

The Toronto News admits with cynical satisfaction that it was glad to secure the support of Bourassa in 1911 to pull down Laurier. It knows that the issue raised in Quebec by the Nationalist leader, whom it now declares to be a traitor, was not Reciprocity, but the proposal of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Liberal party to build a squadron of fast cruisers and destroyers for the defence of Canada's coasts and commerce. The News in 1911 was prepared to see the movement for naval defence frustrated if thereby Canadians could be prevented from trading more freely with their neighbours across the border.

Now it proceeds from misrepresentation to downright falsehood, and tries to make its subscribers believe that the Liberals were only pretending when when they took the initial steps for Canada's naval defence in the face of Bourassa's violent opposition in Quebec and the jeers of the Conservatives of Ontario at Laurier's "tin-pot" navy. "The difference between the position of Canada and Australia," The News tells its trusting leaders, "is clear. When the naval crisis developed in February, 1909, the Australian Government proceeded to build ships, and, as The Globe admits, the original Bristol was launched in 1910. The Laurier Government could have acted with similar promptitude. Why did it not do so? It was in power for fully thirty months after the Australian Government had taken definite action, and the most it did during that time was to call for tenders, which were received on May 1st, 1911, and forthwith pigeon-holed. Finally it went out of power with its own alleged policy inoperative."

The inference here is that the Australian Government proceeded to build ships of the Bristol class immediately after 1909, and that the original Bristol launched in 1910 was one of them. It may be that The News is deceiving its readers because it does not itself know the facts. Yet the form of the sentence, "the Australian Government proceeded to build ships, and, as The Globe admits, the original Bristol was launched in 1910." indicates craft rather than ignorance. Without saying so explicitly, The News conveys the idea to its readers that the "original Bristol" was built for the Commonwealth of Australia between 1909 and 1910. Why, therefore, did not the Laurier Government act with similar promptitude?

The paragraph is grotesquely false. The original Bristol was built for the British Government. The first Australian cruiser of the improved Bristol type was laid down for the Australian Government on February 11, 1911, less than three months before the Laurier Government opened the tenders for similar vessels. The first Australian ship of the Bristol type was the cruiser Sydney, which recently sank the Emden and won fame for the Commonwealth navy. It was not launched till August 29, 1912, and was not ready for sea till early in 1913. When the Borden Government came into power early in October, 1911, it found the tenders for four cruisers like the Sydney awaiting action. Instead of either accepting them or formulating at once an alternative power of a larger sort, the Borden Government took no practical measures either to provide for Canada's defence on the sea or to strengthen the British navy from October, 1911, to December, 1912. If the Government believed, as The News now pretends, that the fate of the Empire depended on prompt action, what shall we say of the folly and recklessness of men who drifted along for fourteen months doing nothing to make preparations for the coming storm? It was not till December 9, 1912 that Mr. Borden made the announcement to the Commons of the desire of the Government that $35,000,000 should be devoted for the construction of three Dreadnoughts to add to the British fleet. Had work been begun on these ships as soon as contracts could have been let they would still be unfinished and could take no part in the guarding of the North Sea. If Laurier is to be blamed for holding over the tenders for cruisers almost five months in the summer of 1911, what measure of censure shall be meted out to Borden for doing nothing all through 1912 toward meeting the emergency we are now told existed? Had Borden even signed the contracts for cruisers that awaited his action in October, 1911, the result would have greatly strengthened the Empire in a type of ship of which the Admiralty is admittedly short, and The News would not now find it necessary to distort and falsify the record. Its readers have been led to believe that Australia launched a cruiser of the Bristol type in 1910, where as the keel of the first Australian light cruiser was not laaid until February, 1911. Misrepresentation becomes falsehood when the facts are so perverted. — The Globe.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

HARD TO PICK THE WINNERS IN SATURDAY'S SUDDEN DEATH GAMES

Toronto Star: It is hard t predict the results of Saturday's play-offs. In spite of the fact that 'Varsity won the toss and has McGill on the home grounds, the Blue and White team has a battle on its hands. True enough, they beat McGill here a week ago, and should have beaten them farther off, but they used chance-taking plays when "safety first" should have been the slogan. I nother words, they were trying for touchdowns when nine single points should have been gathered in. They had the game won, and should not have given McGill any chance to intercept a long pass and break away for a touch, which would have given them the edge and perhaps lost 'Varsity the game and championship.

A lot of good Rugby critics around town, who back their opinions and who wagered on 'Varsity in the last game, are switching allegiance this time. Thew saw the game, and figure that if they ever came together again that Shag's men would win. On the other hand, other critics equally as good say that 'Varsity will beat McGill farther off this Saturday. There is one thing: Varsity's team is in good shape for Saturday's conflict. They have been practicing hard and faithfully for two weeks, and have the advantage of fair ground while McGill's men are toiling on grounds covered with snow and ice. They will be at a disadvantage on clear grounds. One wager of $600 even was laid at the Prince George to-day. "Chappy" Gordon handled the Toronto money.

If Argos can plug the hole at middle wing left by "Babe" Burkart's injury, they should beat Tigers right in Hamilton. Tigers are a jungle, but at that Argos have handed them a couple of trouncings there in recent years. The Bengals are strengthening up along the wing line, and will likely spend most of their time battering away along the wing, because behind the line it looks as if Argos have a little on the Tiger back field. The wing line had it on Tigers in Hamilton the day they turned the tables there, but Tigers are stronger now with Rajah Wigle and Wren available for line plunging, and the famous Bob Isbister to cover "Gad" Murphy. However, if "Dutch" Hauther can be persuaded to come to the rescue again and plug up the hole, there is no reason why the Scullers should not repeat. At any rate, a good crowd of Toronto fans are going up to Hamilton expecting to see a battle royal and hoping for another chance to gloat over Hamilton's discomfiture.

There is one thing, it will be a tight, hard game, and it should be clean, too. The teams are too evenly matched for either side to risk weakening the line up by inviting penalties for dirty play. In Percy Roberts, the umpire, the Big Four has selected the keenest man on rough play who has worked on a gridiron this season, and he is fearless in rendering his decisions. Eddie Phillips, who will referee, is just as game as Roberts, and he has this year drawn a close line on illegal interference play, which has been the bane of contention so often in former years. Phillips calls anything that looks like interference, and he is consistent in his rulings. He will not take any back talk from the players on the field or on the bench, either. Between the two of them the Big Four play-off should be conducted to a satisfactory conclusion.

CHIEF CENSOR ON DELAYING CABLING FOOTBALL RESULTS

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The London office of the Canadian Associated Press is in receipt of numerous complaints from Canadian clients re delay in cabled results of Saturday league football games. A request for better service was consequently addressed to the office of the chief censor, and in due course the following reply was received: "The chief censor directs me to state that everything possible will be done to avoid delay in dealing with your Saturday football cables, but he is sure that you will recognise that at a time like the present many subjects must be looked upon as more important than football results. (Signed) Arthur Brown, major."

C.G.E. ENGINEERS BEAT THE BELMONT CLUB

In an interesting match in the Y.M.C.A. Bowling League last night, the C.G.E. Engineers won three straight games from the Belmont Club. One of the latter was absent, and, in accordance with the League rules, 100 points for each game were credited to the absentee. Langley of the Engineers did not roll the last game, and the same rule was applied in his case. Bishop, of the Engineers, had the highest score for the night with 489, while he also had the highest single game, rolling 195 in the last game. The following were the scores:

OLD COUNTRY FOOTBALL NOTES

Gillingham have signed on two clever young forwards in Charles Carrick and "Doctor" Preston, both from Tunbridge Wells Rangers. They are attached to the Kent (Fortress) Royal Engineers, whose headquarters are at Gillingham.

Two well-known South Wales Rugby footballers, Ponsford of Abercravon, and Ben Beynon, Swansea, but side half, have been "converted" to soccer through their Rugby clubs having cancelled their fixtures. Ponsford is doing well for Mid-Rhondda, whilst Beynon plays centre forward for Swansea Town's Welsh League team, and scored two goals in his first match.

Manchester City's outside right, Hoad, has been operated upon at the Manchester Royal Infirmary for appendicitis. Hoad played so late as Saturday last in the match at Hyde Road, and indeed, no signs of disease or illness were noticed by him until Sunday about noon, when he suddenly became ill.

Patrons of Bradford City are eagerly awaiting the recovery from an injury, received in an ordinry match at South Shields, of James Marshall, for it is hoped that this product of Scotland, with his dash and great pace, will solve the centre forward problem, which has given the club so much anxiety this season, and almost certainly lost them more than one valuable point.

Nottingham Forest have been prospecting in Irish League circles. Their immediate want is a good right or left back. There are several answering to that description, but the price desired is far beyond what the Foresters will pay, so there is no chance of immediate business.

Jack Wright, the Cliftonville Irish international half-back who is with his regiment, the North Irish Horse, at the front, has come through several engagements without mishap. His friends are organising a money testimonial to him on his safe return. His club have given $125 thereto, so it should be something substantial.

Ernest Molyneaux, a promising half-back of St. Helens, who has assisted Heywood United for two seasons, has signed on for Norwich.

In the first division of the English League, Charles Wallace, of Aston Villa, Waterall of Notts County, Banks of Liverpool, George Hunter of Manchester United, and Harold Halse of Chelsea each scored in the games of October 21 — and this is what they have never done before since September dawned.

Scottish football is the poorer for the loss of Mr. A. M. Ballantine, a prominent Third Lanark official, whose death took place last week-end. The Angel of Death has paid three rapid visits to the homes of Scottish football personages. A week or two ago Mr. Grant, whose name will always be associated with Celtic, passed into the Great Beyond. A few days later Mr. Reid, the president of Partick Thistle, was taken away, and now Mr. Ballantine has been summoned. Mr. Ballantine's funeral which took place last Tuesday, was largely attended by football officials. Besides all directors and several ex-directors of Third Lanark, representatives of Queen's Park, Partick Thistle, Kilmarnock, and St. Mirren, and Mr. McAndrew, secretary of the Scottish League, paid a last tribute. Among the many wreaths were those sent by the Glasgow F. A. and Scottish League. Mr. Ballantine was possessed of a genial presence, which will be missed in many quarters, but nowhere more than at Chatkin Park.

GOLF.

The anual meeting of the shareholders of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club will be held on Saturday, Nov. 21st, at 8 p.m. at the Bank of Montreal Chambers.

PELLETIER GOES TO BENCH.

Ex-Postmaster-General Now Judge of Superior Court of Quebec.

OTTAWA, Nov. 19. — Hon. L. P. Pelletier, former Postmaster-General, was yesterday appointed a Judge of the Superior Court of Quebec in place of Justice Delorimer of Montreal, who has resigned. The order-in-council was passed yesterday morning.

Mr. Pelletier, who was seriously ill recently and compelled to give up his arduous duties as Postmaster-General, is now greatly improved, following a sojourn in Mount Clemens, Michigan. He is at present in Atlantic City.

Judge Pelletier is a lawyer of eminent standing at the bar of Quebec. He replaces a Montreal judge and presumably will reside in that city in place of the Quebec division of the Superior Court.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Assertions that exportable bids already reduced the available wheat supply in the United States to within about 1,000,000 bushels of the total a year ago, had much to do today with giving prices a decided lift. The market closed firm at 7-8c to 1c above last night. Corn gained ½c to 2-3c net, and oats 2-3c to ¾c. In provisions the outcome was 5c to 25c decline.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 18.—The wheat market was erratic during the early hours of today. Wheat prices opened unchanged to ⅛c higher, easing off shortly after to a fraction lower than Tuesday's close, and before noon rallying to high points again. The volume of trading was moderate. During the early part of the day no new sales for export could be located. Prices held steady until the close, which was ⅝c to ¾c higher for wheat, oats ¼c to ⅝c higher, and flax 1½c to 1⅝c higher.

The cash demand was generally good for all grades of wheat, altho it was somewhat erratic. Certain times of the day there was a keen demand, at others it was slow. Exporters were buying fair quantities, while offerings were limited. Other grains were in fair demand.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Nov. 18.—The improved demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat noted yesterday was renewed again today, and as the prices bid in some cases showed a further advance of 3d to 4d per quarter sales of a few loads were made but business on the whole is quiet on account of the limited amount of ocean grain room available from all ports.

The highest rate paid for a full cargo of grain for shipment from this port has been 7s per quarter, which is equivalent to 21c per bushel. There was no change in the condition of the local market for coarse grains, prices being unchanged with a steady trade passing in some lines.

Demand for butter shows no improvement, but there is a fair enquiry for cheese. Eggs are firm under a good demand.

CATTLE MARKETS

Choice feeders at $6.25 to $6.50; good feeders at $6 to $6.25; medium steers at $5.25 to $5.50; stockers at $4 to $5.

Milkers and Springers.

The receipts of milkers and springers were moderate, and prices were steady at $55 to $95, the bulk going between $70 and $85 each. Backward springers are not wanted.

Veal Calves.

Choice calves, $9 to $10; good calves, $8 to $9; medium, $6.50 to $7.50; common, $5 to $6, and inferior eastern grass calves at $3 to $4.50.

Hogs.

Selects fed and watered sold at $7.90; weighed off cars at $8.15, and $7.50 f.o.b. cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Nov. 18.—At the C. P. R. live stock market there was no actual change in the condition of the market for butchers' cattle today, the feeling being steady owing to the fact that the offerings of such were not in excess of the requirements. There were no choice steers on the market, but as the weather was cold and favorable for keeping stock, the demand for the lower grades of cattle was fair and a few good steers sold at $7, fair at $6.50 to $6.75, medium at $6 to $6.25 and common at $5 to $5.50, while butchers' cows brought from $4 to $6 and bulls from $4.75 to $5 per cwt.

The tone of the market for small meats remains firm owing to the somewhat limited supply coming forward, for which there is good demand, and a fairly active trade was done, with sales of Ontario lambs at Quebec at $7 to $7.50 per cwt., while ewe sheep changed hands at $4.75 to $5, and bucks and culls at $4 to $4.50 per cwt. The demand for calves was good and sales were made at $9 to $10 each, as to size and quality. The tone of the market for hogs was firm, with a good demand for all offerings and sales of selected lots were made at $8.40 to $8.60 per cwt., weighed off cars.

MOSCOW TREATS WOUNDED AS IF ALL WERE KINGS

Great City in the Heart of Russia is Headquarters for Injured Soldiers —Residences and Even Railway Sheds Are Turned Into Hospitals

MOSCOW, Oct. 20.—There is no such simple and cheerful and open-hearted and gossipy city in all Europe as Moscow. It has the qualities that enable it to yield unreservedly to a great impulse whenever the moment calls. Russian downrightness is at its strongest here.

Moscow is the heart of Russia. And the heart of the city has gone out wholly to the army. The battles are fought far away on the frontier, but every day trains loaded with wounded come rolling in from the frontier, and Moscow receives them as a mother receives her children.

In almost every street you see the sign of the Red Cross, with the inscription "Home for Sick and Wounded Warriors." Under the management of the Moscow City Council there are 31,000 beds for the wounded, of which at the time of writing 18,500 are occupied. About seven thousand convalescent men are lodged in the homes of Moscow citizens. The War Office has provided in the city accommodation for 13,000, and on the contributions of private individuals 10,000 beds are maintained. Half the elementary schools are used as hospitals, and in the remaining half the children are taught in two shifts.

Moscow is the chief distribution centre for the wounded. The less serious cases are dealt with at the hospital near the station, and at the first opportunity are sent on further into the interior. The severely wounded are left in Moscow.

All these figures were interesting enough, but I was anxious to see the work done, and Mr. Chelnokoff, one of the Moscow deputies, kindly put me in charge of a municipal surgeon, Dr. Nikolsky, who took me on a round to various types of hospital. The first we came to was a small home, maintained by the parents of the pupils of a well known private school. A quaint old Moscow house, with endless nooks and crannies and abrupt staircases—the kind of house described in Tolstoi's novels — had been turned into a clean, bright hospital, in which about thirty soldiers were living like princes under the charge of a woman doctor and a large staff of nurses.

A big, light, airy school, which I next saw, was less homelike, but entirely adequate for the care of 180 soldiers who reposed here, some reading, some playing the balalaika.

The most curious hospital I saw was a row of new tramway sheds, where a floor had been laid over the rails and the pits from which the cars are cleaned. In long halls, lighted from the roof, stood line upon line of beds. Everything needful was here — fine bathrooms, perfectly equipped operating and bandaging rooms, kitchens and store rooms. Some of the sheds which lie close to the railway are to be used as temporary resting spots for those of the slightly wounded who are to be sent on to hospitals in the province. A branch line brings the trains up to the very door.

Then we visited the Soldatenkoff Hospital, one of the most up-to-date hospitals in Europe, and certainly the best in Moscow. The men who lay here were severely wounded, but they were living in almost palatial splendour.

Moscow knows better than any other city the vast sweep of a great war. Exactly 103 years ago Napoleon rode grimly out of the ruins of the city. The railway by which I travelled from Warsaw to Moscow followed for some distance the route of Napoleon's advance and retreat. At wayside stations, under a leaden sky, and in a bitterly cold wind, stood peasant women in sheepskins bidding farewells to sons and brothers, who were going off to the front. Near some of the stations hospitals have been established, and convalescent soldiers were walking about with their arms in slings. When in the morning we crossed the Beresina, near Minsk, a blizzard was raging, and fields and forests were wrapped in snow. The Russian winter, that brought ruin to Napoleon, has set in early this fateful year.

INDIANS ARE IN AFRICA

Casualties in Eastern Territory Heavy—Botha Again Victorious.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—In South Africa Gen. Louis Botha, commander-in-chief of the defence forces, reports the breaking up of additional rebel commandos and the capture of guns, ammunition and provisions.

The Earl of Crewe disclosed in the House of Lords yesterday that in East Africa the Indian troops are being employed against the Germans. That there has been heavy fighting is shown by the fact that the British casualties to date total 900.

Beyer's Force Routed.

CAPE TOWN, Nov. 19—Following a running fight west of Bellvuitaine in which four rebels were killed, 20 wounded, and 100 captured, Gen. Beyers and 1,500 rebels are in full retreat before the loyalists. The loyalists pursued the rebels until the former's horses gave out and they were forced to abandon the chase.

German Base Wrecked.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—A Rotterdam despatch to The Daily Mail says:—

"The British fleet received information Monday, which led them to carry out a vigorous bombardment at Knocke and Zeebrugge on the Belgian coast. The Solvay Company's works, on the Bruges Ship Canal, which are being used as a base for German military trains, was wrecked. A train of five cars, filled with soldiers, was struck by a shell, took fire and was destroyed. Much damage was done to the German stores and supplies."

Defied the Life Screens.

CHICAGO, Nov. 19. — Life nets, placed in the rotunda of the Chamber of Commerce building in an attempt to discourage suicides, proved unavailing yesterday.

A well-dressed man about 50 years of age jumped from the fourteenth floor, plunged through the screen on the eighth floor and his lifeless body was entangled in the broken strands of the third floor screen. There the crushed form hung swaying until firemen with ladders took it down.

FOUR HUNDRED PRISONERS INTERNED

In Fort Henry, Kingston—Germans Dislike the Turks.

KINGSTON, Nov. 19.— There are now just an even four hundred prisoners of war at Fort Henry, Kingston. As a result of the large number the guard has again been increased, as it is just like guarding a whuuge. It is understood that the Germans in the fort do not take very well to the Turks, who were recently brought here from Brantford. There has been no trouble between the two classes of prisoners, but from remarks passed by the Germans it is known that they do not like their war allies. However, they do not have to mix at the fort. The Germans occupy the quarters in the upper part of the fort and the Turks the lower part. There has been no serious illness among the prisoners.

Electrical machinery has been invented to reset the pins in bowling alleys.

EVIDENCE IS BEING COLLECTED

An Echo of the Romaine St. Sewer—Street Paving Finished for This Year.

At last night's meeting of the Board of Works Bailey and Gleeson reported the completion of the street paving contract with exception of Charlotte street. This could not be undertaken this year owing to the lateness of the season. The firm asked for payment of the amount of contract price agreeing to give a suitable bond in return, until the contract was fulfilled.

Alderman Duncan stated that it was the fault of the Council, that the company was unable to start the work earlier in the year. The matter will be referred to the City Solicitor for a report.

"A Heritage."

City Solicitor Gordon reported that the case of Conroy and Bogue was very much involved and that it would require several weeks to get it down to trial. It is alleged that Conroy and Bogue owe the city approximately $5,000. Bogue, it is stated, was a sub-contractor to Conroy, who undertook the work of constructing the Romaine street sewer.

City Engineer Parsons contended that some of the information required was not available in the Engineering Department, and that Chipman and Pomery, consulting engineers of Toronto, would have to be appealed to. The last named firm, which was employed in an engineering capacity, is demanding payment of an account, while the city is withholding on account of alleged defective work.

The matter will be taken up at a subsequent meeting.

"When are we going to dispose of this heritage?" enquired Alderman Green.

The matter has been before the Council upwards of two years.

LABOUR MEN SAY THEY ARE GOING OUT FOR VARIOUS CIVIC VACANCIES

The Trades and Labour Council boiled the civic pot last night. On the eve of December, talk of election possibilities becomes more or less general, and already the Labour Men are lokoing around for candidates. Any action they may take is more or less held up by the suspended activities among the veterans who are understood to be preparing for the mayoralty race. At last night's meeting Mr. J. J. Hartley was again asked to accept the candidature of the Labour men for the mayoralty, but he declined to commit himself. However, it is felt that there is plenty of time for action, and in the meantime the field will be closely scanned.

Want Aldermen Too.

The Labour Council has the ambition of presenting a representative in every ward for the aldermanic skirmishes. A committee has been named to consider this proposal and to make a silent search for Union men strong enough to put up a good fight.

They also have their eyes out for a position on the Utilities' Commission, but this topic did not pass the discussion phase. It is realized that members capable of qualifying for the different positions are not numerous, but it is reported that a strong effort will be made to line up candidates wherever possible.

It was decided to write the Minister of Militia and the Minister of Labour, requesting that all contracts let by the Government have the fair wage clause attached. There is also a proposal to secure the visit of a factory inspector. Nothing was done with the letter suggestion.

SERVIAN TELLS EXPERIENCE ON BATTLE FIELD

Celebrated Student Injured in Encounter With a Turk—Went Days Without Food

ROME, Nov. 16.—Captain Wukitchovitch received a letter from a brother officer but no details of fighting were permitted.

"There is no post. All letters must be sent by courier," he said. "What letters we do get now must come by way of Bulgaria. We are completely cut off from facts and I long to hear news direct from my poor bleeding Servia I left so recently."

The personal story of Captain Wukitchovitch is worth the telling because it is the story of Servia. In this war as in others, rank and distinction are unknown. All have entered the fight against the enemy.

The son of a professor, this young mon of twenty-five, graduated with honours from the University of Geneva. He speaks French, Italian, German and English, in addition to the Slavic tongue. As a boy he won scholarships which gained his way to the university. He was the fourth man to take a degree in sociology at the Geneva University. Just as he was ready to launch upon a diplomatic career war was declared against the Turk and he hastened to his post among the Alpine Reserves. The almost helpless left hand is evidence of his fighting against the Ottoman.

"For four days and nights I was without food," he said, speaking of the battle of Komonove with the accepted stoicism which comes with the power to endure.

"In an encounter with a Turk I had wounded my hand which was almost severed by his attack upon me with a schmitar. A companion in arms shot him just as he was about to split my skull. I was senseless on the battlefield. My hand was severed, my leg was wounded but I dragged myself for three days toward the hospital. My hand is almost useless, as you see, but I can still fight."

"In this war God has put us among good company," he continued. "Even though we are losing the men of our kingdom. And there is no doubt of our victory. How proud we are that our little country finds itself allied with Great Britain, Russia and France. How we suffer to think that helpless Belgium, the most peaceful, industrious of nations, has been sacrificed so cruelly. We weep for Louvain, for Liege, as we weep for ourselves.

Wukitchovitch paused to speak once more of his own career, for battles have interrupted his advancement ever since his ambition was first launched toward diplomacy. After his first recovery he was sent to Rome as attache at the legation. Then came the second Balkan war and once more he went to the aid of his country. It was after the second war that Wukitchovitch returned a wreck from exhaustion, but in spite of this he left his long cherished post, that of first secretary of the embassy at Sofia to go for the third time to war:

"But then it was a fight in a great war," he said fervently. "With my last breath I would fight the enemy who is trying to mould the whole world to his liking. But when the end of the war comes—and it is far off I am afraid, we will see the suppression of this universal lust for conquest."

Wukitchovitch the spirit of Servia—is the only man mentioned in the recent book of the Balkan war—just published in Bulgaria.

LEN WILLIAMS LED "E" COMPANY

Did Best Shooting in Target Practice at Kingston.

KINGSTON, Nov. 18.—The new recreation hall of the right half battalion is a credit to the officers and men who are responsible for its existence as a source of amusement, entertainment and comfort to the soldiers. The interior of the building has been remodelled, a gallery erected, heating installed, a dry canteen and refreshment booth arranged for the convenience of the men; in fact the place has been made as comfortable and attractive as possible. A piano has been placed on the platform and from the talent exhibited at last night's concert it is to be expected that some excellent music will be heard in the hall in the future. There is no doubt that the soldiers will spend many pleasant evenings there during the coming winter months.

Orders have been issued prohibiting the bringing of liquor into the barracks of the 21st Battalion. Any one disobeying these orders will be dealt with severely.

Entertainment committees have been organized in each half battalion to arrange entertainments which will be held as often as is possible for the men. The committees will be formed as follows; Right half battalion, Major Bennett, Capt. Jones, and Capt. Caldwell: left half battalion, Major McLean, Capt. Gray, and Capt. Scott.

Lieut. Black, Ottawa, of the 21st Battalion, is a noted athlete. Lieut. Black, who is one of the best swimmers in the Dominion, is champion heavyweight boxer and wrestler of Ottawa, and is famous as a football player.

The following are the results of Monday's target practice, giving the best shot of each company: "A" Company, Pte. J. Esford; "B" Company, Pte. Geo. Wright; "C" Company, Pte. E. C. Weston; "D" Company, Pte. D. Anderson; "E" Company, Pte. L. Williams; "F" Company, Sgt. C. W. Terry; "G" Company, Pte. G. C. Wines; "H" Company, Pte. G. Ralph Wines; "H" Company, Pte. G. Ralph. Machine Gun Section, Pte. Redpath; best shot of battalion, Pte. Wines ("G" Company).

Arrangements are being made for the holding of a boxing, wrestling and fencing tournament in the recreation hall of the right half battalion. There are some noted athletes among the volunteers and some interesting and keenly contested bouts will doubtless be seen before long.

ONE ENDLESS CHAIN.

We have all made sure that the man on the land is at the basis of national wealth. We know that when the farmer has money to buy, the trade-machinery of the country will have its one best source of energy. But the best cellar in the world never made a house. And unless the hundreds of thousands of industrial workers in Canada have wages to buy with, there's no use expecting to keep prosperity up. The workers can't buy if they haven't money. They can't get money without work. They can't get work without the factries being kept open. Factories can't be kept open without orders coming in from the millions of people who live in the land where the factories exist. So that it's plainly and irresistibly the self-interested privilege of every man and woman in Canada to advance his own own welfare by spending every dollar possible for things made in Canada, in order to keep this great endless chain in a state of dynamic efficiency. The people have it in their own hands to do it. All it needs is a little quiet and persistent campaign right in a man's own family. And the time to begin it is—Now.

GROUP PHOTO OF THE CHILDREN

It is not too late yet to ensure your child's photograph appearing in the Christmas edition. Only those photographed at the Roy Studio before the first of next month will appear in the group.

BIG NAVAL BATTLE IN THE BALTIC SEA

Heavy and Continuous Firing is Reported From the Island of Gothland.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 16.—A Baltic naval engagement is reported from Visby, on the Island of Gothland. Yesterday afternoon very heavy cannonading was heard on the north and west coast, and it is believed to have been a battle between the Germans an the Russian fleet, which left Helsingorfs two days ago. The firing was apparently of heavy guns and then of broadsides. It lasted for an hour uninterruptedly, and then, after an interval of fifteen minutes, it started again and lasted till late last night. The Swedish ferry services were stopped during the engagement.

watch. Chernikoff says that when they found it was sold Swanston grasped a stove shaker and when both of them jumped on him, beat him over the head with it until his clothes were covered with blood. They then dragged him outside and continued their assault on him there. He did not hit anybody in the scuffle at all. To support his story he showed a wound in the head and all witnesses agreed that he was covered with blood.

On the other hand Lundgren and Swanston say tht they went into the store and were told that the watch was sold. When Swanston learned this he was surprised and asked the Jew why he had sold something that wasn't his. He (Swanston) said he was going to notify the Police, at which statement Chernikoff became very angry and hit Lundgren over the head with a stove shaker. To prevent a second attack Lundgren gave the Hebrew a shove and in falling Chernikoff received the cut on the head. The two then left the store, but Chernikkoff followed them out and again attempted to attack them outside with the shaker.

Mr. Gordon, in the witness box, said that he happened by the store at this time and found Swanston and Chernikoff in a hostile embrace, both with their hands on the stove shaker. This, of course, supports either side, except that with regard to this outside quarrel. Lundgren, in the witness box, said that he did not see Swanston and Chernikoff fighting at all.

John Huxley, clerk in the butcher shop, next door to Chernikoff's, says he saw Lundgren and Chernikoff fighting on the street, whereas both Chernikoff and Lundgren agree that neither of them were fighting together outside.

In short, the evidence upon every important point of the case seems to be most contradictory. Even the independent witnesses only seem to add more confusion to things. The Hebrew's story was supported in every detail by Mrs. Chernikoff, while the two defendants were positive as to their version of the affair.

No one but the counsel for the defence and prosecution seem to be able to tell which evidence should be accepted and which discounted and even they, though appearing confident enough that they are right in their interpretation of the proceedings, take different versions of the affair, so that their attitude does not serve to help solve the matter to any great extent.

Yesterday afternoon Magistrate Dunlop reserved judgment after hearing the evidence and the arguments of the counsel.

A Pennsylvania sportsman has invented a device which fits on an electric torch and is designed to shoot gun barrel for night shooting.

Where Help Is Oft Times Needed

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—At this time, when there is so much talk of relieving distress, one is reminded of how little, after all, it takes to bring relief in some quarters. I knew a case, some years ago, of a country clergyman's wife who called to see a friend. On her departure the friend placed a basket of green cucumbers in the back of the buggy. Some time afterwards she told her friend: "How I wished when I went home and found your basket, it had contained a roll of bread, instead of cucumbers, as we had nothing to eat in the house. Why, her friend said, I never knew you were in such straits. That's the whole thing in a nutshell. We "Christians" take too much for granted and subscribe to big funds, forgetting that Christ said, "The poor you have with you always," and very often it is the fellow 'next door' who is in moderate circumstances, who may be the most needy, when a small loan would "help a lame dog over the stile" and restore perhaps self-respect to an honest fellow to use the words of the old son, "who is pulling hard against the stream."

It is always safer to give something substantial rather than a "basket of green stuff.

Yours truly,
A Well Wisher.

THE "FASCINATING COUNTESS."

The Imperial Musical Comedy Company presented the "Fascinating Countess" to a large audience at the Grand Opera House last night. The play was well staged and pleased the house which encored some of the musical specialties many times. The male trio particularly, as on previous nights, was given a very hearty reception and the comedy that ran all through the production was responsible for the hearty amusement of the audience from the time the curtain rose to the singing of "God Save the King." Bayard and Geary gave an interesting demonstration of the Maxixe, and Nelson Adair pleased the audience with his double voice renditions. An especially good bill is promised for to-night's performance.

German Infantry Attacks Show Little Result

Effect of German Infantry Charges in Flanders is That Enemy is Quickly Forced to Give Up New Positions—Bombardment of Earlier Battle Repeated on a Smaller Scale.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The latest official communications recording the operations on the western battlefields, are much the same as those of preceding days. There has been fighting virtually all along the front, but without appreciable change in the situation.

From the coast of Flanders to the River Lys on the Franco-Belgian border, much of which has been flooded by the allies to hinder the German attacks, there has been a repetition, on a somewhat smaller scale of the bombardment which the invaders invariably resort to in the hope of breaking down the allies' resistance before infantry attacks, and in isolated spots, attacks in force, but according to the French and British reports, all these have been repulsed.

The Anglo-French forces, which have been holding the territory around Ypres, have again been subjected to German attacks, fresh German troops attempting what the Prussian Guards a few days previously had failed to do—force the allies out of their trenches.

As was the case with Prussian Guards the Germans who made the latest effort appear again to have taken the first line of trenches, but like the Guards, found themselves on the flanks and were compelled to give back the ground gained after holding it for a short time.

Both sides, as shown by the casualty lists of the officers, are losing heavily in the fighting, but the Germans, being on the offensive and being so often enfiladed after success was so nearly in their hands, are said to have suffered enormously.

The French Zouaves, who have frequently distinguished themselves by dashing charges, have again been utilized to dislodge the Germans from a position near Birschoote, over which there has been much fighting, and, according to the French communication, have again been successful.

These incidents are just a sample of what has been occurring in Northern France, along the Aisne Valley, around Rheims, in the Argonne forest and on the banks of the River Meuse. First the one, and then the other, gains an advantage, but when all is told, the general situation remains about as it was.

Reports come from France that the Germans are preparing to make another attempt to get through to the coast by way of La Bassee, but, like the rumors that they are preparing for a retreat, there is no confirmation of it.

The Amsterdam Telegraaf reports that the Germans lost 2,700 men in the recent fighting at Dixmude. Nieuport is said to be badly damaged by artillery fire.

The legislative and administrative staffs of the Chamber of Deputies will go to Paris to-day, as a prelude to the return of the French Government, which removed to Bordeaux when the approach of the German armies threatened the security of the capital.

Part of the war levy on the Belgians has been distributed among the German soldiers, each receiving about a dollar, according to The Vossische Zeitung.

Transfer of German troops on a large scale from the Russian frontier for a renewal of the fight to capture Calais is reported in a Rotterdam despatch. It is stated that all railway service in Belgium has been shut off, and communication between Holland and Germany closed. The Germans are said to have sent a large number of heavy siege guns from Liege to the region of Arras.

Large numbers of German soldiers are deserting from the posts in the Belgian provinces of Antwerp and Limbourg, and are crossing the border into Holland, says an article in The Amsterdam Telegraaf.

BOARD OF WORKS LET TENDERS FOR SNOW PLOUGHING

It Will Cost $962 to Remove the Snow From Seven Districts —Tenders Were Called For a Second Time.

At last night's meeting of the Board of Works, tenders were let for the removal of snow in seven out of the eight districts that constitute the city. In all, eighteen tenders were received, varying in price from one hundred and ten dollars to six hundred dollars. Following are the successful tenderers:

Contracts Let.

District No. 1—Board of Works Department.
District No. 2—W. J. Stenson...$150
District No. 3—R. Whatman.... 180
District No. 4—R Nichols 135
District No. 5—R. Nichols..... 117
District No. 7—A O'Brien..... 125
District No. 6—A. Carpenter.... 110

Total $962

Will Cost $962.

It will be seen that the work of removing the snow in the seven districts will cost the city $962. This does not include district number one, which is looked after by the Board of Works Department. Mayor Buller suggested that it might be cheaper to do the whole city on the same basis and thereby be in a position to give work to a large army of unemployed. If the snowfall was unusually heavy, the work would cost more than if it was let out at so much for the season. It was a gamble in which either side might lose.

Following is the list of tenders:

District No. 2.

P. Francis $600
E. J. Ferguson 308
R. Whatman 225
W. J. Stenson 159

District No. 3.

E. J. Ferguson 290
W. Millen 200
R. Whatman 180

District No. 4.

N. Harper 160
W. Pink 150
R. Nichols 135

District No. 5.

G. Sexsmith 180
R. Nichols 117

District No. 6.

R. Nichols 130

District No. 7.

J. P. Francis 475
A. O'Brien 125

District No. 8.

D. Revoy 450
J. P. Francis 425
A. Carpenter 110

Were Thrown Out.

The tenders of T. Turkett, Ed. Fraharty, and J. Revoy were thrown out on the grounds that they did not tender the first time that tenders were called. Alderman Duncan stated that the amounts of the first tenders had leaked out, so that it would be unfair to the original tenderers to accept new tenders. The reason that the second lot of tenders were called, is that some of the tenderers did not comply with the specifications when submitting their tenders.

Shot Gun For Home Guards

That's General Hughes' Advice But City of Toronto Refuses to Accept It

TORONTO, Nov. 8.— "You don't need rifles—get a few shotguns," is the advice that Major-General the Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, is said to have given Major-General Lessard, Mayor Hocken, Controller McCarthy, Ald. McBride, and Works Commissioner Harris in regard to the defence of Toronto from possible raids by Germans from across the Border.

The conference was held at the Exhibition grounds, and the point under discussion was the arming of the Home Guard for the defence of the city.

Following this verbal admonition, Major-General Hughes is said to have sent a despatch from Ottawa to the effect that the city should go slow on buying rifles —"shotguns much better."

Mayor Hocken, when asked about the conference and the telegram, refused to talk.

"Well, Mr. Mayor, what do you think of the wisdom of the mobilizing of the local militia, as it was done on Monday?" asked The Star.

"It seemed to me a wise thing to do," said the Mayor. "You cannot tell what use you can make of a system until you try it out. I am not a military man, but I think that was a good move." This is somewhat in contrast with the opinion given publicly by the Minister of Militia last night.

The city is not taking the Minister's advice in the arming of the Home Guard. The controllers take the view that buckshot might be effective in shooting ducks a few yards distant, but that a shotgun would be mightly little use when opposed to a rifle fire at a distance of a thousand yards. Therefore, the Home Guards will have rifles, and will have them within two weeks ,with 400 rounds of ammunition to each man.

Gallant Gurkhas

Fine Feat Near Nieuport—Destruction of German Ammunition Park

BORDEAUX, Nov. 17.—How a company of Gurkhas put ashore by British gunboats near Nieuport destroyed the ammunition park depot of a German battery which was galling our men by fire from a masked position is told by the "Petit Var."

At midnight the company arrived in sight of Slype, one kilometer from the camp surrounding the ammunition park. Six sentinels were posted here. Crouching in the wood hard by, the Gurkhas could make out their figures pacing to and fro with rifles shouldered.

The Indians waited half-an-hour. Presently in the stillness, a sound like the croak of a toad was heard, and at this signal six Gurkhas, each with a knife between his teeth, crawled noiselessly up to the sentinels, who fell without a sound.

The company advanced towards the ammunition, which was now at its mercy. At one o'clock the allied staff, waiting anxiously at Nieuport, saw an immense flame over Slype, followed by the roar of bursting shells and shrapnel. The entire park was blown up. Next day the German battery, deprived of ammunition, had to retreat and leave the road open to the allies.

SHELLING BELGRADE

Austrian Big Guns Pounding Away at Capital of Servia.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The fortifications of the Servians at Belgrade are being bombarded by the Austrians with heavy guns from the hills of Semlin and from monitors on the Danube, says a despatch from Budapest.

The Servian artillery is replying from the Baujicha Hills.

Austrian engineers and sappers are repairing the railways at Semlin to afford protection for their artillery. The railway lines there have been twice destroyed in the present war, once when the Austrians retired from the Servian column that invaded Bosnia, and again by the Servians when they retired before the Austrians and were forced to fall back across the river into their own country again.

A despatch to The Nieuws Fris Presse declares that the Servians retired ten kilometres after the fall of Valievo, in the direction of Kragujevatz, where a new battle was fought.

GIFTS FOR BELGIAN KING.

Truck Load of Presents From Subjects Attests Their Devotion.

HAVRE, France, Nov. 19. — (Via Paris.)—A large motor truck was required to forward to King Albert at his headquarters in Flanders the mail received here for the King on the occasion of his fete. No class of society forget the Belgian ruler on his saint's day, which corresponds to a birthday in Protestant countries.

Picture postcards, containing congratulations and best wishes, were in the majority, but the King's mail contained poems, drawings, paintings and even original musical compositions. Children were heavy contributors, as also were wounded soldiers in the hospitals. All ranks, from the nobility to the peasantry, were represented.

Evidence Is Heard In a Serious Case

Joseph Scott is Charged With Offence Against a Young Girl.

Joseph Scott, who has been remanded several times, charged with a serious offence against a girl under fourteen years of age, came before Magistrate Dumble this morning. Crown Attorney Hatton announced that the Crown was ready to proceed with the prosecution. Mr. G. N. Gordon, counsel for the defence, did not plead nor elect, so the preliminary hearing was proceeded with.

The mother of the young girl against whom the offence is alleged to have been committed, was the first witness for the prosecution. She testified that her daughter would be fourteen years of age on the 20th of this month, and produced a certificate of the registration of birth to support her statement. The certificate had been brought from England, where her daughter was born. She knew the prisoner to see him, but had never spoken to him.

To Mr. Gordon, witness said that she was in Lakefield for three weeks as a domestic, but for the rest of the time had lived at home. Witness and family came from Lakefield in April last. Her daughter, who was a good-sized girl for her age, had never attended school in Peterborough.

"This girl is a little hard to manage?"

"Oh, no."

"She does everything you tell her."

"Yes."

"Without question?"

"Yes."

"Does she go out at nights when you tell her not to "

"No; I never allow her to go out at nights except on special occasions."

"She was at the circus last summer without you?"

"She went with her elder sister."

"When did you first notice her condition?"

"About three weeks ago." [illegible]

Witness said that at first the girl refused to tell her who was guilty of the offence, but when she threatened to bring her up to the Chief she said it was Joseph Scott, the prisoner. As she understood it the offence took place the Sunday afternoon after Washburn's Shows were in the City.

During the week the circus was there the girl spent most of the afternoons and evenings in the Exhibition Grounds.

Dr. Mann, the local physician, gave medical evidence.

The young girl against whom the offence was committed, was the next witness. She identified the prisoner whom she had known ever since coming to Peterborough. She came to this City from Lakefield last April. Last summer she went down the river often with her elder sister to swim. Scott spoke to her whenever he met her, and on Sunday, July 19th, she met him returning from the river, where she had been playing with her brother and sister. She had been at Crawford's Grove, at the end of Park street, and was returning home alone when she met Scott. Crawford's Grove was only about five minutes' walk from her home. Scott was standing on the bridge at the corner of Park and Bradwood Avenue, and when she went to turn home he whistled and beckoned to her. He asked her where she had been and where she was going and then said to her, "Come this way," meaning across the bridge. He gave her a piece of candy. She went with him from the bridge and shortly afterwards the alleged offence took place.

TURKS REALIZE THEIR POSITION

They Are Waking Up to the Fact That Germany Swindled Them.

LONDON, Nov. 19.— A Petrograd despatch to The Post says:—

The situation in Constantinople and other large centres of the Ottoman Empire is reported to be serious.

The Turks were assured that Warsaw had been taken and that the Russian Caucasus would be captured in the first days of the war by a surprise attack, all the troops having been withdrawn to meet the German hosts and the natives of the Caucasus being waiting to welcome the invaders and join in wholesale slaughter of the Armenians.

From the outset of the war Germanic news factories have insisted that the Russian Caucasus was in revolt.

News of Russian victories on the Vistula having reached Constantinople, the inhabitants are reported to be preparing to throw off the yoke of the Young Turks and their German masters.

The incipient plot in Turkey against the Young Turks and the German domination of the army and navy has reached such a state that Dr. Hans Von Miquel, the German Ambassador at Constantinople, is in constant fear of his life, according to a Rome despatch to The London Standard. The Ambassador, who formerly was stationed at Petrograd, daily receives threatening letters.

"A conspiracy," continues the correspondent, "has been discovered for the assassination of Gen. Limas von Sanders—the German officer who reorganized the Turkish army and is now practically its commander, and a number of high Turkish officials. Resentment against Turkey's entrance into the war, which is laid to German designs, grows.

"The prime moved in this revolt against Germany is Chukri Pasha, who defended Adrianople against the allied Balkan states. He is seconded by Field Marshal Fuad Pasha.

PLENTY TO READ.

Canadian Troops Are Deluged With Literature From Britons.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Thirty tons of books, consisting of sixty thousand volumes, have been received at Salisbury for the use of Canadians, and four libraries have been formed in each camp, in charge of the board of chaplains. Periodicals are received by the carload. Major Stacey, divisional chaplain, suggests that the people in Canada should form circles in each township for writing letters to the men from their own districts to keep them posted on home matters. Long letters from lads in camp must not be expected. The work is too strenuous now to permit of them.

NEWS TELEGRAPH SYSTEM

Inaugurated to Serve Cities of Western Canada

The announcement is made this morning that the work of wiring the new territory opened up by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway has now been completed, and a number of young cities in British Columbia are enjoying for the first time a commercial telegraph service with the East.

Winnipeg and Prince Rupert are by this means placed in direct telegraphic touch. The first message carried over the wires was sent by the Mayor of the Pacific Coast city to the Mayor of Winnipeg, and expressed the satisfaction felt in the West at the inauguration of complete telegraphic facilities which are expected to give a new impetus to business.

Mayor Newton's message was as follows:

"His Worship the Mayor,
Winnipeg, Man.

"The City of Prince Rupert, B.C., through me, as Mayor, sends greetings on the inauguration of the Grand Trunk Pacific telegraph service from this city to Winnipeg. Prince Rupert views this connection as the most important step towards more closely binding this province with this northern part of the Dominion, more particularly coming, as it does, at such an important crisis in the history of our Empire, when it is so important that all Canada should unite as a unit.

"S. M. Newton, Mayor."

This message was filed at Prince Rupert at 10.10 a.m., Central time, was received at Winnipeg at 10.15 a.m., Central time, and was delivered to the Mayor at 10.25 a.m.

Mayor Deacon's reply was as follows:

"S. M. Newton, Mayor,
Prince Rupert, B.C.

"The City of Winnipeg heartily reciprocates your kind greetings on the inauguration of the Grand Trunk Pacific telegraph service and trusts that this may lead to the opening of a great volume of new traffic between the Pacific Coast and the Orient and our own city, and that the completion of this new great highway of commerce may lead to the early development, not only of the interior of Northern British Columbia, but to the prosperity of all Canada and to the advantage of the Empire at large.

"T. R. Deacon, Mayor."

This acknowledgment was filed at Winnipeg at 11.03 a.m. and was delivered in Prince Rupert, 1,279 miles distant, twelve minutes later, an indication of the quality of the service given on Canada's new telegraphic system.

WAR BRINGS BLACK FOX PRICES DOWN

Fancy Dividends Must End, Says Wall Street Journal

Canadian visitors who have been in New York recently say that the European war has hurt the fox raising industry of Canada, and especially of Prince Edwrd Island, says The Wall Street Journal. Practically 80 per cent. of these companies pay their dividends, which have ranged from 20 per cent. to 100 per cent., partly in cash and partly in stock. Much of the cash was raised by the sale of shares in subsidiary fox companies, and the war has caused, so they say, an almost complete stoppage of sales of fox stock.

Companies were formed which took options on breeding foxes and the cash to pay for these foxes was to be raised by the sale of stock of the purchasing companies. With sales of stock stopped, the companies have no cash to take up their options, and as a result the price of foxes has declined to nominal. Before the war $14,000 for a pair of foxes was not an unusual price, but now it is said that the nominal prices on the same animals are around $7,000 or $8,000.

The war has put an end to fancy prices, and in the future fox ranches will have to go to raising foxes for their pelts, and put to sell at high prices for breeding purposes. That this will mean also a stoppage of fancy dividends is practically certain.

Funeral of Lord Roberts

Simple Service is Held at Late Lord Roberts' Estate.

ASCOT, Eng., Nov. 19.—Covered with the Union Jack and with his khaki hat and sword upon it, the coffin containing the body of Field Marshal Lord Roberts of Kandahar, now lies in the small room in his modest residence here, in which the great soldier was wont to conduct family prayer and in which there is a small altar and a crucifix.

The coffin arrived from Folkestone by a special train yesterday afternoon. The ceremony which followed was of a most simple description. The coffin was borne by employes of the late field marshal's estate to his house, where a brief service, attended by Lady Roberts and her daughters and a few privileged friends, was conducted by the rector of Ascot.

Was Old Man Murdered?

WHITBY, Nov. 19. — No further light has been thrown on the circumstances attending the death of Geo. Hollinger, the Cherrywood farmer, whose body was found tied with a heavy stone in a well on his farm on Friday afternoon.

Although deceased was of an eccentric disposition, the neighbors scout the idea of suicide, and assert their conviction that Hollinger was foully done to death for mercenary motives.

WILLIAM JOHNSON SERIOUSLY INJURED

His right arm was cut off above the elbow, the toes of one foot crushed, his head badly cut, and his back injured o an extent yet unknown. He was taken to the Huycke House at Tweed, whom physicians and nurses are doing all in their power to save his life, but little hope is held out for his recovery.

WEDDING BELLS

JOHNSTON—DOWNER.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Downer, Auburn, on Wednesday afternoon, when their third eldest daughter, Alice Matilda, was united in marriage to Mr. Ernest John Johnston, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Johnston, Chandos. The ceremony was performed under an arch by the Rev. R. G. Peever, of George Street Methodist church. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a gown of white embroidered point de'sprit made in teared effect, prettily trimmed with pale blue satin folds, and wore the usual bridal veil with wreath of lilies of the valley and carried a bouquet of white carnations.

The bridesmaid, Miss Florence Downer, sister of the bride, wore a gown of pink satin with tunic of ninon embroidered in silver, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The groom was assisted by his brother, William Johnston.

After the ceremony the sixty-five guests retired to the dining room, where they partook of the wedding supper. The bride received many beautiful and costly presents, showing the esteem in which she was held.

After a short stay in Peterborough Mr. and Mrs. Johnston will reside at "Sunnydale," Chandos.

Former Peterboro' Young Man Meets With Mishap

ST. CATHARINES, Nov. 18.—Geo. Gagnon, a Hydro-Electric lineman at work on the high potential circuit near St. Catharines sub-station, to-day came in contact with a 2,200-volts current grounded and fell to the three-phase wire system below. He was seen from the sub-station and the power of the entire system was immediately shut off. He was seriously burned on one hand and one foot, but was restored to partial consciousness and is expected to recover. He comes from Peterborough.

SOCIAL TIME FOR WIVES OF LOCAL SOLDIERS

To-morrow afternoon the wives and families of the soldiers who are on active service with either the First or Second Contingents will be entertained in the Salvation Army Temple. A social time will be participated in, and the wives and families of every soldier who has left home to serve in the war are extended a cordial invitation to be present. There are a number who have not yet attended any of these very pleasant affairs which are held every Friday afternoon, and they are reminded that all are very welcome.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. Wm. Brightman was in Lindsay yesterday.

The ladies in charge of the Oriental tea-room to-morrow for the Daughters of the Empire will be Mrs. Gliddon, Mrs. J. C. Davidson and Mrs. Tomlin.

Mr. R. J. Begley, of Weller Street, was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital yesterday with an attack of blood poisoning. He is better to-day and his friends will be pleased to hear of his speedy recovery.

ECONOMIC EPIGRAMS.

This is the kind of world struggle where the last ounce of real fighting strength is going to tell. Every ounce of goods made in Canada that you buy will be as telling as a bullet on the ranks of the enemy. It adds to our resources and depletes theirs.

When you meet the man with the tin pail at six in the evening, can you look him in the eye when you know you are helping to drive him out of a job by refusing to buy the things he and his fellow-workers are making?

The Canadian soldier, given equipment and training, is as good as any soldier in Europe. Don't you think the Canadian mechanic that lives in your own town is as good a workman as the man who helps to support some other flag? Why not buy what he makes?

THE AMBUSH OF AN ARMOURED CAR

Exciting Adventure of a Newspaper Man in Service—Ran Into Germans.

(From the Manchester Guardian.)

Mr. Richard Reading, editor of the Sporting Chronicle, who was wounded whilst fighting as a corporal in the Belgian Army in an encounter with Germans near Dunkirk last Sunday morning, arrived in Manchester as one of a trainload of Belgian wounded last night.

Mr. Reading's wounds consisted of compound fractures of both legs below the knee. He was also shot in the ankle. Nevertheless he was quite cheerful, and appeared to have come through his ordeal remarkably well. The overcoat and trousers he was wearing when he was shot he had brought with him, and these he handed over to a colleague who took them as mementoes to the Sporting Chronicle Office.

Armoured Motor Car Ambushed.

Mr. Reading was one of a party of five in charge of an armoured motor car which belonged to the Belgian Corps de Mitrailleurs. Originally he had been a member of a British volunteer force, but desiring to see active service more quickly he joined the Belgian army, where he speedily received the rank of corporal. In this capacity he had seen stirring and strenuous fighting during the past few weeks, and had many hairbreadth escapes.

Last Sunday morning they went out in the car in search of a party of Germans who were known to be hidden in a neighbouring wood. As soon as they were well within range they succeeded in drawing the enemy's fire, and heard the "ping-ping" of the bullets on the armoured plates of the car. They then moved off about 300 yards.

The lieutenant, in charge of the car ordered them to dismount and entrench themselves in a ditch by the side of the road. They had barely got out of the car when they found they had run into a German ambuscade. From the shelter of a ditch some fifty yards away the enemy opened fire.

"The bullets simply peppered round," said Mr. Reading. "I think I was extremely fortunate not to be hit in the upper part of the body, because the bullets seemed to be flying on both sides of my head. The driver, Baron Linden, was the only one of the five of us who was not hit. The second chauffeur was shot three times, and wounded in the groin and the shoulder."

Dragged Behind Car.

Mr. Reading was shot in both legs, and as the car moved off he made a leap and held on to one of the back springs. In this fashion he was dragged for some distance before the soldiers in the car discovered his presence and got him into safety.

"I had no feelings in my legs," he said, "and I was surprised to find, as I was holding on to the car with one hand, that in the other I was waving the Mauser rifle I had got from a German a few days previously."

The possession of this rifle was the sequel to a daring capture of a German which Mr. Reading had effected unarmed and single-handed. The German's helmet was another trophy which has been left behind at Dunkirk. He expressed the opinion that it was fortunate he did not fall into the enemy's hands, having in his possession the Mauser rifle and a supply of German ammunition, as in all probability he would have been shot.

His wounds were attended to by an English surgeon, and he was brought through Dunkirk and Calais to Southampton, making the whole journey on the same stretcher.

Situation at the Front.

Speaking of the general situation at the seat of war Mr. Reading said the fighting had been exceedingly fierce, and the Belgian casualties were terrible. "It has been one stream of wounded men for days and days," he remarked. "The German losses must be still more pronounced, but every time they bring up fresh forces. It seems as if there could be no German soldiers left in Ostend or Antwerp."

The quality of the German reinforcements, however, was not so high. If they were in a good position they would fight stubbornly, but otherwise they did not offer the same resistance.

THERE'LL BE A HOT TIME

Ladies and gentlemen, I've come to sing a song,
And I'll do my best to please you, and I won't be very long;
It's all about old Kaiser and the war that's going on,
And there'll be a hot time in the old town that night.

Now, there is old uncle Kaiser, who is chock full of fight;
He's going in to rule the world with his men and might;
But when John Bull gets hold of him, he'll knock him out of sight,
And there'll be a hot time in the old town that night.

Now, there's that little insignificant crowd the Kaiser talks about,
But they are the boys to knock the Germans out.
If Kaiser's got ten men to one, our band can make them run;
And there'll be a hot time in the old town that night.

Now, England can get recruits that Kaiser never thought about;
It is astonishing how the Canadians have turned out.
And when they go to the front old Kaiser'll get a shunt,
And there'll be a hot time in the old town that night.

Now this war won't be long, which everybody knows;
For the Allies have got the best of all their foes;
And old Kaiser now will have to turn up his toes,
And there'll be a hot time in the old town that night.

(Written by Mark H. Spenceley, to be sung to the tune of "A Hot Time in the Old Town To-night).

Powerful Stuff.

A young man noticed that the case of his watch seemed to be brass and he hastened to the jeweller from whom he had bought the watch to demand a new case, because he was protected by a twenty-year guarantee.

The jeweller looked at the case, brushed it a little, then replied:

"Are you taking any medicine containing iron? If you are, the iron probably has come out with perspiration and has tarnished the case."

The young man remembered he was taking medicine containing iron. With a few minutes' work, the watch case was polished until it looked like new.

Sometimes a change of season will affect a watch so that it will not keep good time.

Most times, the watch needs cleaning, oiling or tightening; perhaps a part is worn.

Germans Attempt To Crush Russians In Vicinity of Thorn

Have Advanced Fifty Miles into Russian Territory Toward Warsaw---Retreat of Czar's Troops Well Conducted --Army in East Prussia Still Advancing.

Special Morning Cable.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 20.—Great masses of German troops are being poured into Russian Poland in support of Gen. Von Hindenburg's attempt to crush the Russian forces thrown back after their advance toward Thorn.

It is admitted that the German troops have now advanced approximately fifty miles into Russian territory.

The Czar's troops have retreated in good order before them.

Desperate fighting has marked the line of retreat.

The advance upon Cracow continues to progress it is stated here.

In East Prussia the Russian troops are declared to have advanced four miles beyond Angerburg. Fighting is still in progress in the Masurian Lake region. The capture of a score of guns and many prisoners is reported from the Russian headquarters.

BRITISH DEFEAT TURKS

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The Official Press Bureau has issued the following report from the General commanding the force operating on the Shatel-Arab River and in the Persian Gulf against the Turkish forces:

"In November 17 our troops drove out of an entrenched position about 4,500 of the enemy, capturing two guns and many prisoners, camp equipment and ammunition.

"Our casualties were three officers killed and fifteen wounded, and in the rank and file 35 men were killed and about 300 wounded."

WORK NIGHT AND DAY TO SUPPLY DEATH DEALERS

NEW YORK, Nov. 18—The American output of death dealing missles has increased 1,000 per cent. since the European war began. Orders for such enormous quantities of ammunition have been placed in this country by foreign governments that double day and night shifts are employed in every eastern factory, a prominent arms manufacturer admitted to-day.

Because of those conditions it was declared if need for such ammunition should arise the United States would use up its present supply within a week and be compelled to use the "hand to mouth system" to feed its guns of this caliber.

Within the last few weeks the demand has grown to such an extent that hundreds of orders have been turned down despite willingness of agents to pay highly increased prices.

Dairymen Met At Westwood

Annual Meeting Held Yesterday Afternoon—The Speakers

A largely attended meeting of dairymen of this district was held yesterday afternoon at Westwood. Mr. G. A. Gillespie presided, and the dairy instructors, Messrs. R. W. Wardy and D. J. Cameron, presented their reports of the work during the past season. Mr. L. A. Zufelt, Superintendent of the Dairy School, Kingston, and Mr. H. W. Coleman, Superintendent of the Cow Testing Associations for Ontario, were the special speakers for the afternoon. They addressed of special interest to dairymen, full of valuable instruction that should be productive of good results.

Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., was reappointed director for this district.

DISCOVERY TO STOP BLEEDING OF WOUNDS

GENEVA, Switzerland, Nov. 19.—A preparation which, it is said, will stop almost instantly the flow of blood from a wound has been invented by Prof. Theodor Koeher of Berne, who was awrded the Nobel Prize for surgery in 1912, and his assistant, Dr. A. Fonce. The new preparation is called coagulen.

It is in the form of a powder, and is dissolved in water before being applied to a wound. The discoverers of coagulen have made a gift of their invention to the armies in the field, and have sent large quantities of the powder to the surgical headquarters of both the German and French armies. The discovery is regarded by medical men here as likely to save the lives of thousands of soldiers, since it can be applied by untrained hands, so that the wounded man himself or his comrade might use the solution.

DAY OF REPENTANCE.

Berlin Observes Religious Holiday—No Newspapers Were Published.

BERLIN, Nov. 19.—For the first time since the outbreak of the war, the Germans spent Wednesday without their newspapers, the publication of which was suspended because of the religious Day of Repentance.

The daily report from war headquarters appeared as usual but there was no means of circulating it except through bulletins posted in shop windows, and by means of a telegraphic extract displayed in the post offices downtown.

The streets were crowded with the customary throng, the crisp autumn afternoon have brought out a host of promenaders. The crowds were scarcely different from those seen in ordinary years and there seemed to be almost as many men as usual. The spirit of the promenaders was confident, as a result or the Russian defeats reported yesterday.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. E. M. Morris, Shortsville, N.Y., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would send me in the grave."

3 GERMAN WARSHIPS ARE GONE

According to Report From Petrograd, Says the Goeben Was Struck and Explosion Followed the Shell

GERMANS SURPRISED

LONDON, Nov. 19.—A news agency despatch from Petrograd says a German squadron which bombarded Libau was later attacked by the Russian fleet, and that in the fight which followed a German cruiser and two torpedo destroyers were sunk.

Germans Leave Libau.

BERLIN, Nov. 19.—A war bulletin issued to-day says:

"The German [illegible] succeeded in partially closing the harbour of Libau, Russia, through the sinking of ships, and has also bombarded an important military position. Otherwise there is no news of importance."

A Turkish fleet has engaged a Russian squadron composed of two battleships and five cruisers off Sebastopol, according to an official report reaching Berlin from Constantinople to-day.

One of the Russian battleships was seriously damaged, and the other vessels, with the Turkish ships in pursuit, fled to Sebastopol.

Salvos Hit Goeben.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 19.—The following official statement was given out today by the Russian Ministry of Marine regarding the naval battle in the Black Sea between the Russian and Turkish fleets.

"On November 18 a division of the Black Sea fleet, returning from its cruise to Sebastopol, near the coast of Anatolia, sighed 25 miles from the Bhersones light a Turkish detachment consisting of the Goeben and the Breslau. The Russian fleet immediately drew up in battle order, bringing the enemy to starboard and opened fire at a distance of forty cable-lengths (about five miles.) The first salvo of 12-inch guns from the flagship Admiral Evstafry struck the Goeben and caused an explosion amidships, setting her on fire. Following the Evstafry the other Russian ships opened fire, the Russian guns giving an excellent account of themselves.

"A series of explosions were seen in the hull of the Goeben, which opened fire slowly. The enemy seemed not to have expected to meet us. The Germans fired salvos of their heavy guns, directing them principally at the flagship. The encounter continued for fourteen minutes, after which the Goeben withdrew and disappeared in the fog, taking advantage of her speed.

"The Breslau took no part in the fight, holding herself on the horizon. The Evstafry suffered only insignificant damage.

A FRENCH CRUISER SINKS A SUBMARINE

Waldeck Rousseau Again Wins Honours Against the Hostile Fleets

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The Standard has the following from Paris: News from the Adriatic says that the French cruiser Waldeck Rousseau has sunk another submarine. The enemy seems to make a special watch for this vessel, and during a recent cruise of only four days the cruiser had to run quite a gauntlet of aeroplane, submarine and torpedo boat attacks. She not only came through them unscathed but with the honours on her side for, besides sinking the submarine, she chased and battered a flotilla of seventeen hostile destroyers.

Germans Charged Up To British Trenches In Severe Fighting

British Have Made Counter Charges But Forward Movement Has Been Slow--Armentieres Now Reported Levelled Like Dixmude and Nieuport--Bombardment Continues

Examiner Special:

PARIS, France, Nov. 20.—Tremendous pressure is being exerted today on the allied line from Ypres southward to La Bassee. Armentieres has been partially destroyed by the German bombardment. A great section of the town is in flames.

It now appears that Armentieres may be levelled as Nieuport and Dixmude have been in an attempt of the Germans to find a weak spot in the lines of the French and British through which to break through toward the coast.

The British tropa north of Arras have launched vigorous counter offensive movements against the Germans. A constant artillery fire has been kept up and determined charges by the Germans repulsed at the very brink of the trenches. The British then endeavoured to advance, but their forward movement has been slow and uncertain.

The bombardment from the coast to Ypres continues with no change in the lines.

SPIES SNIPE BEHIND THE BRITISH LINE

Iron Crosses the Bait for Great Daring and Ingenuity —Telephone Wires Cut

LONDON, Nov. 19.—More light on the tactics of German spies is thrown by a report of an eye-witness with the British army headquarters, as follows:

"Further information has recently come to hand regarding the enemy's method of sniping and spying. Non-commissioned officers are offered Iron Crosses if they will penetrate our lines at night. Those that attempt this work, having discarded boots, helmets and other impediments, crawl as close as possible to our defences and try to attract the attention of one of our sentries by throwing a stone in a direction contrary to that in which they are crawling. This generally causes neighbouring sentries to fire, thus betraying their positions and that of our line of trenches.

"These spies or snipers often wear khaki uniforms and woollen caps similar to those worn by our men, and, thus disguised sometimes succeed in getting right behind our lines to favourable spots, from which they shoot men passing to and fro. Many of them speak English well and display great ingenuity and effrontery in getting out of tight corners.

Cut Phone Wires.

"Another reason for penetrating our lines is the cutting of telephone wires, and behind one section of our front, breaks have of late been very frequent. That the damage has not been entirely due to bursting shells has now been proved by the capture of one of the enemy's secret agents, carrying wire cutters and a rifle. The man was known to have been on intimate terms with the Germans before they retired from the area now occupied by us."

The "eye-witness" eulogizes a French doctor who, with several nuns, remained in Ypres during the bombardment nursing 92 German wounded, and was finally killed by a shell. The day after his death the nuns and wounded were removed to a place of safety.

DANDRUFF HEADS BECOME HAIRLESS

Scalp Dries — Chokes out the Hair And Prevents its Growth.

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silk hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve it and entirely destroy, every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will be silky, fluffy, lustrous, soft and look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need; no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

(Copyright, 1914, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D. D.)

Jesus and Pilate. Matt. xxvii:11-31; Luke xxiii:1-25.

Golden Text—Pilate said unto them, What then shall I do with Jesus who is called Christ? Matt. xxvii:22.

1. Verse 11—Jesus answered in the affirmative that he was the king of the Jews, but in what sense did he mean it?

2. Unless Jesus' offer of himself to the Jews was a farce, which is unthinkable, they could have received him. If they had done so, what would have happened?

3. Verses 12-14—What was Christ's motive in not answering their accusations?

4. What things did they accuse him of?

5. When, if ever, is it wise for us not to answer false accusations that may be made against us?

6. Verses 15-18—Pilate certainly is much impressed by Jesus, and is seeking a way to release him. How do you estimate the character of Pilate?

7. What had convinced Pilate that the chief priests had arrested Jesus for pure envy?

8. Verse 19—How would you sum up the character of Pilate's wife?

9. What was the significance of Pilate's wife's dreams?

10. Would you say, or not, and why, that there is any reliance to be placed on dreams to-day?

11. Verse 20—Which is the most cruel, and why, religious, political, or family bitterness?

12. How do you account for it that the members of the Jewish council, composed of the religious leaders of the people, had such hatred for a good man like Jesus as to inflame the people to ask for his crucifixion, rather than that of a murderer?

13. Verses 21-23—Why is it that this secular court is fairer in its judgment than the ecclesiastical court, and what does history say on similar events?

14. Verse 24—If Pilate had released Jesus what would have been the probable result to Pilate?

15. Verse 25—Has God punished the Jews for the death of Jesus, and if so, how?

16. Verses 26-26—How much did God blame Pilate for consenting to the death of Jesus when he knew him to be innocent of any crime?

17. Why did the soldiers act so cruelly to Jesus?

18. Verses 29-31—These soldiers arrayed Christ in mock royal robes, and placed a crown of thorns on his head, but how have the greatest nations of the earth since then treated him?

19. Luke xxii:1-25—Jesus was sent to Herod by Pilate, what happened when Jesus was before Herod?

20. Why did Jesus refuse to answer the questions put to him by Herod?

DON'T BELITTLE BRITISH FLEET ADVISES GERMAN

BERLIN (via The Hague), Nov. 14.—Count von Reventlow, writing in the Tages Zeitung, again sounds a note of warning against the popular exaggeration of Germany's military successes in the past, or of the results attained by the German fleet.

At the same time he cautions his readers against contempt for the strength of the British fleet. This naval critic expects a complete German victory, but he writes that the people should not for a moment suppose that the British fleet has suffered severely from the losses caused up to the present time by German ships. He says:

"We have no reason to disregard the British fleet or to believe that its fighting spirit and effectiveness are not on a high standing. It may be said that those best able to judge in this matter in German naval circles have no such conception."

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even colour, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.

NO JAPANESE TROOPS FOR EUROPEAN FIELDS

TOKIO, Nov. 19.—It is officially announced that Japan does not intend to send troops to Europe. The Japanese Foreign Minister, Baron Kato, announces that the Japanese entered the war merely to ensure peace in the East, and that it would impair her finances to take part in the struggle in the West.

By Geo. Allan England

Together, Beatrice and he walked round the wide piazza to the rear of the bungalow. The home estate sloped gently down toward the cement and boulder wall edging the cliff. In its broad garden stood the stable, where half a dozen horses — caught on the northern savannas and carefully tamed—disputed their master's favour with the touring car he had built up from half a dozen partly ruined machines in Atlanta and other cities.

Up the cliff still roared the thunder of the rapids, to-day untamed by the many turbines and power-plants along the shore. But louder than the river rose the tumult of the rejoicing throng: "They come! They come!"

"Where?" questioned Beta. "See them, boy?"

"There! Look! How swift! My trained men can outfly me now—more luck to them!"

He pointed far to north-westward, over the wide and rolling sea of green, farm-dotted, that had sprung up with marvellous fecundity in the wake of the great fire.

Looking now out over the very same country where, five years and a month before, she had strained her tear-blinded eyes for some sign of Allan's return, Beatrice suddenly beheld three high, swift little specks skimming up the heavens with incredible velocity.

"Hurrah!" shouted Allan boyishly. "Here they come — the last of my Folk!"

He ran to the corner of the piazza and on the tall staff that dominated the canyon and the river-valley dipped the stars and stripes three times in signal of welcome.

And already, ere the salute was done, the rushing planes had slipped full half the distance from the place where they had first been sighted.

A messenger ran down the gravel driveway and saluted.

"O Kromno!" he began. "Master—"

"Master no longer!" Allan interrupted. "Brother now, only!"

The lad stared, amazed.

"Well, what is it?" smiled Allan.

"The Council of the Elders prays you to come to help greet the last-comers. And after that the feast!"

"I come!" he answered. The lad bowed and vanished

"They aren't going to let me out of it, after all," he sighed. "I'd so much rather let them run their own festival to-day. But no—they've got to ring me in, as usual! You'll come, too, of course?"

She nodded, and a moment later they were walking over the fine lawn toward the plaza.

On the far side, in a wide, open stretch that served the children sometimes as a playground, stood the great hangars of the community's air-fleet. Beyond them rose workshops, their machinery driven by electric power from the turbines at the rapids.

Even as Allan and Beatrice passed through the cheering crowd, now drifting toward the hangars, a sound of music wafted down-wind — a little harsh at times, but still with promise of far better things to be.

Many flags fluttered in the air, and even the rollicking children on the lawns paused to wonder as swift shadows cut across the park.

On high was heard the droning hum of the propellers. It ceased, and in wide, sure, evenly balanced spirals the great planes one by one slid down and took the earth as easily as a gull sinks to rest upon the bosom of a quiet sea.

"They do work well, my equilibrators!" murmured Allan, unable to suppress a thrill of pride. "Simple, too; but, after all, how wonderfully effective!"

The crowd parted to let him through with Beatrice. Two minutes later he was clasping the hands of the last Folk ever to be brought from the strange, buried village under the cliff beside the Sunless Sea.

He summoned Zangahon and Frumuss, together with Sivad and the three aviators.

"Well done!" said he; and that was all—all, yet enough. Then, while the people cheered again and, crowding round, greeted their kinsfolk, he gave orders for the housing and the care of the travel-wearied newcomers.

Through the summer air drifted slow smoke. Off on the edge of the grove that flanked the plaza to southward the crackling of new-built fires was heard.

Allan turned to Beta with a smile.

"Getting ready for the barbecue already!" said he. "With that and the games and all, they ought to have enough to keep them busy for one day. Don't you think they'll have to let us go a while? There are still a few finishing touches to put to the new laws I'm going to hand the Council this afternoon for the Folk to hear. Yes, by all means, they'll have to let us go."

Together they walked back to their bungalow amid its gardens of palm-growths, ferns and flowers. Here they stopped a moment to chat with some good friend, there to watch the children and — parentlike — make sure young Allan was safe and only normally dirty and grass-stained.

They gained their broad piazza at length, turned, and for a while watched the busy, happy scene in the shaded street, the plaza and the playground.

Then Beta sat down by the cradle—still in that same low chair Allan had built for her five years ago, a chair she had steadily refused to barter for finer one.

He drew up another beside her. From his pocket he drew a paper—the new laws — and for a minute studied it with bent brows.

The soft wind stirred the woman's hair as she sat there half dreaming, her blue-grey eyes, a little moist, seeing far more than just what lay before them. On his head a shaft of sunlight fell, and had you looked you might have seen the crisp, black hair none too sparingly lined with grey.

But his gaze was strong and level and his smile the same as in bygone years, as with his left hand he pressed hers and, with a look, eloquent of many things, said:

"Now, sweetheart, if you're quite ready—?"

CHAPTER XXXIV.
HISTORY AND ROSES.

Allan sat writing in his library. Ten years had now slipped past since the last of the Folk had been brought to the surface and the ancient settlement in the bowels of the earth forever abandoned. Heavily sprinkled with grey, the man's hair showed the stress of time and labours incredible.

Lines marked his face with the record of their character-building, even as his rapid pen traced on white paper the all but completing history of the new world whereat he had been labouring so long.

Through the open window, where the midsummer breeze swayed the silken curtains, drifted a hum from the long file of bee-hives in the garden. Farther away sounded the comfortable gossip of hens as they breasted their soft feathers into the dust-baths behind the stables. A dog barked.

Came voices from without. Along the street growled a motor. Laughter of children echoed from the playground. Allan ceased writing a moment, with a smile, and gazed about him as though waking from a dream.

"Can this be true?" he murmured. "After having worked over the records of the earlier time they still seem the reality and this the dream!"

On the garden-path sounded footfalls. Then the voice of Beatrice calling:

"Come out, boy! See my new roses —just opened this morning!"

He got up and went to the window. She — matronly now and of ampler bosom, yet still very beautiful to look upon—was standing there by the rose-tree, scissors in hand.

Allan, Junior, now a rugged, hardy-looking chap of nearly sixteen—tall, well built and with his father's peculiar alertness of bearing—was bending down a high branch for his mother.

Beyond, on the lawn, the ten-year-old daughter, Frances, had young Harold in charge, swinging him high in a stout hammock under the apple-trees.

"Can't you come out a minute, dear?" asked Beatrice imploringly. "Let your work go for once! Surely these new roses are worth more than a hundred pages of dry statistics that nobody'll ever read, anyhow!"

He laughed merrily, threw her a kiss, and answered:

"Still a girl, I see! Ah, well, don't tempt me, Beta. It's hard enough to work on such a day, anyhow, without your trying to entice me out!"

"Won't you come, Allan?"

"Just give me half an hour more and I'll call it off for to-day!"

"All right; but make it a short half-hour, boy!"

He returned to his desk. The library, like the whole house now, was fully and beautifully furnished. The spoils of twenty cities had contributed to the adornment of "The Nest," as they had christened their home.

In time Allan planned even to bring art-works from Europe to grave it still further. As yet he had not attempted to cross the Atlantic, but in his seaport near the ruins of Mobile a powerful one hundred and fifty-two motor yacht was building.

In less than six months he counted on making the first voyage of discovery to the Old World.

Contentedly he glanced around the familiar room. Upon the mantel over the capacious fireplace stood rare and beautiful bronzes. Priceless rugs adorned the polished floor.

The broad windows admitted floods of sunlight that fell across the great jars of flowers Beta always kept there for him and lighted up the heavy tiers of books in their mahogany cases. Books everywhere—under the window-seats, up the walls, even lining a deep alcove in the far corner. Books, hundreds upon hundreds, precious and cherished above all else.

"Who ever would have thought, after all," murmured he, "that we'd find books intact as we did? A miracle—nothing less! With our printing-plant already at work under the cliff, all the art, science and literature of the ages—all that worth preserving —can be still kept for mankind. But if I hadn't happened to find a library of books in a New York bonded warehouse all cased up for transportation, the work of preservation would have been forever impossible!"

He turned back to his history, and before writing again idly thumbed over a few pages of his voluminous manuscript. He read:

"March 1, A.D. 2930. The astronomical observatory on Round Top Hill, one mile south of Newport Heights, was finished to-day and the last of the apparatus from Cambridge, Lick, and other ruins was installed. I find my data for reckoning time are unreliable, and have therefore assumed this date arbitrarily and readjusted the calendar accordingly.

"Our Daily Messenger, circulating through the entire community and educating the people both in English and in scientific thought, will soon popularise the new date.

"Just as I have substituted the metric system for the old-time chaotic hodge-podge we once used, so I shall substitute English for Merucaan definitely inside of a few years. Already the younger generation hardly understands the native Merucaan speech. It will eventually become a dead, historically interesting language, like all other former tongues. The catastrophe has rendered possible, as nothing else could have done, the realisation of universal speech, labour-unit exchange values in place of money, and a political and economic democracy unhampered by ideas of selfish, personal gain."

LOOK!

If you were told of a new discovery for the treatment of coughs, colds and bronchitis, as certain in its action on all chest troubles as anti-toxin is on diphtheria, or vaccination on small-pox, wouldn't you feel like giving it a trial? Especially if you could try it for fifty cents!

Pepa is the discovery!

Pepa are little tablets, neatly wrapped in air and germ-proof silver foil. They contain certain medicinal ingredients, which, when placed upon the tongue, immediately turn into vapour, and are at once breathed down the air passages to the lungs. On their journey, they soothe the inflamed and irritated membranes of the bronchial tubes, the delicate walls of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the capillaries and tiny air cells in the lungs.

In a word, while no liquid or solid can get to the lungs and air passages, these Pepa fumes get there direct, and at once commence their work of healing.

Pepa are entirely distinct from the old fashioned liquid cough cures, which are merely swallowed into the stomach, and never reach the lungs. Pepa treatment of coughs and colds is direct treatment.

If you have not yet tried Pepa, cut out this article, write across it the name and date of this paper, and mail it (with 1c. stamp to pay return postage) to Pepa Co., Toronto. A free trial packet will then be sent you. All druggists and stores sell Pepa at 50c. box.

PEOPLE OFTEN SAY

"How Are We To Know When The Kidneys Are Out Of Order?"

EASIEST THING IN THE WORLD!

The location of the kidneys, close to the small of the back, renders the detection of kidney trouble a simple matter. The note of warning comes from the back. The kidneys become overtaxed and fail to do their work at nature's call.

Backache is the signal sent out by the kidneys the minute they become overtaxed. Those who heed the warning when it first comes, usually have but little trouble.

The danger lies in delay. Doan's Kidney Pills stimulate the action of the kidneys, and enable them to perform their duty perfectly.

Mrs. Greig Murphy, Lower Ship Harbor East, N.S., writes: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills in my family with great success, and don't think there is a better pill for the kidneys. I was very miserable with my back, and could hardly get about. I got a box, and tried them, and found that they were really good, so I took in all about six boxes, and soon found my back cured, and my kidneys as well as ever."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; for sale at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

"So I just got after dad good and strong to get a Victrola. I guess he really wanted one pretty bad himself because it didn't take much coaxing to get him to buy it.

"Now we have all kinds of music—we each have what we like best, and do we like the Victrola? Well I guess yes."

A STRATEGIC POINT FOR THE EMPIRE—The entrance to the Suez Canal with the statue of Ferdinand de Lesseps the famous French engineer in the centre. The Suez Canal is one of the most strategic points which the Empire possesses, and it is possible Turkey will attempt to take possession of the waterway.

MINES OFF NORTH OF IRELAND

Merchant Ships Blown Up—Premier Asquith Makes No Reference to the "Audacious"—Neutral Flags Mis-Used.

LONDON, Nov. 16.— In announcing to the Commons that the entire North Sea would be declared to be a military area, Premier Asquith said:

"A mine field was therefore laid across the southern portion of the North Sea in such a way as to guard the approaches to the English channel. Due public warning was given, in accordance with the Hague conventions. In the last week of October the Germans succeeded in laying a mine field off the North Coast of Ireland, on the main trade route from America to Liverpool via the North of Ireland. More peaceful merchants ships were worn up and more lives were lost. But for the warnings given by British cruisers other British and neutral merchant and passenger steamers would have been destroyed.

Laid Under Neutral Flag.

"These mines could not have been laid by any German ship of war or by any vessel flying the German flag. They could only have been laid by some merchant vessel under a neutral flag, which must have come along the trade route as if for the purposes of peaceful commerce. Such a ship, while profiting to the full by the immunity enjoyed by neutral merchant ships, recklessly endangered the lives of all who travel on the sea, regardless of whether they were friend or foe, civilian or military in character.

The Only Way.

"The menace to peaceful shipping presented by these, wholly illegal methods of waging war is so great that the Government has been compelled to adopt the only possible means of protecting, namely, to declare the whole North Sea a military area, and to restrict all shipping crossing it to a narrow passage, along with the strictest supervision can be exercised. Access to the coasts of Great Britain and neutral countries has thus been made as safe as it is in the power of the British Navy to make it, and although this has been done at the price of certain inconveniences and delay to shipping through its inability to follow its accustomed routes, the price cannot, in the circumstances of the case, be considered a high one.

Activities of Navy.

"His Majesty's Government is fully aware of the anxiety prevailing in the United States and other neutral countries on these subjects, and it trusts that its policy will be fully understood. It is confident that public opinion in neutral countries will appreciate its earnest desire that there should be no interference with neutral trade, provided the vital interests of Great Britain which are at stake in the present conflict are adequately maintained. Any interference by the British Navy is directed, not to increase British trade or to diminish the trade of any neutral foreign country, but solely to prevent goods from reaching the enemy which would increase his power in the war against the British and the allied forces."

Treatment of Reservists.

Discussing the reservists of the enemy, Premier Asquith said: "Because of the action which Germany took in Belgium and France in arresting and removing as prisoners of war all men of military age the Government found it necessary to give instructions that all subjects of the enemy liable to military service who are found on board neutral vessels, shall be made prisoners of war. This instruction applies to neutral vessels under whatever flag. In no case so far of which I am aware were reservists of the enemy found on ships of the United States."

SORROW.

(From the Westminster Gazette.)

Ochone, it's the sorrow that's upon me!
(Childer, quit yer playin' at the door!)
The sun was shin', but I knew it wouldn't last,
The signs were bad, an' I saw it comin' fast;
Did ye hear last night the wailin' iv the blast?—
An' sorrow came down upon the wind.

Wirra, it's the grief that's come upon me!
(Childer, quit yer talkin' at the door!)
The farm dog barked, an' the red cock crew,
An' the fire went out when the cold wind blew;
I've heard bad news, an' I know it's true,
For sorrow came down upon the wind.

Ochone, it's the grief that's come upon me!
(Childer, quit yer shoutin' at the door!)
Him that was young, an' beautiful, an' tall!
When he waved good-bye I niver thought he'd fall;
It's meself doesn't know what til do at all, at all,
For sorrow's come down upon the wind.

Ochone, it's the fear that's come upon me!
(Childer, quit yer laughin' at the door!
Himself worked hard for til gain our daily bread,
An' now it's the childer that be til go unfed,
For far on the battlefield he's stretched out dead,
And sorrow's come down upon the wind.

Dear God, it's the sorrow that's upon me!
(Childer, quit yer cryin' at the door!)
There's naught til do but to kneel an' humbly pray
To Christ in Heaven to be our help this day,
An' to care for the soul iv him that's gone away—
For sorrow's come down upon the wind.

NOTHING BETTER FOR WEAK WOMEN

"I Never Spent Any Money That Did Me So Much Good as That I Spent for Vinol."

Bellefontaine, Ohio.—"I wish every tired, weak, nervous woman could have Vinol for I never spent any money in my life that did me so much good as that I spent for Vinol. My nerves were in a very bad condition, making me very weak, tired, and worn out and often drowsy headaches. I had tried cod liver oil, doctor's medicines, and other preparations without benefit.

"One day a friend asked me to try Vinol. I did and soon my appetite increased, I slept better and now I am strong, vigorous and well and can do my housework with pleasure."—Mrs. J. F. LAMBORN, Bellefontaine, Ohio.

Nervous, weak, tired, worn-out women should take Mrs. Lamborn's advice and try Vinol for there are literally thousands of men and women who were formerly run-down, weak and nervous, who owe their good health to Vinol.

Vinol contains, tissue building elements of the cod's livers, aided by the blood making, strength-giving influence of tonic iron, contained in Vinol, which makes it so efficient in all such cases.

THE NEW RUSSIA

By Stanley Washburn to Collier's

Ten years ago the misery and mortification of the disastrous war with Japan hung like a cloud over all of Russia. The writer was here five times during that period. In Petrograd every form of civil and economic disorder was rampant. In the provinces were riots and confusion.

The press of the world screamed aloud in letters six inches high that the dissolution of the Empire was at hand. All over the land there was protest and unrest. Chaos and anarchy seemed the order of the day. As we look back now we can see that from this dismal period great good has come, for in the hour of gloom and disaster was broken the ground for the new and better Russia. Out of the darkness has come light.

No doubt what I write seems effusive and exaggerated to American and British readers, who think of Russia only as a mysterious and traditional menace; but that this change is a definite and realized fact, any who knew Russia ten years ago and sees it now must believe. Perhaps the best means of illustrating the altered spirit in this war, and that during and after the last, is by the narration of two incidents, pictures as it were of the heart of the Russian people ten years apart.

In January, 1905, after the fall of Port Arthur and the collapse of the Russian Far Eastern programme, hostility toward the Government was everywhere.

On the historic day of 22nd January, 1905, an army of workmen, bearing a monster petition, moved down the Nevsky Prospect and on toward the Winter Palace to present their grievances to their monarch.

They were met with machine guns and Cossacks, and the streets ran red with blood. For weeks there was martial law within the district, and by day and by night could be seen patrols of Cossacks riding hither and yon through the silent, snow-clad streets of Russia's greatest city. The Tsar was threatened and the Grand Duke Sergius was assassinated.

THE OTHER PICTURE.

Such a thing as unity in Russia seemed a dream. Since those dreadful days, slowly, subtly, and unseen, the great forces of progress and new light have been moving. This neither the Germans nor perhaps even the Russians themselves fully realized until the declaration of war in Germany, when over night there crystallized a national spirit of unity such as few countries can record. And on this day we have, almost in the exact spot as the incident of 22nd January, 1905, another picture. Let the two be contrasted. Before the Winter Palace is an enormous semi-circle which, stretching before the great red home of the Tsars, forms one of the greatest plazas in Europe. And this is what we see now: More than two hundred thousand people, of all classes and of all ranks, standing for hours in the blazing sun before the building within which was their monarch. Quietly and in order they waited, without hysteria, and with the patience so characteristic of their race. At last the Tsar, moved by the magnitude of the demonstration, appeared upon the balcony overlooking the square.

Instantly the entire throng sank upon its knees and, with complete spontaneity, sand the deep-throated anthem of the Russian race. For perhaps the first time since Napoleon's invasion of Russia the people and their Tsar wer one.

FROM PEASANT TO PRINCE.

The observer for a day might perhaps have said: "Ah, yes, 'tis ever so in the beginning of a war. But it will pass." The significant thing, however, is that Russian unity has not passed, but has grown steadily from that day.

And its growth has not been entirely of the spectacular kind, but of the deep and fundamental order which is represented by millions and millions of humble individuals gladly giving their mite to this new nationalism that has swept the country. Here in Petrograd one sees changes in sentiment that are incredible. The first night I arrived I wandered round to a favourite restaurant where on my previous visits I was wont to sup and dine. The great dining-room was closed and the brilliantly-uniformed band that used to play was no more. The halls and corridors that ten years ago were filled with gay Russian officers were now abandoned. I at last found the manager.

"What does it mean?" I asked curiously.

He smiled, and, extending his palms, deprecatingly answered: "War. It is on account of the mobilization of our reservists. The morning after war was declared comes here a policeman at eight in the morning and tells us that the Government occupies my dining-rooms at 8.30 for the mobilization of its troops. For many days they come here and take their arms and their uniforms. Now it is finished. They have all gone to the front. Nine hundred from this room."

"But your business?" I asked. "It has been ruined. No doubt the Government paid you for your rooms."

He turned sharply as he replied: "Paid? What for? It is our war, and each man must contribute what he may. We are all doing it and gladly."

And this same sort of business was going on, so he told me, in ninety-five other halls and restaurants in Petrograd alone, and all gave freely, gladly and heartily.

HAD INDIGESTION FOR OVER 10 YEARS.

ALMOST DESPAIRED OF EVER GETTING WELL.

"Indigestion is one of the worst forms of stomach trouble. The stomach becomes upset and you have a raw, debilitating feeling in it. After a meal you feel that you must get rid of that nasty, bilious, burning sensation. It is not necessary for you to be troubled with indigestion if you will only try that old and well-known remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, which is a combination of nature's best known roots, herbs and barks for the cure of all stomach and blood troubles.

Mrs. Mary MacKay, Hunter's Mountain, N.S., writes: "I was troubled with indigestion for more than ten years. I tried several doctors' medicines claiming the power to cure, but all without success. Having heard of the many cures effected by Burdock Blood Bitters, I decided to give it a trial. After taking two bottles I was completely cured. My appetite which was very poor is now good, and I can eat most everything without any disagreeable feelings.

I am strongly recommend B.B.B. to anyone suffering from indigestion."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Justice of Peace Praises Dr. Chase's Ointment

After Nine Years of Agony He Escaped an Operation by Using This Great Healing Agent.

As a means of healing sores and wounds that defy ordinary treatment Dr. Chase's Ointment has long stood supreme. It is known far and wide as a positive cure for eczema and piles. Whatever uncertainty there may be about the results obtained by the use of medicines taken internally there can be no question of the healing of the skin when Dr. Chase's Ointment is applied. You can actually see with your own eyes just what takes place. The sore parts are cleansed and gradually the new skin is formed and the sore becomes smaller and smaller, until it finally disappears. It is often wonderful the results which are accomplished in a single night by the use of this great healing ointment.

MR. HEATH.

Mr. N. A. Heath, J.P., Fitch Bay, Que., writes:—"Nine years ago I was taken with an abscess, and cannot begin to describe what I have suffered as a result. I was examined by two doctors, both of whom said I would have to undergo an operation to be cured. Thanks to Dr. Chase's Ointment, it has rendered an operation unnecessary, and has completely cured me. I cannot say enough in praise of this wonderful ointment which cured me after nine years of agony."

DEFENCE OF OLD CITIES

FAMOUS SIEGES

CONSTANTINOPLE 1453 GIBRALTAR 1779 – ANTWERP 1832

Siege of Schweidnitz, Taken by the Prussians in 1758, Showing That They Were Partial to Bombardments More Than 150 Years Ago.

British Destroying a French Battery Before Gibraltar.
(From a Painting by Trumbull.)

By Henry M. Snevily.

SHOULD Turkey enter the present war it is more than likely she will lose her territory in Europe if the Allies win. In this case Constantinople would fall again into Christian hands after 461 years of Mohammedan rule, as it was in 1453 that Turkey wrested the city from the Christians.

Without declaring war against the Eastern Empire of Rome, Mohammed II., only twenty-three years old at the time, began to build fortifications outside the city, menacing the walls. The Christians protested against this hostile action but Mohammed sent back the first messenger with word that he would flay alive any other envoys who approached his camp.

When he was ready the Turk hurled 250,000 men and 420 vessels against the city, which was defended by an inadequate garrison of 9,000 men. With ancient and modern artillery the besieging forces bombarded the city from two sides and even carried many of their lighter craft across the narrow strip of land to the harbor north of the city and brought their cannon to bear from that side as well.

The operations were begun in April and by May 29 the Turks were ready for a grand assault.

Catapults hurled great stones at the walls and battering rams smashed at the tottering gates, while at the same time the smoke of cannon rolled in clouds over the city and heavy shot from more modern artillery beat against the forts.

During a lull in the artillery battle the Turks charged the walls and were killed in such numbers that the moat was filled with their bodies and their comrades charged over them.

John Justiniani, one of the Christian leaders, was wounded and, sick with pain and terror, he fled with many of his men. This disheartened the defenders, who became veritably demoralized when Constantine, the Emperor, was slain.

In the thickest of the fight Hassan, a Janizary of gigantic stature, climbed into a breach. He was hurled back upon his fellows below, but climbed again and this time forced his way through the first line of the defenders. The little garrison was completely overwhelmed and put to flight. Thousands who had taken refuge in the churches were killed and many sold into slavery.

GIBRALTAR HAS BEEN OBJECT OF FIERCELY PRESSED SIEGES

It is not likely that Gibraltar will be attacked during the present war, but it has played a prominent part in European war history, having been besieged time and again. The Moors were the first to fortify this great rock and gave it the name Gab-el Tarik, which later became Gebeltar and then Gibraltar.

In 1309 Spain took the rock from the Moors after a long siege and six years later held it successfully against them throughout a siege. In 1333 the Moors retook Gibraltar and Spain in her turn made two unsuccessful attempts in 1344 and 1349. In the next siege one Moorish army held Gibraltar against another army of Moors and then Spain again failed. In 1462 a Christian coalition besieged and took it; then a Spanish grandee captured it for himself, lost it and his descendants recaptured it as a result of siege operations. The Algerian pirates failed to reduce the fort, but in 1704 it surrendered to an English and Dutch fleet, aided by German soldiers. In the same year and in 1725 Spain unsuccessfully besieged Gibraltar, but the most famous siege began in 1779, when the French and Spanish, allied against the English, attempted to reduce the garrison by siege.

General George Augustus Elliott, the English commander, had under him about 5,000 men, 500 of them artillerists or engineers. There were four English and five Hanoverian regiments. The Spanish troops invested the peninsula and the French fleet bottled up the harbor. Before the investiture all the civilians had withdrawn from Gibraltar, leaving only the garrison and the families of some of the officers to be fed. But by January, 1780, the soldiers were reduced almost to starvation.

There had as yet been very little fighting, the Allies trusting to starvation to force the English to surrender, but after Admiral Rodney's great naval victory over the French and Spanish off Cape St. Vincent he landed supplies and ammunition at Gibraltar and the French and Spanish realized they would have to reduce the fortress by some other means than by merely attempting to cut off supplies.

A fleet of fire ships was sent against the British vessels, but the sailors put out in small boats and warded off the burning hulks, towing many of them into shoal water, where they stranded, although the ropes were burned through time and again, and so close were the British obliged to run in that men's clothes were burned on their backs and their faces and hands were blistered with the heat.

By autumn of 1780 the half starved garrison was suffering from scurvy because of the lack of proper food, but a Dutch ship which was captured bore a cargo of lemons and oranges, which relieved the garrison of the disease.

Early in 1781 provisions again reached the besieged troops, and in May the Allies began their bombardment.

It took two months to destroy the town, but the forts still held out, and the great rock seemed impregnable. In November Elliott and 2,000 men made a sally, captured several of the batteries and blew up several magazines filled with ammunition and guns.

It was evident the Allies must force things or relief would reach Gibraltar from England, and D'Arcon, a French engineer, began the preparation of floating batteries at Algeciras.

D'Arcon cut down almost to the water line ten ships, the sides of which he protected with seven-inch timbers and strengthened with bins of sand to stop any shot which might penetrate the timbers. He also arranged a system of sprinkling which should keep the timbers and the sand wet to prevent fire starting, and covered the craft with sloping roofs of rawhide, which deflected an ordinary solid shot.

But, bearing of these ingenious floating batteries, the British prepared to use red hot shot against them, and as the French and Spanish squadron approached the air fairly trembled with the shock of the explosions. Four hundred cannon roared continuously, and the vast rock on which the fortress stood spit fire and smoke and deadly missiles like a veritable volcano hurling incandescent rocks.

Secure in their belief that the wet timbers would not catch fire, the besiegers fought from the floating batteries all day, and though many men were killed the shots which struck the sides of the gunboats either were stopped by the sand or penetrated the timber and remained there.

But some of these cannon balls remained too hot so long that they dried the timbers, in which they were embedded, and toward night flames broke out at different points on board several of the crafts.

Forty thousand men were held in readiness to attack as soon as the forts were silenced, but when the gunboats began to burn the British were still firing steadily. The crews were forced to abandon their vessels because of the powder magazines, and landing parties to the south were repulsed with heavy losses.

Lord Howe, who had been in command of a fleet in American waters during the Revolutionary War, finally relieved the fortress, and the French and Spanish withdrew. The siege had lasted three years seven months twelve days, during which time the English had lost only 470 men from wounds and 1,200 by illness. The losses of the French and Spanish were much greater.

ANTWERP WAS ONCE BESIEGED BY THE FRENCH AND BRITISH

Although the siege of Antwerp in 1832 was strategically nothing but the overwhelming of a small garrison by a far superior force, it is particularly interesting at present because of the German operations against the city.

At that time it was considered no city could withstand a long siege by a competent force, but Antwerp held out much longer against the science of the engineers than it did against the hammering big German howitzers.

As early as 1758 the Prussians were superior in the art of reducing strong fortifications, and a typical attack on a city is shown in the illustration of the siege of Schweidnitz, taken from the Austrians during the Seven Years' War.

Although France and England had guaranteed the integrity of Belgium, Holland at that time held the city of Antwerp and refused to withdraw her troops at the instance of the Allies. There were not more than 5,000 Dutch soldiers in Antwerp, and against this tiny garrison a force of 67,000, including thousands of engineers and artillerymen, invested the town.

The engineers and sappers first constructed huge trenches parallel to the outer line of fortifications and on November 20 they began two zigzag trenches toward the first embankments. When these trenches had been carried to within four hundred feet of the glacis nine earthwork batteries were set up in front of the first parallel trench. These were connected with the trenches by deep pits so that the soldiers could go from one point to another without exposing themselves to the fire of the garrison. Two mortar batteries were at the same time constructed in the rear of the first parallel trench.

The next step was the digging of another trench parallel to the works of the city at the 400-foot radius, from which more trenches were dug until the besiegers broke into the moat just inside the glacis or sloping outer embankment of the forts.

To cross the moat, which had been flooded, the English and French built three big rafts, and when these were ready exploded a petard, an enormous bomb, against the wall, thus tearing a large breach, through which troops poured and captured a section of the outer defenses.

A gallery was dug under the Bastion of St. Laurent and at five o'clock one morning a mine was exploded which gave the Allies an entrance through which they rushed and captured the tower.

They now held two important points within the works and the mining and sapping continued until practically the entire system of fortifications was at the mercy of the French and English. In preparation for a grand assault a terrific bombardment was kept up for three days, but before the charge was ordered the Dutch commander surrendered his shattered forts to the enemy.

The Last Bishop Appointed by the Late Pope Pius X.

By Rachel Kollock McDowell.

MGR. PATRICK J. HAYES, Bishop elect of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York, has the distinction of being one of the last two bishops appointed by Pope Pius X., the other being Mgr. Thomas J. Shahan, rector of the Catholic University, Washington, D. C. These two American prelates had the privilege also of being the first to be recognized by the new Pope, Benedict, XV.

Both of the bishops elect had their appointments confirmed by the late Pontiff soon after his final consistory, May 25, at which Pius X. created seventeen cardinals, one of whom was Cardinal Della Chiesa, now in the chair of St. Peter. The two monsignori from this country were recognized by Benedict XV. on September 8, a few days before Mgr. Hayes, with Cardinal Farley, left for America.

The bishopric of Mgr. Hayes will stand out in the history of New York Catholicity for other reasons, however.

New York is the first diocese in the country to have more than one auxiliary bishop, the one other being Bishop Thomas F. Cusack, who was consecrated in St. Patrick's Cathedral April 20, 1904. Chicago has two auxiliary bishops, but that is because one, having become an invalid shortly after his consecration, found it necessary to retire. The diocese of Cologne, Germany, has such a distinction, but it is rare, even abroad. The growth of the Roman Catholic Church in New York city has made it impossible for Cardinal Farley and Bishop Cusack to perform all the episcopal duties; hence the necessity for an additional bishop.

Bishop-elect Hayes, who is forty-seven years old, will be one of the youngest of the American hierarchy. Mgr. Hayes has never been a pastor, an unusual circumstance for a bishop. In this he is like Pope Benedict XV. As with the new Pontiff, Mgr. Hayes has been busy during his twenty-two years of service as a priest in official positions. For years it has been a common saying among the Americans that Mgr. Hayes was of bishop's timber.

Ever since his ordination Mgr. Hayes has lived with Cardinal Farley, and the two are like father and son. Is it any wonder that the Cardinal, when the work of the diocese demanded a second bishop, should ask that the honor be bestowed upon his faithful confidante, his counselor on every vital question that arises in the largest, wealthiest and most influential diocese in the New World?

Mgr. Hayes will be consecrated at an imposing ceremony in St. Patrick's Cathedral Wednesday morning, October 28, the feast of St. Simon and St. Jude. Not since Mgr. Farley returned from Rome three years ago with his red hat has there been so much interest over an approaching service. All the clergy are expected to be present and admission for the laity will be by invitation. Cardinal Farley will be the consecrator, assisted by several of the suffragan bishops of his province, which includes New York State and New Jersey.

Mgr. Hayes will be consecrated as titular Bishop of Tagaste, a diocese in Africa, where St. Augustine was born. It is a coincidence that the day before Mgr. Hayes was notified by the Vatican that such would be his title in "the College of the Apostles" he visited the grave of St. Augustine, at Pavia, Italy.

The Catholic Club will give a dinner to the new Bishop at the club house, No. 120 Central Park West, Thursday evening, October 29.

Mgr. Joseph F. Mooney, senior vicar general, is the chairman of the committee in charge of the details of the consecration. Other members are the Rev. William Livingston, pastor of St. Gabriel's, where Mgr. Hayes served for fourteen years as assistant to Cardinal Farley, then Bishop, when he was pastor of the church, and the Rev. Joseph F. Smith, superintendent of parochial schools and pastor of St. Bernard's Church, West Fourteenth street. Father Smith was one of two priests who were ordained with Mgr. Hayes.

The new Bishop has received many gifts and others are on the way. Among them will be a purse from the clergy, a cruzier from the students of Cathedral College, of which he has been president since its foundation; a pectoral cross from a priest who says he loves "the little chancellor" more than a brother, a cope from the cloistered Sisters of St. Dominic, at the Convent of Corpus Christi, Hunt's Point, of which he is chaplain.

Mgr. Patrick J. Hayes, Bishop-Elect of the Archdiocese of New York.

Mgr. Hayes holds the joint positions of Chancellor of the diocese and president of Cathedral College, his office being in the basement of the college, Madison avenue and Fifty-first street. He resides with Cardinal Farley in the archiepiscopal residence, No. 452 Madison avenue. He is ever ready to assist the Cardinal with all his duties and is never too busy to help a brother priest.

When Mgr. Hayes sleeps is not known. If one of the clergy has to go to the hospital suddenly, before he is settled in his room there is a soft rap at the door, and in walks "the little Chancellor." When death takes away a mother, an only sister or a favorite niece or nephew of a fellow priest a gentle hand grasps his and a voice as tender as a woman's whispers in the ear, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord," and "He giveth His beloved sleep." This again is Mgr. Hayes.

Bishop-elect Hayes knows every one of the 1,032 priests in the diocese by name, if a few of the members of religious orders who had recently been transferred to New York city be excepted.

The Chancellor goes further than the names. He knows the characteristics of the men and understands the nearest way to their hearts. During his office hours, from ten to one o'clock every week day, clergy with troubled faces come to him by the score. They are up against financial difficulties. The interest on their school debts is coming due and there are insufficient funds with which to meet it. They need another assistant to work with the boys of their parish. But when they emerge there are smiles on their faces. Something their Chancellor has said has given them new courage.

When Mgr. Hayes cannot be found those associated with him look for him in the dim Cathedral. There, far back, kneeling quietly on a hard board bench in an uncushioned pew will be seen a slim figure in the attitude of prayer. The writer frequently has sat a few seats in the rear of Mgr. Hayes and been awed by his prolonged silent devotion. The Chancellor wants to be alone with God. There in the unbroken silence and the dimness, his friends say, he gets the power which has made him the quiet force he is and, the Cardinal excepted, the most powerful priest in the diocese.

If a quiet, unassuming poise and a never faltering dignity are essentials to the bishopric the friends of Mgr. Hayes are sure he is qualified for his new office. If simplicity in taste and humility in character and strictness in deportment are aids they are sure his success will be of a high order. If familiarity with the diocese is a help they know that he will measure up to the best of his predecessors.

Although the future Bishop's spirituality is well recognized,

"He is not too good
For human nature's daily food."

He enjoys life. He can laugh heartily. There are few things he likes so well as a joke, and if it is Irish he is all the more pleased. So well is this quality known that his friends save up jokes to relate to him. And Mgr. Hayes can tell a good story as well as listen to one, although he is sometimes called "St. Patrick." Like Cardinal Farley, he does not use tobacco and is rigid in his manner of life, but sympathetic in his judgment of others. Bishop-elect Hayes follows St. Paul's dictum in being "all things to all men" if by some means he may save some.

He was educated in St. Andrew's Parochial School, De la Salle Institute, Manhattan College, from which he was graduated in 1888; St. Joseph's Seminary, Troy, and the Catholic University of America, at Washington, D. C. In his school days he was known among his classmates as "The Pope." This was because he would never indulge in pranks and spent so much time at his devotions.

Young Father Hayes was sent to St. Gabriel's as assistant and as secretary to Mgr. Farley, who was then pastor. A little later, when he was appointed Auxiliary Bishop, he made Father Hayes his secretary.

When Bishop Farley succeeded to the Archbishopric of New York he appointed Mgr. Hayes chancellor of the diocese, to succeed the Rev. Charles H. Colton, who had become Bishop of Buffalo. This was in 1906. The same year Archbishop Farley, having founded Cathedral College, made Mgr. Hayes its president. Father Hayes was appointed a domestic prelate of the Pope, with the title of monsignor, in 1907. When the Bishop's ring is placed on his finger he will, according to the Roman Catholic custom, become a member of the College of the Apostles, immediately after the consecration by [illegible] bishop at a side altar within the Cardinal's [illegible] at the high altar.

THE TEACHERS TAUGHT.

Miss Nixon, a charming society girl, had spent the entire summer in trying to elevate the simple country people with whom she was boarding. When she was about to leave she said:

"Goodby, Mr. Ingersoll. I hope my visit hasn't been entirely without good results."

"Sartin not," replied the farmer, "you've learnt a heap since you first come; but, by heck, you was about the greenest one we ever had on our hands."

CHAPTER V.
A Chief's Daughter.

ALL through the night the march continued. Lucille shuddered as, from the black fastnesses of the semi-jungle that hedged them in, the glow of yellow eyes gleamed.

Fire balls they might have been, so steady and silent were the animals who watched the procession, but the pat of stealthy feet, the crunch of broken twigs, an occasional growl or cry told her what they were.

It was well into the day when their party was met by a native coming from the opposite direction. Lucille was attracted by the rapid conversation he held with the chief, noticing the perturbation which showed so strongly on the old man's face when he turned away and redoubled his pace. It was well nigh impossible for her to keep up now. Worn out by exposure and this tramp through the jungle there seemed times when she could not drag herself along, when the tired muscles kinked and refused to work.

Then quite unexpectedly through a wall of vegetation the party emerged into a great clearing upon which the sun beat fiercely. A few old men squatted before the openings to the hundred or more huts that filled the open space set down here in the midst of the jungle. Many children played about dressed only in the garments of their birth.

From a hut many times the size of any other and set at the extreme head of the clearing facing down the double row as would an officer scan his files of men came a droning sound, the low pitched wailing of many women's voices, never varying in its dreary monotone. A terrible sound it was—sorrowful, dirgelike. Instinctively Lucille lifted her eyes to those of the chief, her finger tips brushing against his bare forearm sympathetically.

A swift glance [illegible] At a few sharp words the party dis banded, disappearing in the huts "Come with me," said the chief. And, although she did not understand the words, she followed his swift stride toward the great hut from which the sound came.

The interior of the hut was crowded with women, the atmosphere so close as to fairly drive her back toward the tiny door through which she had entered. And to the ears of the girl, dominating the dirgelike wail, came a simple note—the crying of a child.

Impulsively she brushed through the women, stepping over the pallet of rushes where the patient lay. Even with the [illegible] which her illness had caused, despite the blaze of delirium in the widened eyes, the black splotches of fever in the cheeks, Lucille would have known the girl for the daughter of the old man.

By signs she made it clear to the old man that the hut must be cleared before anything could be done to assist his daughter. Gradually it dawned upon her that the crowding of the hut was a custom of his people, which required vast faith to go against. She watched him eagerly, her very heart crying out for the sick child, whose last chance for recovery was being stolen by this crowd of women using up all the oxygen in the room when it was the most necessary thing for her recovery.

The chief made his decision quickly. He overruled the women's protests and drove them from the hut, leaving the opening wide.

Lucille opened her mouth, laving her throat with the intoxicating air that drove out the odors the congestion had left behind. Then she turned her attention to the child.

Day and night Lucille administered to the girl, now encouraged at a diminution of the fever, now downcast at discouraging symptoms. All she had to work with were the natural weapons which nature leaves to the hands of the sensible nurse. Where the patient had been fed meat, Lucille made a broth; where witch doctors had stimulated a weakened heart and system, she soothed. And so much depended upon the little brown girl. If she recovered then Lucille knew she would have made no mean friend in the grim chief who called daily to watch his daughter for a few moments, then, without a word, would disappear. And friends meant so much to her now. It was such a task she had laid out for herself, the way was so stormy and beset with thorns. But she could not lose. She must get back to Manila and clear her sweetheart of the charge against him.

It was on the eighth day she was awakened from one of the naps she had accustomed herself to taking, by the girl's turning on her pallet and regarding her out of eyes that held the light of sanity in lieu of the delirium it had seemed so impossible to combat.

Slowly, very slowly, under the abrupt relaxation of the strain under which she had been, Lucille's knees sank from under her and beside the bed of rushes she knelt, shaking with incoherent sobs, filled with a joy so great the tears refused to flow.

How long she knelt she did not know, was never to know. But merciful slumber came to her and she was awakened by the tender touch of a calloused hand upon her shoulder. Startled she sprang to her feet, then laughed at her alarm as she looked at the chief and saw from the expression upon his face that he knew his child was out of danger.

She turned to the patient, still sleeping. Yes, no one could fail to see that the crisis was reached and passed. "She is going to get well," said Lucille, and the chief smiled at her tone.

From outside came a sudden clash of sound, a rippling, drumming sound that diminished to almost an echo only to rise slowly, gradually into a perfect thunderous wave. There was something musically triumphant about it which seemed to her to jibe with the majestic tones of a huge organ.

Slowly the chief's right hand reached out, his head slowly bending in obeisance. Lucille wonderingly placed her fingers upon the forearm of the man and emerged into the open, her eyes rounded in wonderment at the sight that greeted her.

Gorgeously caparisoned in scarlet and gold, a wonderful throne of the same colors upon his back, a bronzed native astride his head, knelt a milk white elephant almost at her feet. Before the huts stood the natives, their wide shields held across the forearms of their right hands, while they drummed out the chorus she had observed before by slapping their spears against the tightly drawn surfaces. The old chief stood motionless beside the elephant, and she realized slowly that he meant her to take the seat.

She shook her head in negation. She was too utterly tired and worn out to do anything. Before she had time to regret her decision, the old man stepped toward her, unwinding a curiously shaped amulet from about his neck. Came a crowding forward of the natives from every direction, the men in the forefront, the women and children in the rear. Something in the silence that succeeded the drumming noise, in the sober faces of the orderly throng surrounding her, made her turn toward the chief rather expectantly.

Gravely as any king bestowing an order upon a loyal subject, the old man lifted the amulet by its two golden threads and dropped it about her neck, an amulet of a curious milky stone carved into the semblance of an elephant and glittering with tiny precious stones, as out as to spell out certain native words.

Lucille looked about, smiling at what she knew to be a form of thanks people's belief in her. And then the smile died upon her lips, faded from her eyes and was succeeded by one of fear.

For behind the throng, arms folded, his saturnine face impassive, cold, determined, stood Hugo Loubeque, his eyes fastened undeviatingly upon her.

What followed the ceremonial attendant upon the presentation of the white elephant to Lucille was all a blur to her. She remembered being taken to some temple, the triumphant return in the chair upon the back of the sacred beast, but always before her eyes loomed the figure of Hugo Loubeque. This afternoon, when she had come back to the hut which the chief assigned to her, she felt certain relief at knowing the man was about.

Vaguely she had dreaded his coming before but always had she thought it inevitable that he would come upon her. She knew him too well to imagine he could have survived his ship's fire and still lose track of the papers for which he had fought so hard. And the diary with his life's story, his mapped out scheme of revenge; the picture of the woman he loved which he had kept so many years— No, she had always felt that the man was far from defeated even though the belt had been thrown away long since and the contents transferred to a bag she carried next her heart.

Times there were when she would have fled from the place in a sudden fit of hysteria induced by thinking of the urgency for the information in her possession being in Manila. Cooler thought always made her grapple with the impulse for hate and place herself in the hands of this superior power which had looked after her through such startling happenings.

If the international spy was at work—and at work she knew he assuredly was, now he had located her—why did he not strike? That was the hardest part of her stay in the village—the constant strain of waiting for the inevitable.

It was the fourth day that her attention was irresistibly drawn to a native whose facial traits differed so materially from those of any of the men she had seen about the village that she studied him more closely.

Loubeque and His Savage Aid introduce Snakes into Lucille's Hut.

The man was squat, cross legged, upon a log just a little distance beyond the village. His eyes were narrow slits that emitted sharp slants of evil light when they fell upon her, a light that frightened her and made her turn hurriedly back toward her hut.

She had not made over twenty steps before an unseen menace cast its shadow upon her heart. Though she could hear nothing, she knew unconsciously that the man was following her at such a pace he was obviously doing so for a purpose.

Slowly, relentlessly, the pat pat of the native's feet came to her. She halted and whirled upon him. The slits of eyes met her own and she read there the light of an unconquerable purpose. Her lips opened but no words would come.

Cautiously, stealthily he advanced upon her. There was a deathlike coldness about him that reminded her of the one she knew to be his master. She could feel the glitter of his eyes, could read the meaning in the terrible hands which were outstretched toward her.

There seemed nothing to do, no way out of his clutches. She tried to shriek, but felt the sounds strangling in her throat. Her fingers encountered the slender golden threads that wound the amulet about her neck. She ripped at them as though they had caused her fright. And then everything became more distinct, more astonishing.

For, with a little snap of fright, the menacing figure dropped flat upon the ground, dropped before her. For a second she thought the man was dead, then her eyes widened with astonishment as slowly, with face turned always down, the man crawled in a wriggling motion suggestive of a snake, back, back, back, until his body was lost in the tangle of shrubbery where she had come across him. Now only a swaying of the leaves there, an occasional crackling of twigs betraying the fact that such a one had ever existed.

Lucille stared straight ahead of her. The terror that had fallen upon her was too great for immediate relief. Again her fingers sought her throat, falling upon the amulet which the grateful chief had presented to her and immediately she realized what had saved her from the man.

Perhaps it was the shock from her encounter with the strange native that made her slumber light, for the sound was very faint that wakened Lucille from the doze into which she finally had fallen. Like the rippling of a breeze through the leaves it was, and yet something ominous about it brought her bolt upright in bed, her every faculty alert.

Gradually she made out that it came from immediately over her head. The noise ceased abruptly. Startled at the suddenness of it, she looked at the spot from which the last noise had come. Blind, with a terror as mirror, her eyes followed the sinuous, graceful reptile that seemed to grow from out the very roof of the thatched hut, its body waving longer and longer before her horror stricken eyes, its flat head moving in all directions, two little threads continually flickering from out its hideous mouth.

With a wild scream of terror she darted through the hut opening, heaving a sigh of relief at feeling the warm, clean air of the out of doors upon her cheek after the fetid atmosphere which the snake intruder had seemed to bring with him.

There at the outskirts of the village she fought against her terror.

Fighting against herself, against everything feminine in her nature, she forced herself back to the hut. And then a great feeling of relief engulfed her, for the snake was gone. But the hut was in wild disorder. Everything inside it had been torn apart. Not an inch of its surface but had been covered carefully in the disruption. No snake had brought about this confusion.

Lucille smiled to herself. Hugo Loubeque was the man who had frightened her so artfully. But she still had the papers.

This story can be seen in Photo-Play at the Royal Theatre, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of each week.

GRATITUDE OF BRITAIN.

Rt. Hon. Herbert Samuel Returns Thanks to Canada and Other Generous donors to Mother Country.

LONDON, Nov. 19. — Rt. Hon. Herbert Samuel, president of the Local Government Board, made a lengthy statement in the House of Commons, appreciative of the gifts of food, produce and clothing from the Dominions, mentioning, in detail, a consignment from Canada and her provinces, who had vied with each other in the desire to give practical testimony to feelings entertained by them for the mother country. Distribution of these guts is being made gradually by a government committee for the prevention and relief of distress, to local representative committees in districts where any considerable degree of distress exists.

Some, also, are being used for the assistance of Belgian refugees being maintained in this country.

Gifts of money also have been very numerous, including sums of £20,000 each from the province of Nova Scotia and from Ceylon. All gifts in kind had been stored and handled, by port and other authorities, free of charge. He was sure the House of Commons would join in an expression of the country's thanks to the generous donors of these numerous and valuable gifts, and to those in this country who had so kindly undertaken gratuitously, their storage and distribution.

GERMAN SPY SYSTEM WORKS EVERYWHERE

PETROGRAD, Nov. 18.—Fresh examples of the ingenuity displayed by the German spies are being discovered almost daily, and the utmost vigilance has to be maintained in territory occupied by Russian troops. Recently it became apparent that information as to the positions and manoeuvring of troops at Insterberg was being conveyed to the enemy, but try as they might the Russians could not locate the spy or fathom his method. There were no telegraph or telephone wires available, nor was it possible for couriers to do the work. By day or night the so-called "optical connections" heliographs, light, smoke, etc., could not exist, yet the eGrmans were obtaining accurate and rapid information.

The Russian staff came to the conclusion that the only solution was submarine linek laid before the outbreak of hostilities. This assumption was justified in several instances and in the village of Margraboff, the local school teacher was found to be using a telephone, the instrument and wires of which were hidden in a hat box. The Russians had searched the man's house, but the hat box lying among a heap of men's, women's and children's clothes in a wardrobe attracted no, attention. Ftrom he hat box the telephone wires went to places where German troops were stationed and the operator actually had a small branch exchange by twhich he could communicate with particular commanders.

The spy gained his information either by his own observations or from the ussian soldiers whom he called into his home and regaled with dainties, the while he was 'pumping' them as to their movements. As soon as the telephone was discovered the Russian telephoned to the Germans some false and misleading information (with satisfactory results to themselves) and then destroyed the instrument. The teacher was shot.

CALLED KAISER A MUTT, NOW IS DEAD

CHICAGO, Nov. 18—John Strouble an aged German, sat on the edge of his bed early to-day reading a German newspaper's accounts of the fighting in Flanders. John Heffron, an Englishman, and Pete Linskey, a Swede, roomers in the same house, dropped in and took chairs.

"The Kaiser is a mutt," said Heffron, "he ought to be in jail."

Strouble drew a revolver from under his pillow and fired twice. Heffron fell over dead and Linskey fled with a bullet in his shoulder. Strouble was arrested.

Young Montreal Man Tells of Experiences at Battle Front and On the Marches

Son of Prominent Canadian Lawyer is With French Foreign Legion — Officer Reprimanded Soldier for Getting Wounded—French Artillery Marvellous.

NOW TRENCHES PROTECT

A graphic story of life on the firing line is told in letters just received by J. M. Greenshields, K.C., a prominent lawyer in Montreal, from his son, Charles G. Greenshields, who is in service with the French Foreign Legion Mr. Greenshields was studying in Paris when the war broke out, and he took the quickest route to the front in joining the fighting corps that has won its laurels in a thousand fights. The remuneration is one sou a day, plus endless excitemet.

Writing under date of October 30, Mr. Greenshields says:

"At last we are really on the firing line. My regiment occupied these trenches the night before last, relieving a French line regiment which had been here practically stationary for nearly a month. The road from the Village, about ten kilometres away, was without exaggeration the worst I have ever seen. The country in parts was low-lying and the road newly-built with the result that for distances of a mile and more he thick mud was ankle deep. In a few parts they had attempted the Canadian corduroy method, but without much success. Of course the traffic has been heavy and the weather wet, and moreover the weight of artillery and other war equipment is greater than ordinary waggons.

"In the drill, the officers always had difficulty in making the men keep quiet on night marches, but there was not much talking when we were approaching the trenches, and knew we were within range of the German rifle fire. The position here consists of a line of advanced trenches which are held by the first half section, and a line of what they call abri, about seventy-five yards behind, occupied by the second half section. I am in the latter. We act as a reserve in case of attack on the others by the Germans.

Making a Protection.

"Our captain was not satisfied with either the trenches or the abri, and consequently when we got here the night before last, after a tiring march, we were started to work cutting trees and saplings to make a new shelter. We worked all day yesterday and made a good start. The shelter when completed will be a hole in the ground two metres deep, three metres wide, and about thirty metres long. It will be covered with timbers and earth, and will offer complete protection against the German shrapnel. In that way the reserves will be in no danger from the ordinary field artillery. It will all be covered with branches, so as to make it invisible from an aeroplane.

"As I write, three German shells have fallen near our shelter without exploding at all. There are quite a number that don't explode, and those that do only hurt the men who are close to them.

"We are sleeping practically in a cave dug on a side hill. It is a bit damp, but when you are tired that doesn't interfere much with sleep. Luckily, I am in really wonderful health, in fact this morning the fellows all said that I was the strongest in our squad so far as resistance to fatigue, cold, exposure, etc., was concerned. This is because I have taken special care of myself, and really trained specially to stand the hardships. Where we are now, there is no such thing as washing or changing clothes or boots, but after a few days we are taken out and go into a village to rest, and we can then get cleaned up a bit. I don't think I have ever been more dirty, nor have I ever had such an appetite. I can eat anything at all at any time. The cooking here is a bit of a problem, but they have managed very well.

"It was really very funny yesterday, when our kitchen had to make a quick move. There was a battery of French artillery back of the kitchen, and when the Germans were trying to get the range they dropped a couple of shells almost into the kitchen, whereupon the latter moved away. Nobody was hurt. Most of the losses from artillery fire at these long ranges when men are entrenched, is due to carelessness.

"When the artillery opens fire everybody should get cover, but of course if a man simply stands up to watch the shells fating he has himself to blame if he gets hit. One of the men in our mitrailleuses section was wounded yesterday and instead of sympathizing with him the captain gave him a regular calling down because he had not got under shelter when the firing began. It as simply marvellous the rate at which the French artillery moves about and fires. It appears also that their shells do far more harm than the German. We have seen dozens of German aeroplanes, but none have dropped any bombs. I think the aeroplanes has proved of value only for reconnaissance purposes."

Saw Germans at Work.

In another letter, dated October 27, Mr. Green shields describes the arrival of the regiment at the trenches. e says:

"A positive stream of motor vans then began to arrive and we were naturally glad to know that for once we couldn't have to march to our new destination. There must have been at least a couple of hundred vans. We were loaded in twenty-five man to a van. Our knapsacks and rifles were put in the front and we sat on board benches wearing our full equipment. It was pretty crowded, but on the whole I was quite comfortable and was particularly lucky to have a back seat facing outwards so tht I could se what we were passing and also get some air. The vans were all closed so that the Germans couldn't tell whether it was a convoy of troops or provisions. We covered a distance of about 45 kilometres.

"I only wish I had time to describe the journey. From the moment we got away from the village of —— where we had been staying, we passed through a stretch of country which as far as could be seen was occupied by thousands of every kind of troops, Zouaves, cavalry, artillery of dozens of different regiments. On the road was a continuous line of motor vans, carts, and equippage of every kind going and coming. Lots of tired horses and tired men, but apparently the French must have had successes for everyone looked very cheerful. When we arrived at the end of the motor trip I saw my first Germans, some prisoners who were working on entrenchments and foundations for French artilery.

Abandoned Trenches.

"We marched about five kilometres and for the first time were within range of the eGrman artillery. A few shells landed near the column and we then tok a position behind a big hill where we remained until dark.

After dark we marched for about two hours to this village which is beyond the range of the German guns. Last night the firing never stopped for a minute. The big guns sound really just like a clap of thunder and at night the flash is just like the lightning. The fields all around here are covered with abandoned trenches and the country has evidently been fought over.

"They say the British have made a magnificent showin. They have made a reputation in this war which will change the general European opinion of the British army. Heretofore we have been looked upon as a negligible quantity, but Tommy Atkins has taught them all a lesson.

"The happiest men I have seen since we have been in the zone of actual fighting were the German prisoners. They were simply wreathed in smiles. I imagine that they are better fed here than in their own lines. We haven't yet ha dto sleep out of doors, as there are so many villages with barns and houses. I would like to go over this country after the war, it is so beautiful and the inhabitants are such simple fine people. It is twelve o'clock and we have been ordered to clean our boots and rifles and then spend the rest of the afternoon in sleeping. It is therefore quite likely that we will go into the trenches to-night. The French position here is very strong and the trenches are therefore quite comfortable."

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic" is a favourite expression where Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barbers' itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic, it prevents blood poisoning.

WAR AGAIN IN BIBLE LANDS.

The entrance of Turkey into the war means once more the blood-stained soil of the Holy Land will send to heaven the cries of the desolated and the dying. One of the earliest despatches reports fighting at Gaza. It will be recalled that Samson carried off the gates of this city. Turkish troops have mobilised aroud the Gulf of Akaba and the Sinai peninsula. Over this same ground more than 3,000 years ago the great prophet Moses led the children of Israel. Turkish troops have been reported as concentrated at Mosul on the Tigris, which is across the river from ancient Nineveh.

There has been widespread distress and devastation throughout the Holy Land caused by the wholesale conscription of all men, Christians and Moslems alike, between the ages of 18 and 45.

The Jewish colonists of Palestine have been especial sufferers. Actual deaths from starvation have been reported in the Holy City itself. Most of the 60,000 Jews in Jerusalem are from Russia, Roumania and Germany. Their source of livelihood has been the trade remittances which they have received through the mails from home. War has stopped this income. Many of the colonists are old people who have gone to the land of promise to spend their declining year and these are unequal to the special exertions necessary to obtain funds to leave the country. It is said that comparatively few of these Jewish settlers are Americans, but relief is sorely needed by them.

GERMAN LANCE HEAVY.

But It Is Nicely Balanced— Has a Blunt Head.

MANCHESTER, Eng., Nov. 19. — "Among the most interesting of the war trophies that have found their way over here," says the Manchester Guardian, "are some specimens of the German lance. It is not a wooden pole, but an eleven or twelve foot steel tube. It is very heavy, and at first seems quite unmanageable to a man of ordinary strength. But two-thirds of the way down from the head towards the butt is a wrapping of thick twine to give a grip. And if you hold it there, and there only, you find that it is so evenly poised that, as one admiring observer remarked, you could write your name with it.

"There have been some descriptions of cases where these tubular lances have crumpled up in action like an overburdened steel mast on a racing yacht. Perhaps that may be accounted for by the peculiar shape of the head. There is no point or spear of any kind. Instead, there is a solid piece of iron shaped exactly like the end of a giant poker, square and quite blunt."

DIXMUDE SHELLED BY ALLIED FLEET

500 HOME GUARDS OUT ON PARADE

FIGHTING IN FLANDERS HAS SLACKENED NO INFANTRY ATTACKS UPON ALLIES

Official Communique Reports Conditions Quieter Than For Some Time To-Day---Falling off in the violence of the Artillery Fire is Also Noted.

GERMANS ARE MAKING NO PROGRESS

PARIS, November 20.—The full text of the official communique is as follows:

"The day of November 19 was marked by the almost total absence of infantry attacks on the part of the enemy. At the same time, their artillery fire was much less violent than on the afternoon of November 18th.

"To the north the weather has been very bad, and snow has fallen.

"All the region of the Yser canal to the east of Dixmude is invaded by the waters.

"In front of Ramscapelle we have withdrawn from the water two 16.5 centimeter mortars, abandoned by the Germans. There has been a very intense artillery fire to the south of Ypres.

"On the centre there have been no important actions to report. In the Argonne three vigorous attacks on the part of the emenmy's infantry have been repulsed. On our right wing the Germans have reoccupied the destroyed section of Chauvoncourt. Further to the east we have made some progress."

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—The correspondent of the Chicago News cables as follows, from Amiens, France:

"When the Germans reached Compiegne they found it almost empty of able bodied men. Generally speaking the invaders conducted themselves well. One Saxon, however, billeted on a house where there was a defenceless young woman, began to court her assiduously. When she resisted his advances he attacked her. She succeeded in escaping and complained to the commanding officer. The latter accompanied her to the house where he saw every evidence of a violent struggle. The officer then turned to the soldier, and said: 'I give you just two hours in which to kill yourself; if you are not dead in two hours you will be shot.' The soldier then went behind the barricade and fired a revolver bullet into his head."

EXHAUSTED GERMANS GET REST

Near the Belgian Frontier, Nov. 18. — Unfit men are still arriving at Bruges, Ghent and Eecloo, from the front to gain the rest which is imperative after the repeated assaults at Dixmude and Ypres. Torn and mud stained uniforms and haggard faces bear eloquent witness to their terrible experiences.

It is estimated that 10,000 infantry, which until Friday had been engaged in holding the trenches between Dixmude, Bischoote and Ypres, are now in barracks around Bruges, solely because they are no longer fit to continue the struggle. They are said to have been replaced by new troops to some extent, but I have reason to believe the German force along the right wing has been materially decreased both by the necessity of sending back exhausted men and the transference of the maximum weight of the attacking corps to a point farther south.

WARSHIPS KILLED 1,700 GERMANS

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Basil Clark telegraphs to the Daily Mail from Dunkirk: "A week ago the Germans near the coast noticed that the English warships' fire spared the houses on the sea front at Middelkerke. They accordingly took up quarters in these houses. Then their scheme became known to the British war ships and the houses were suddenly bombarded fiercely by five vessels at once. The German casualties were enormous. A scouting officer estimated the number killed at 1,700. German aeroplanes to-day dropped two bombs over Cassel, killing a woman and a child."

FARMERS ARE FINED $40 IN COURT TO-DAY

Convicted of Supplying Deteriorated Milk to Cheese Factories—Magistrate's Caustic Remarks

"WHOLESALE SWINDLING"

In this morning's Police Court three farmers of this district were fined $40 and costs, amounting in all to about $48.00 each, for sending deteriorated milk to the Killarney and Ormond cheese factories. Mr. Thompson, representing the E.O.D. A. was in charge of the prosecution, and the farmers were unrepresented by counsel.

In rendering judgment the Magistrate said:

"I am sorry that I have to find you all guilty of these charges. I hope it will never occur again while I am presiding over this Court, but this shows a wholesale swindling of the cheese factories and a wholesale ignoring of a law that is made for the benefit of everybody. These occurrences are a great injury to a great industry, and I cannot afford to treat them lightly."

Marcus Post and James Ferguson were charged with sending deteriorated milk to Killarney cheese factory. Mr. R. W. Ward, Dairy Instructor and Sanitary Inspector, testified that on October 30 he tested the milk from Posts's and found that cream had been taken off and water added. Mr. Thompson said that Mrs. Post admtited to him that she had taken some of the cream off the milk. Post said that he did not know anything about it. If deteriorated milk was sent from his house he was ignorant of the fact and innocent of the charge.

Ferguson said that he had suffered al sorts of inconvenience at the hands of marauders in connection with his milk which was left at some little distance from the house to be collected. He nor his son (the only two people on the place) positively did not dilute or interfere with the quality of the milk in any way.

In both cases that Magistrate said that while all the statements made might be true, he did not thing he could take such excuses and found the men guilty.

Edward Flemming, charged with supplying deteriorated milk to Ormond cheese factory, said that by mistake his eldest daughter poured some milk into a pail containing water. The Magistrate, as in the other cases, ruled that he could not accept these excuses, and found the defendant guilty.

W. T. S. CLUB HAVE $50 FOR CHARITY

A highly successful patriotic tea was held by the young ladies of the W. T. S. Club, yesterday, at the home of Mrs. S. C. Warne, Gilmour street. The rooms were prettily decorated with flags and bunting against a background of dark red. Carnations and candles of a similar colour contributed a soft note in the harmony of the ensemble effect. The young ladies, themselves, enhanced the beauty of the affair in a fetching attire of white dresses with red caps and sashes.

An enjoyable programme of vocal and instrumental music was presented, those assisting being Misses M. Laing, R. Vosden, M. Bannie, Mrs. E. V. Warne, Messrs. Weller, Daly, Heagrahan, Carrighan and Simpson's Orchestra. The members of the Club present were:

PAVEMENTS ARE VERY SLIPPERY

A Prostrate Horse Attracts a Large Crowd

This morning between the hours of eight and nine o'clock, a horse belonging to the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Company, bit the dust at the corner of Hunter and Water Streets. The pavement was very slippery at this juncture. It required the services of three or four men and a crowd of over one hundred people before the animal was restored to its normal equilibrium. At first the horse tried to slide into a catch basin, but was prevented by the stout metal grating. Sacks were then tied to its feet and after one or two heroic struggles, the animal regained its feet.

CONGRATULATIONS TO SIR WILFRID

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Nov. 19.— Sir Wilfrid Laurier, leader of His Majesty's loyal Opposition, is 73 years old to-day. The years sit lightly on his shoulders and it may be said that his three years in Opposition have found his a younger man than when he held the responsibilities of office prior to 1911. He is still, as many have remarked, the youngest man in the House of Commons. Sir Wilfrid paid a visit to his office this morning and was the recipient of numerous messages of congratulations and good wishes from all parts of Canada and from all points of the Empire. From Premier Asquith, from Hon. Lewis Harcourt, from the Premiers of the Dominions oversea, from men in all degrees of life he receives cables, telegrams and messages.

Sir Wilfrid left for Quebec this afternoon, where he will address the Women's Canadian Club to-night.

Since the declaration of truce made by Sir Wilfrid Laurier when the war broke out, he has refrained consistently from participation in political controversy.

MAGNIFICENT TURNOUT AT PARADE OF HOME GUARD

JOSEPH SCOTT IS COMMITTED BY MAGISTRATE

Local Married Man Charged With Offence Against a Young Girl Must Stand Trial

OUT ON $8,000 BAIL

Joseph Scott, the local man, charged with a serious offence against a girl under fourteen years of age, was committed for trial yesterday afternoon by Magistrate Dumble after a hearing of the evidence. Mr. G. W. Hatton conducted the prosecution, and Mr. G. N. Gordon acted for the defence.

The incriminating evidence was given yesterday by the mother of the girl, the girl herself, and two other witnesses, and medical testimony was given by Dr. Mann. The offence with which Scott is charged is punishable by life imprisonment, with lashes, and he was allowed out on $8,000 bail, just double the amount asked before the evidence was heard. Scott is a married man with several children.

DE LAVAL MEN JOIN

Have Formed a Company in the Home Guard—Mr. G. A. Evans Elected as Captain

The De Laval Company will be represented in the Home Guard by a Company of their employees, and the inaugural meeting of their men to organize for this purpose was held at the Armouries last night. Twenty-four employees of the Company were present last night and with the rest of the Home Guard they took part in the drill and the parade during the first part of the evening. Immediately after the march they met and elected a Captain and 1st Lieutenant. Mr. G. A. Evans, Manager of the Creamery Sales Department, was elected as Captain, and Mr. H. E. G. Ide, as First Lieutenant. The election of the remaining officers was left until next Thursday night, when a meeting of a larger number of employees is expected. The twenty-four men from the De Laval Co., who turned out last night, have all been signed up as members of the Home Guard, and it is expected that before "recruiting" is completed that the De Laval Company will be 60 strong. It will consist, too, of good, husky men, who made a very good showing last night and looked as though they will give a good account of themselves in the future.

Demand For Resignation Of Sam Hughes

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 20. — The insistent demands from an influential section of the Government press in Toronto for the retirement of Major-General Sam Hughes from the position of Minister of Militia, as a result of his public rebuke of General Lessard, have created a considerable and varied comment at the Capital.

In Government circles it may be said that the storm of protest from Toronto has been apparently received somewhat calmly. While it is realized that these demands, and the general storm of protest are of such nature as not to be lightly regarded, it is not believed here that the Government will accede to the demands for his resignation. Premier Borden, when asked concerning his attitude in the face of the situation, remarked that he had nothing to say. There are rumours that if the Government's hand is further forced Gen. Hughes may be appointed Inspector General, a position which has been vacant for several years.

PETTIT.—At Goodwood, Ont., Can., on Saturday, Nov. 7, 191, midnight, at the residence of her mother, Miss A. Pettit, beloved daughter of Mrs. Frank N. Pettit, aged 35, after a lingering illness. Deceased was formerly an employee of the Examiner in Peterborough.

Five Hundred Men Present and Much Progress Toward Organization of Civic Regiment is Completed — Great Enthusiasm is Shown.

MADE FINE IMPRESSION

The turnout at the second drill of the Peterborough Civilian Rifle Association Home Guards at the armouries last night surprised even the most sanguine expectations of the officers. Fully five hundred men were on parade, a number that taxed the floor space of the armouries when it came to drilling. Seldom have the people of Peterborough taken hold of a project with so much enthusiasm as has been shown in connection with this movement, and so great has been the rush to enlist that the committee has been forced to consider the question of forming two regiments instead of the one originally planned.

At last night's drill the O.C.E. turned out with three companies and a parade state of 450 men. The Peterborough Light and Power Company and Radial Railway Company's employees had a company, the teachers and lawyers had another, the bankers another, and besides these were three or four companies. In all nine or ten companies of about fifty men each received instruction last night. A splendid staff of instructors had the men in charge and the progress made by the different sections was surprising.

Provisional officers for the different companies are being appointed and will be announced in a day or two. In addition the executive is making arrangements for securing a building close to the armouries — the old Murray Street church building—where a score of targets can be erected and provision made for giving every member of the Home Guards as much rifle practice as possible.

The Guards, over 400 strong, minus the members who were taking rifle practice and these being sworn in, surprised the citizens of Peterborough with a march down George Street, headed by the Maple Leaf band. Marching in fours the Guards swung along in good style, their steadiness and the precision of their marching arousing considerable favourable comment. At several points on the line of march the spectators applauded as the new regiment passed by. The route of the march was from the Armouries via Murray Street to George Street, along George Street to Charlotte Street, over to Water Street, up Water Street to Simcoe Street, and then back to the Armouries along Simcoe and George and Murray Streets.

On returning to the armouries the regiment was drawn up in a square and addressed by Capt. Goodwill and Rev. Canon Davidson.

Capt. Goodwill expressed his gratification at the turnout and informed the men of the plans of the executive. They meant to carry out Lord Kitchener's advice in regard to shooting, and with this end in view arrangements were being made to secure a building close at hand where the members would get a better opportunity for target practice. Capt. Goodwill expressed the thanks of the Home Guard to the Maple Leaf Band, which had volunteered its services for the march out, and to the Salvation Army Band, which had also offered to assist.

Rev. Canon Davidson congratulated the officers and men upon their splendid attendance and upon their bearing and marching. He assured them that every man of them could go to his home, feeling that he had done something for his country and for the Empire. The speaker heartily endorsed the movement and wished them every success.

The parade was then dismissed with the singing of the National Anthem.

A large number of the Guard detailed for rifle practice and instruction, spent a profitable evening in the miniature rifle range in the basement. Here Quarter Master Sergt. Edwards was in charge, and he was most courteous and helful in his handling of the squad under his wing. Some good shooting was done.

After the parade many of the Guard attended a lecture on the use of the rifle given by Col. Sergt. Dodds in the recreation room. Many useful hints were given and the members found the talk most useful.

During the drill the 57th Regimental Band enlivened the proceeding by playing in good style the British marching song, "It's a Long Way to Tipperary."

An automobile repair course has been added to the curriculum of Iowa Agricultural College.

FRIDAY, NOV. 20, 1914

HAIL! SIR WILFRID.

To-day when Sir Wilfrid Laurier counts his seventy-third year he is the most outstanding figure in Canadian life, as he has been for the past generation at least. After forty years of splendid public service, he is as alert as at the half-century mark. He celebrates his seventy-third birthday by going to Quebec to address the Women's Canadian Club. His eloquent appeals to the discharge of the duty of meeting national and imperial demands at this time gain strength from their being merely an echo of the life he has lived—true to every responsibility, amenable to every call of duty. His birth belongs to two generations ago, but his old age finds him in the van of the world's progress, as keen in mind; as devoted to duty, as he is robust in physical strength. Sir Wilfrid has well earned in himself and by the kind cooperation of a guarding Providence, the congratulations that will come to him on reaching the third year beyond the Psalmist's limit of life, from all parts of the Dominion he has so well loved and served, and from all parts of the Empire of which he has helped to make Canada a noble and worthy part.

STAMINA BEFORE STATURE.

It is proposed to organize in England a regiment of men whose merit is not more mens et manet than between the height of five feet and five feet three. Men of this size, it has been proven in actual experience, have more endurance, greater mobility and, it is safe to say, greater courage than men of greater bulk, than men of extended formation. Lord Roberts—5 ft. 3—is still an influence. His achievements as a soldier give value to, and confidence in, condensed manhood, and medical examiners hereafter will be inclined to regard stamina as more important than stature. Soldiers in this crisis are more for shooting than for show. Drawing a bead on an enemy is what counts. If the proposed battalion materialises, a good name for these game featherweights would be "Bobs'" Own Bantams, and we expect they will live, and fight, while they live, up to their name.

THE SINEWS OF WAR.

Great Britain has not only earned the Napoleonic reproach of "a nation of shopkeepers," but lived up to it with magnificent result. The Kaiser puts his trust in big guns and machine armies. Britain puts her trust in right, backed by money—the real sinews of war. Through her world-wide trade she has become the wealthiest nation in the world. She not only finances with ease her own immense war burden, but helps the dominions with money, and gives generous aid in this way to her allies. The Imperial Parliament, passed Lloyd George's proposal for a war credit of 1250 million dollars without "turning a hair." The Chancellor told Parliament that Britain's income was 12,500 millions a year. This accounts for the fact, which is splendidly a fact, that the war loan of 1750 million dollars is all subscribed, within three or four days after its announcement. Not only is Britain the strongest financially in the matter of liquid resources—of any nation in the world but, consequently, its credit is the highest. In concluding his budget speech, he appealed for support for the war. He said it was a loan to help the country to fight to win; that meant valor and defeat meant depreciation—it was an excellent investment because the credit of Great Britain was still the best in the world. Great Britain is a great country to be tied to. She is not great at the game of brag—but is good for a long race, and she might be excused for being proud of her ability, in conjunction with her Dominions beyond the Seas, to realise the jingo boast—

We do not want to fight,
But by jingo if we do,
We've got the ships, we've got the men,
WE'VE GOT THE MONEY, TOO.

CANADA'S GRAND OLD MAN IS SEVENTY-THREE TO-DAY

Our Foremost Canadian, with Health, Head, Heart and Vigour Unimpaired, Celebrates Another Birth-day —Little Sketch of a Big Life

Seventy-three years ago to-day at St. Lin, a Quebec hamlet nestling in the shelter of the Laurentians, there was born to Carolus Laurier and his wife Marcelle Martineau, a son, Wilfrid Laurier. Probably there is no one now living in the village who remembers the event. Probably no one at the time ever imagined that across the span of three score and ten years the steadily growing personality and influence of the obscure land-surveyor's son would dominate Canadian political development as no other personality has ever done in the life of the Dominion.

To-day, Sir Wilfrid Laurier stands recognized throughout the world as the greatest of all Canadians, as the most conspicuous statesman in Greater Britain. For nearly half a century he has stood unsullied and unshamed in the fierce light of party politics, a pride to all Canadians. After forty years continuous membership in the House of Commons, after twenty-six years as leader of the Liberal party, over fifteen of which were spent as Prime Minister of his country, he is still erect of bearing, there is still the wonted fire in his words, still the same keen, virile and undisputed leadership. He stands to-day the most dominant personality, as well as the most picturesque and most influential figure in the Dominion. To-day, from all parts of Canada, from Great Britain, from all the overseas Dominions, from scores of his devoted personal friends, from his political supporters and from his political opponents, came a flood of congratulatory messages, coupled with the prayer that he may long be spared to the public service of the country and Empire. And with health and strength, still apparently unimpaired with the passage of the years, with the eye undimmed, with the hand still steady, with courage, faith and optimism undiminished, there is every indication that this hope will be realised. As long as his strength remains, Sir Wilfrid will carry the burden of leadership which his party has imposed upon him, both in victory and defeat.

"For twenty years or ten or five," he said; to his followers in the Commons last May, "whatever may be the length of my time is in the hands of God; but so long as God spares me, I shall continue to give my best, however poor that may be, to the service of those principles which we all hold so dear."

The Boy and the Young Man.

Sir Wilfrid's mother died when he was but six years old. His father sent the young lad to be educated at a school in a neighbouring Scotch settlement, where he boarded for a time with store-keeper Murray, a good Scotch Presbyterian. There the coming Premier of Canada first learned the English language and religious tolerance, two endowments which have helped to give to the man of French descent and Roman Catholic faith, the grace and facility of expression and the breadth of vision irresistibly appealing alike to both the great races in Canada, English and French, Catholic and Protestant.

For seven years he attended L'Assomption College, where at the age of sixteen he was recognised as the leader of his class with a brilliant career predicted for him. In 1860, he began the study of law as a student at McGill. Four years afterwards he was graduated with honors, and gave the valedictory of his class. In that valedictory—his first recorded public utterance—he gave expression to the essential principles which have animated his whole public career. "The work of the maker and of the student of law," he said, "is to cause justice to reign."

Immediately after graduation, the young lawyer began to take an active interest in public questions, joining a group of progressive young French-Canadians, assisting in the editing of a weekly paper and taking part in debates on public questions of the moment. This young barrister went to Arthabaskaville to practice his profession. In 1868 he married Miss Zoe Lafontaine, of Montreal, in whom he has found, during all the succeeding years, a true and loyal helpmate. Their married life, though unblessed with children, has been an ideally happy one. In 1871, he was elected to the Quebec Legislative Assembly for Drummond and Arthabasca by a majority of over one thousand. At Quebec, he made an immediate impression. Three years later, came promotion to the Federal arena. He was elected to the Commons in 1874, and seconded the address in reply to the speech from the Throne at the opening of the new Parliament. The Commoners of that day at once recognised that a new star had arisen on the horizon. In October, 1877, he was called to the Government in the Mackenzie Administration, and was sworn in as Minister of Inland Revenue. Thus for thirty-seven years Sir Wilfrid has been a member of the King's Privy Council. In 1878, he was returned to the Commons for Quebec East, and since then he has continuously represented that riding in the House.

Liberal Leader for Thirty-Seven Years.

In 1887, sixteen years after entering Parliament, he was chosen leader of the Liberal Party when Hon. Edward Blake laid down the mantle and recommended the brilliant young lieutenant from Quebec as his successor. The new leader took up the burden with diffidence and perhaps with some misgivings on the part of many Liberals as to the wisdom of choosing a party leader from the Province of Quebec. These misgivings were speedily allayed. The wisdom of the choice was vindicated from the first and for the ensuing twenty-seven years it has been unquestioned. As leader of the party he issued the call for the Dominion Liberal Convention which met at Ottawa in 1893 and laid down the fundamental principles of Liberal policy on which the Liberal victory of June 23rd, 1896, was won. On July 13th, 1896, Premier Laurier formed the "Ministry of all the talents."

The Laurier Administration.

With that Government was inaugurated a new era of Canadian prosperity and development. Of the fifteen years of the Laurier administration little need be said here. A new Canada came into being. National trade and prosperity grew steadily as never before. Immigration increased tenfold. National revenues outgrew national expenditures and the per capita debt went steadily down. National unity and harmony among the various elements of the Canadian population found expression in a new national pride and a new national spirit. The British Preference, granted first in 1897 and increased in 1900, created and developed a new Imperial sentiment based on mutual advantage and mutual good-will. The construction of the National Transcontinental Railway, built practically out of Liberal surpluses, rolled back the map of Canada 400 miles. And with the growth of the national self-consciousness and pride, there was a corresponding growth of Imperial patriotism, based on local autonomy with common co-operation, common needs and common aspirations for the security, welfare and unity of the whole Empire. As the London Times has expressed it: "Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the French Roman Catholic Premier of a self-governing federation, in which British Protestants are in the majority, has expressed more faithfully and more truly than any statesman who has spoken yet, the temper of the new Imperial patriotism fostered into self-consciousness by the South African War."

These are but a few of the outstanding achievements of the Laurier administration. Behind every influence and result of that administration was the controlling and guiding hand of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. None will accord more willing assent to that statement than his late Cabinet colleagues and his followers in Parliament who know best the difficulties he had to surmount, the divergent influences he had to reconcile, the tactful generalship he had to exercise and the firm and far-sighted leadership he had always to exert.

Vindication After Defeat.

His Government was defeated on September 21st, 1911, on an issue of Sir Wilfrid's own choosing—an issue on which Liberals and Conservatives were alike pledged when he came into power and an issue firm-based on the fundamentals of Liberal policy and on democratic principles of economic justice and equal freedom to all classes of the community in matters of trade as in matters of education, religion and responsible government. Of the "unholy alliance," of the sectional and creedal misrepresentations exploited against him, of the organized influence of wealth and the Big Interests which combined to bring about that defeat, and of the moral of the political and economic conditions of the country during the past three years, the people of Canada are now fairly well seized. Vindication of the character and aims and record of a statesman never followed a defeat more quickly.

In Office or Out, the Greatest Canadian.

It is no vain boast of Liberals to say that Sir Wilfrid Laurier never stood higher in the estimation of his country, and never possessed the confidence of all to a greater extent than he does to-day. The quivers of party antagonism have emptied all their shafts against him. Time has but proven the high sincerity of his purpose, the consistency of his political principles, the integrity of his public and private life, the far-sighted vision of his statesmanship, the democracy of his Liberalism, the courage and faith of his Canadianism, and the sanity of his Imperialism. In office or out of it, he is still "the greatest Canadian," increasingly beloved of his political friends and increasingly respected by his opponents.

The Elixir of Youth.

At seventy-three he is still "the greatest fighter of them all." Forty years of strenuous public life have brought no slackening in the vigour of mind or energy, nor any discouragement as to the ultimate triumph of the principles for which he has stood. There is an elixir of perpetual youth in a good cause and in a good fight. That elixir is in the veins of the "Old Chief" who is to-day leading his party with all his old-time courage and inspiration. "I have endeavoured to meet success without elation, and reverse without discouragement," he said to his followers in Parliament last May in acknowledging their testimonial to him on the completion of forty years of continuous membership in the Commons. The Father of Parliament, in point of length of service as in point of ripe judgment, oratorical grace and public experience, he is still, in Opposition as in Power, an optimist and an unflagging worker. During the fifteen years of his Premier ship, Sir Wilfrid with the exception of his Imperial Conference trips and his Western tour of 1910, and during election campaigns, was never away from his post at the Capital for more than a week at most in any one year. As the leader of His Majesty's loyal opposition he is now rally in his office attending to a large correspondence, looking after the details of party organization, receiving many callers who seek his advice or assistance, and keeping abreast through books and periodicals of all national problems and world movements.

The Man and His Policies.

For nearly half a century Sir Wilfrid has fought the battles of Canadian democracy—for responsible government, for social justice, for equality of opportunity, for freedom for the common people in the age-long fight between entrenched and aggressive self-interest and altruistic common interest. "The happiness of the masses of the people is the underlying consideration of Government," he said to the students of the University of Toronto last December. And in the policies he now advocates there is proof of his sincere belief in the ideal of government he thus stated. He is leading the fight for tariff revision downwards so that greedy men may be prevented from taking undue tolls from their fellow men, so that combines and corporations may be curbed when they attempt "to fix prices one way to the producer and another way to the consumer. He believes that responsible government is the foundation stone of democratic institutions; that militarism has no place in modern democracy and that arbitration between capital and labour and between nation and nation is the hope of civilization and a practical ideal of government. He believes that Great Britain in the present world conflict is now battling for that ideal and his practical loyalty to British institutions and to all that the British flag stands for has been shown in the present crisis and has assisted the recruiting movement by personal appeal in his own Province. Some of his opponents may have attempted to play politics with a national crisis and may have sought an election appeal this Autumn, relying for victory on a wave of patriotic sentiment. Sir Wilfrid has called a truce to party politics, and has resolutely refused even to criticise a single act of the Government since the war broke out. His imperialism is summed up in his declaration, "I believe the best British subject is the best Canadian." Our duties as British subjects, he has always maintained, must ever go hand in hand with our rights as Canadians. That gives the keynote to his attitude on the naval question, and on the whole question of Imperial cooperation in matters of trade and defence. The moral and the vindication of that stand, as embodying the true basis of permanent Imperial unity and enduring loyalty, are shown in the whole-hearted response from every self-governing Dominion to the Mother and's call for help in the present crisis.

Come Fight With Me.

The appeal of his whole life, the chivalry of his nature, the poetry, and imagination of his eloquence, the courage and the faith of high purpose make him to-day, at seventy-three years of age, an exemplar and leader for every young Canadian. At seventy three he is more than ever a young Canadian, in hope, in outlook, and in enthusiasm for service for the common weal. "Fight on, I call upon you to fight the battle of public service," was his message last December to the young Liberals of Ontario gathered at Hamilton. "Stand to your ideals. Liberalism must turn with the same unvariable courage to the new problems of social construction and social progress as our fathers applied to the large and pressing problems of constitutional reform."

And to the students of Toronto, last December, the Canadian Gladstone gave this magnificent clarion call to service: "My young friends, go out into the world to service. Make the highest thought of service your inspiration. Problems there are — big problems. To-morrow, the day after to-morrow, it will be your turn to grapple with them. Serve God and your country. Be firm in the right as God gives you to see the right. You may not always succeed. Progress is often punctuated with reverses. You may meet reverse—but the following day stand up again and renew the conflict; for truth and justice shall triumph in the end."

MR. G. A. GILLESPIE, M.P.P., WAS RE-APPOINTED DIRECTOR

Splendid Meeting of Dairymen's Association Held Yesterday at Warsaw.

THE SPEAKERS

One of the best meetings ever held in the history of the Dairymen's Association of this district was that which was held yesterday afternoon at Westwood. It was very largely attended and much enthusiasm was shown. Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., occupied the chair and introduced the speakers. The reports of the dairy instructors, Messrs. R. W. Ward and D. J. Cameron, were read. Mr. L. A. Zufelt, superintendent of the Dairy School, Kingston, was present and gave a splendid address, full of instruction, on the subject of "Butter and Cheese-Making." Mr. H. W. Coleman, superintendent of cow-testing associations in town, spoke on cow testing.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., was re-appointed director to the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association.

MR. CAMERON'S REPORT.

Mr. D. J. Cameron, dairy instructor for the Lindsay district, presented the following report:

In presenting my report as your dairy instructor for season 1914, I wish to state that I had under my supervision 24 cheese factories and five creameries.

Three cheese factories which were in operation in 1913 did not open this year. Bensfort was burned down late last fall, and was not rebuilt. North Verulam and Crown decided not to open this year as their milk supply had become too low to be profitable. This was brought about chiefly by creamery and city milk supply competition. Central Smith, which for some years has been manufacturing both cheese and butter, made butter only this season.

Twelve of the cheese factories are owned by private individuals and 12 by stock companies. One creamery is owned by stock companies and four by private individuals; 10 of these cheese factories sold on the Peterborough Cheese Board, seven on Lindsay Board, one on Belleville Board, while five factories sold as regulars to different firms, selling subject to Peterborough Board prices. In comparing the returns from the several factories I find little or no difference in the price received for the cheese, showing that the different boards are practically on a level as regards prices paid.

COOL CURING ROOMS.

Only eight factories are equipped with cool curing rooms. I am sorry I cannot report a greater number in this class, as there is no doubt that a cool curing room is a profitable investment and should be in every cheese factory. Some few factories were able to take advantage of local cold storage, still even this does not take the place of the cool curing room as very often cheese are injured by heat while still too green to be shipped to cold storage, causing a loss both in quantity and quality.

Seven factories paid by the Babcock test: 3 use the straight fat method and 4 use the fat plus 2 method. I will not take time here to discuss these two methods, but will simply say that in my opinion either one is preferable to the pooling system.

In making tests for adulteration, I found two samples to be deteriorated which were turned over to the proper authorities to be dealt with according to law. In one case a fine of $50 and costs was imposed.

The average test for fat in milk for the season was 3.52 per cent., a very slight decrease from last year's average. The average loss in the whey was .20 per cent. Four factories manufactured both butter and cheese and four made butter from the whey.

10,000 LBS. OF WHEY BUTTER.

About 10,000 lbs. of whey butter were made in this district this season, and this was mostly sold to the patrons for home consumption. More attention to sanitation might be observed by some in the work of whey separating. All pipes for conveying whey from vats to separator should be arranged so as to be conveniently cleaned and kept sanitary. Butter made from whey which has passed through dirty, slimy pipes cannot be expected to be clean in flavour.

The whey was returned in the cans at 10 factories and was pasteurized at three. There is no question in my mind as to the benefits derived from proper pasteurization. I have tested pasteurized whey this season where it was being returned to the patron almost as sweet as when it left the milk vats the previous day, and with practically the same test for fat. The work of whey pasteurizing can be cheaply done, but to be effective and satisfactory, arrangements must be made to have the whey tanks emptied daily and kept clean.

These 24 factories received milk from 1,058 patrons. The number of cows, as near as I could agther, were 7,322. This shows a decrease in the number of cows from last year of about 1,000. As I have not yet received full returns from the factories I cannot give here the average yield per cow, but I would estimate it as somewhat lower than last year, on account of the extremely dry season and short pastures, which you are fully aware we had to contend with throughout this district. I am very much pleased to report a decided increase in the number of new silos built this year, 61 new ones being reported to me, more double the number built last year. Had the dairymen of this district been provided with silage this season when the pastures failed, they would have had a much greater profit from their herds.

SANITARY CONDITIONS.

In regard to the sanitary condition of the milk supply, while we had favorable weather, the milk was delivered in very good condition, fairly free from bad flavours and generally sweet, but in the warm weather considerable over-ripe milk was received. If you as producers wish to improve the standard of quality in your cheese, we must ask you to give more attention to delivering nothing but clean cool milk in sound condition.

I would estimate that about 10 per cent. less milk was received by the cheese factories than last year. This decrease may be attributed to unfavourable weather conditions, fewer cows, creamery and city supply competition, and a tendency on the part of some dairymen to drift out of the work. I would urge on you as milk producers the importance of increasing the milk supply, if we are to preserve the cheese industry in this district. The high price of cheese and butter should be a strong incentive along this line, and I would suggest that every patron aim to be ready for an early start next spring and get your factories going as early as possible.

The quality of your cheese I consider was well up to the standard. We have had very few complaints. The markets have been favourable and our cheese was in good demand. Under these favourable conditions, there is perhaps a danger of us becoming more careless and indifferent, and I would advise that we be prepared for a reverse by turning out goods of first-class quality at all times.

CHEESEMAKERS GOOD.

The cheesemakers did very good work and I have every confidence in the ability of the men who have charge of your factories. I am only sorry that the amount of cheese manufactured has not been sufficient to make their work more profitable.

The factories have all been kept in fairly good sanitary condition. About $1,000 was spent this year in improvements to buildings and equipment. A few factory buildings are still in need of more or less repair, and in these cases I have made some recommendations which I believe will be carried out.

The five creameries which I visited were all kept in very good condition, and were under capable management. They were all operated on the cream gathering system, one using the individual cans and four using the 30-gallon and jacketed cream can. There is vast room for improvement in the conditions of cream as received at the creamery. Most of the cream is over-ripe, and if we in Ontario hope to compete with the other provinces in butter making, more care must be taken in cleanly handling and quick cooling of cream, and holding it at a low temperature until delivered.

CREAMERIES WELL EQUIPPED.

The creameries are all very well equipped. One has the Madison Cooper system of refrigeration, one has the cylinder system and three use ice storage. The average temperature of storage for season was 42 degrees. The number of patrons who supply cream was 875. Two creameries have scales for weighing cream samples from Babcock test.

Ten samples of butter were tested for moisture, the average test being 13.68 per cent.

Before closing, I would thank all those who, by their co-operation, have assisted and encouraged me in my work. The Federal Department of Agriculture, by their cow testing associations, have opened up sources of useful education to the dairyman. I would like to see the people of this district more ready to take advantage of this assistance as I am satisfied it would result in a greatly increased production, and more profit from the dairy industry.

MR. WARD'S REPORT.

Mr. R. W. Ward, inspector in Peterborough section for 1914, reported that 23 cheese factories and two creameries operated during the past season in his territory. He made 73 day visits and 269 call visits; and talked dairying to 184 patrons. Four samples of milk out of 184 were found to be adulterated. One was let off with a warning owing to certain facts in the case; the other three are under advisement by Mr. Publow.

The butter-fat average of all tests of milk was 3.69, and of whey .36. Mr. Ward found the factories in good condition, and the only exceptions to the high standard set at the opening of the season were due to lack of skilled help and short water supply. He advised patrons to put in an supply this winter in order to cool night milk immediately after milking.

CHEESE DECLINE.

Increased consumption of milk and cream by an ever increasing population, an increase in butter-making and stock-raising were given as the reason in the falling off in cheese production. He urged the continuance of cheese-making and pointed out the necessity of larger factories. Small factories make the expenses too high on the producer. Mr. Ward declared that during the past few years there has been considerable fault with the supply of pure water in some factories. The essentials he enumerated to make the industry more profitable were,—an abundant clean, cool milk supply under all weather conditions, properly equipped factory, cool curing room and qualified maker; perfect sanitary conditions at the farms and about the factories.

PIMPLES FOR THREE YEARS

Marvellous Zam-Buk Cure.

Mr. Willard F. Allen of 258 Pleasant street, Halifax, N.S., writes: "Up to a year ago my face was a mass of pimples, which, besides being extremely embarassing, caused me a good deal of pain. I used all kinds of tonics and salves, also remedies prescribed by my physician. These were of very little benefit to me. My face would clear somewhat at times and I would think that I was on the road to a permanent cure, and then the trouble would return and the pimples and sores be worse than ever. This condition of affairs continued for about three years.

"One day I happened to see an account of a remarkable cure of eczema by Zam-Buk; so I thought I would try Zam-Buk also. I sent for a box, and the results were so very pleasing that I procured a larger supply. I persevered with Zam-Buk for three months and at the end of that period my face was cleared of all unsightly pimples.

"I attribute my recovery solely to the use of Zam-Buk, as I did not use any other remedy during the time I was using it. As my case was of long standing and very obstinate, I consider my cure a wonderful triumph for Zam-Buk, and would heartily recommend it to anyone afflicted as I was."

If you are suffering embarrassment and pain from pimples, boils, eczema ulcers, running sores, or any skin trouble, you too should apply Zam-Buk.

All druggists and stores, 50c box, 3 boxes, $1.25, or postpaid from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, on receipt of price. Refuse substitutes. Send this advertisement, name of paper, and etc. stamp for free trial box.

LINDSAY POLICE ON THE TRAIL

LINDSAY, Nov. 20.—There is still some mystery surrounding the whereabouts of John Speedy, and it may develop into a romance if Chief Short does not intercept the elusive John, and turn it into a police court case and charge him with non-support of his wife.

It appears that this man with a quick-march name is in a lumber camp north of Lindsay, according to a report received by Chief Short this morning. He is not Speedy any more, but bears the appelation of David Burley, who the report states was dressed, when last seen, in a dark suit, black or blue, light green hat, woollen sweater trimmed with red, tan boots, and his stature is described as tall and thin with his face shaven clean.

Speedy's wife lived in Mutual Street, Toronto, and is anxious about the man who a few years ago promised to love and protect her. He was in Lindsay about the 19th of last September and was supposed to have left town in company with a Lindsay man who had a doubtful reputation in regard to his domestic felicity.

GIVEN A MONTH ON THEFT CHARGE

In Police Court this morning William Graham, said to hail from Toronto, was given a month in goal for stealing a raincoat from a local hotel. The raincoat, valued at $9, was stolen from the cloak room of a local Hostelry, and the detective department was informed of the loss. Their investigations resulted in the arrest of Graham, who this morning pleaded guilty to stealing the coat. It was his first appearance in Police Court. He said he was drunk when he took the coat. As noted above he was given a month in the County Gaol with hard labour.

THE CITY IS NOT LIABLE

The matter of the city and the Edward Green Estate was taken up at last night's meeting of the Legal Committee. After considerable discussion it was decided to deal with the question at a meeting to be called later.

Mr. A. E. Dixon, Mr. H. Rush, and Mr. A. J. Johnston, representing Edward Green; R. R. Hall and W. G. Ferguson for the Otonabee Power Company, and J. W. Meyers, of the Peterborough Cereal Company, were present. The request of the Green Estate, to close the street or reserve from Water street along the rear of the Green property, and convey it to the estate, was considered.

The representatives of the Otonabee Power Company, and Mr. Meyers, of the Cereal Company, said they looked upon the reserve as valuable to their companies. Mr. Hall suggested that the city or the Utilities Commission purchase the Otonabee Power Company's property.

On motion of Mayor Buller and Alderman Saunders, it was decided to leave the matter over until another meeting.

Regarding the claim of Dr. Cameron, who alleges that his automobile was damaged as a result of the city's negligence, Mr. G. N. Gordon, City Solicitor, reported that "in his opinion the city was not liable."

Great interest is being taken among parents over the appearance of the children's photograph in the Christmas Number of the Examiner, and the Roy Studio reports that many children's photographs have been taken recently. Parents should note that only photographs of the little ones taken before December 1st can be accepted. Better make an appointment at the Roy Studio before the 1st of next month.

RUSSIANS PAY LITTLE ATTENTION TO GERMAN OPERATIONS

Grand Duke Nicholas' Southern Force of 1,600,000 Men is Swinging Around to Conquer Austrian Poland—Russian Commander Retiring From Von Hindenburg to Weaken His Line.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 20.—With a force of 1,600,000 men formed in two fronts, one guarding against any reinforcements attacking through the snow-covered Carpathian Mountain passes, while the other strikes hard at Cracow, the Russian army is about to swing around with a crash which may shatter the power of Austria and Germany in Austrian Poland. The Russians are within 25 miles of Cracow, the last stronghold of the Teuton allies on the Russian frontier, and despite the German feint at Warsaw and the stubborn resistance of the Austrians, the columns of the Czar's mighty army continues to press on to the assault on the fortress and the eviction of the enemy from the frontier fortresses.

The German advance in considerable force along the narrow battle front of the west bank of the Vistula river is regarded by military experts as being a feint at Warsaw, capital of Russian Poland, in an attempt to draw Russian troops away from the advance on Cracow, and to distract attention from the efforts of the German soldiers about to establish a strongly-fortified defence line from Kalitsz to Cracow. The German plan also is intended to relieve their troops in East Prussia, now giving away along the entire line, by rendering a Russian further advance untenable.

It is reported here that the Russians in East Prussia have driven back the Germans on the Angerburg-Gumbinnen front, although in the Polish territory between the Vistula and Warthe rivers, the Russian advance guard gave ground.

All that is definitely known of the latter operations is that the Russian advance guard, consisting largely of cavalry, which advanced right up to the German frontier, after the battle of Warsaw, met superior forces of the enemy and has been compelled to fall back more than half the distance covered in the advance.

The Germans are sending very strong forces of men and guns into the country between the two rivers, where the battle must be fought, hoping that in this confined area the Russians will not be able to deploy their enormous forces to their advantage, as they have done in practically all the previous battles.

Grand Duke Nicholas, the commander-in-chief, however, can choose his own ground for the battle, and it is probable that he will select it as far away from the German lines of communication as he can.

Systematic destruction in the region through which the Germans have passed in Poland, cannot be considered accidental. It must have been carried out by direct order. To-day Poland presents a still more striking example than Belgium, of the determination of the German forces to ruin their enemies.

West of the Vistula river, in the neighborhood of Warsaw, Poland is one mass of ruins. All railroad stations and water reservoirs have been destroyed, telegraph poles have been cut down and telegraph apparatus in every place broken up. Bridges, including even the small viaducts, have been blown up and factories with modern machinery, especially in Lods, have been destroyed or ruined beyond repair.

Public opinion in Russia demands liquidation and sequestration of all German property, including land.

HAS REACHED A DEADLOCK

Great Battle in Flanders May Last for Months

FLOODS HOLD UP CONFLICT

LONDON, Nov. 20.—A feature of the fighting in the western theatre of war, as reported by the French War Office, was the capture of Tracy-le-Val, close to the western angle of the battle front, by France's Algerian troops.

Military observers agree that the fighting in Flanders may continue several months. Both armies are using boats and rafts in attacks in the flooded area between Nieuport and Dixmude. For the first time since the war started artillery has proved ineffective. French marines yesterday crossed on rafts the inundated approaches to Schoorbacke, West Flanders, while a British force charged by road. The fighting was desperate, but the Germans were routed with heavy losses.

Floods continue to hamper operations on the northern front, but positions are being strengthened from Ypres to Arras. The bulletin says new big guns have arrived at the front and that the general situation in Flanders and northern France is virtually unchanged.

According to a correspondent of De Tyd, the German losses in the southwestern portion of Belgium have been so terribly high that the dead, instead of being buried, are burned. Wherever possible this is done at some distance from the fighting line, but in some places, this is out of the question and pyres are raised within sight of the active soldiers.

It is said that the Kaiser's visit to Thielt, where a British aviator dropped several bombs, was due to the desire to arouse the enthusiasm of the army.

A casualty list received in London yesterday from the British army headquarters in France under date of Nov. 15 contains the names of nine officers killed, eighteen wounded and two missing.

Snow, sleet and cold now prevail along the battle line in the western part of Belgium. Pneumonia and rheumatism are said to be claiming as many, if not more, victims than rifle bullets and shrapnel. This is said to be specially true of the Germans, but the sufferings and consequent disablement are equally as heavy among the French-British troops.

Boats Pressed Into Service

Belligerents in Belgium Cross Flooded Area in Scows

BRUGES, Belgium, Nov. 20.—Fighting between the German and allied forces in the inundated territory between Dixmude and Nieuport on the North Sea coast, is now frequently being carried on in boats.

Artillery, for the first time in the war, has proved ineffective, but personal bravery and enterprise are counting for much, and the battle is beginning to resemble the classical siege of Leyden in the sixteenth century with raids and counter raids by means of flat-bottomed boats.

Two corporals of the Seventh Belgian Infantry have been made Knights of the Leopold Order for transporting forty men, including fifteen severely wounded, across the inundations under heavy fire.

The battle in its present stage, army officials say, may last several months.

Glasgow Must Hasten Repairs.

RIO JANEIRO, Brazil, Nov. 20.—British cruiser Glasgow, which arrived here Nov. 17 to repair the damages sustained in the naval battle of the Chilean coast Nov. 1 has obtained permission from the Brazilian Government to enter drydock and to receive the most urgent repairs. The repairs must be completed within seven days and at the expiration of that time the vessel will immediately sail for the high seas.

The Glasgow has five holes in her hull made by shells in the battle and four sailors were wounded.

Lindsay Man In The Toils

Was Advised to Keep on Walking

TORONTO, Nov. 20 — A great walker is William Nobles who walked all the way from Lindsay here. The way must have been pretty dusty, though, because William sought out a saloon as soon as he arrived with the result that he was brought up in the Police Court yesterday.

"I'm on my way to Hamilton," said Nobles; "going to walk, too."

"All right; start walking right now," Magistrate Cohen told him.

TO BEAT AUSTRIA RUSSIA'S OBJECT

THE HAGUE, (via ondon), Nov. 19—A Russian staff officer, passing through here, has this to say as the cause of the present German success in Poland:

"The Russian army in Poland maintains three times as many cavalrymen as the Germans. This cavalry swarmed after the retreating Germans and when the Germans suddenly stopped the Russian cavalry was dashed to pieces like migrating birds flying against a rock.

"Meanwhile the main body of the Russians, 1,600,000 men, whose absolute purpose is to beat the Austrians decisively, is proceeding unmolested to attack Cracow, leaving a smaller detachment to besiege Przemysl.

"Thereafter," the officer concluded, "the Russians do not intend to attempt to cross the Carpathians, but following the Oder River, will make their main attack on Germany by way of Oppeln, Breslau and Glogau."

NEXT ATTRACTION

The Ernie Marks Stock Company, with Ernie and Kittie Marks and a select company of players in a repertoire of high class plays and refined vaudeville, will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House for an engagement of five night and two matinees, commencing Tuesday night, Nov. 24th. The show Mr. Marks is bringing to this city this season is by far the best he has yet offered the theatre-going public, every piece is correctly and beautifully costumed, and no such plays have ever been attempted by a travelling company in the past. Mr. Marks has engaged a very high-salaried company for the present tour, thus securing the very best artists on the American stage today. The vaudeville carried by this company is of the better sort, and right up to the minute. The Marks Bros.' shows need no recommendation to the lovers of amusement, as they are without doubt the best known showmen on this side of the globe. There will be a change of play every night, also new vaudeville between the acts. You had better arrange to get in the opening night, as you won't miss a single performance during the engagement at the local playhouse. For advance sale see display advt. in this paper. Popular prices: Night 10, 20 and 30 cents; matinees 10 and 20 cents.

FLEMING WAS AWARE OF EXTORTION FROM LUMBERMEN

Premier of Conservative Government in New Brunswick Not Only Knew of Extortion From Lumbermen and Contractors, But He Directed Disposition of Money--Acquiesced in Collection.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Nov. 20.—The report of the royal commission appointed to investigate certain charges made by L. A. Dugal, M.P.P. for the County of Madawaska, against Hon. J. K. Flemming, Premier of New Brunswick, and Hon. M. F. McLeod, formerly Provincial Secretary, were released for publication last night. There are two reports, one dealing with the charge that Mr. Flemming, through the agency of W. H. Berry, chief superintendent of scalers for the province, extorted certain large sums of money from the holders of timber leases in the province, and the other dealing with the construction of the Valley Railway.

In the timber case Mr. Flemming is found not guilty of directing the collection of funds, but the report declares that Mr. Flemming "was well aware that moneys were being collected for a purpose unquestionably improper," and that he manifestly "directed the disposition of such money when collected, also that he acquiesced in the collection of such money at a time and from a source highly and grievously improper."

In the Valley Railway case it is reported that the charge has been sustained. The commission report states that no public money has been diverted, and that the Valley Railway has been well built at a cost not unreasonable. It also exonerates any other member of the Government from suspicion of wrong-doing, and finds the charge against Hon. Mr. McLeod also not proven.

In a letter to the electors of the province, Mr. Flemming declares his innocence of extortion, claims that what contributions were made to the campaign funds were voluntary and challenges F. B. Carvell, the leading spirit in the prosecution, to resign his seat in Carleton County and make a test of public confidence at the ballot box.

The reports are very lengthy, covering nearly 30,000 words, and made up for the most part of reviews of the evidence. The Government at a meeting last night heard them, but took no action.

DEMANDS ON CHARITY DEPT.

Are Increasing--No Place to Store Supplies

Mr. F. W. Miller, Relief Officer, states the demands being made upon the Charity Department of the city are numerous. This is irrespective of the Patriotic Fund which is created for the purpose of rendering assistance to dependents of those who are on their way to the front. People who have never sought assistance before appear in the list, and in not a few cases, they are residents of Monaghan township.

As yet the city has made no provision for the storage of supplies donated to the Patriotic Association. Several hundred bags of flour, potatoes and other commodities are awaiting delivery. It has been proposed that some central place be secured wherein to store these supplies.

Housebreaker In Tweed

TWEED, Nov. 20 — Mr. John Wheeler, who was helping his brother, Manson, just after dark, was surprised to notice a light flitting about in his home. He and his brother went to the house, unlocking the door and going in, their surprise was at a climax to find a man in the house. Asked as to why he had come in there, the fellow replied "to get out of the storm," and when Mr. Wheeler found that he had been going through the house he again questioned the latter as to why he had gone through the house, and again he nonchalantly replied, "Oh just out of curiosity."

Mr. Wheeler took him in hand, gave him his supper, then drove him to Tweed and delivered him over to the tender care of Chief Molyneux, who placed him in the lockup. A warrant was sworn out charging him with house-breaking and theft.

The prisoner gave his name as Chas. Jones, and his domicile uncertain.

He was brought up before Magistrates Bowlby and Davis, and after hearing the evidence he was committed to Belleville jail to await his trial.

The prisoner pleaded guilty to the charge.

TEA AND SUGAR ARE OF SPECIAL INTEREST JUST NOW

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs, will appear in Canadian Grocer this week:

Office of Publication,
Toronto, Nov. 19.

Sugar and tea continue as the perplexing feature of the market — so perplexing in fact that speculation as to the future is nothing more than guesswork. While the tendency for sugar would naturally be downward under the existing conditions, there is a question as to when the reductions can be loked for. Refiners claim that they are entitled to present prices while high-price raws last — in fact they are losing money at the present market—and the demand is so slow that these stocks may last some time. However, there may be pressure which will result in quicker action being taken.

Refiners make a statement that:

"The Government called us together, and asked for full details regarding the stocks of raws we had in hand. They did not say that we were not to advance prices, but they intimated that we had better not; so we kept them down as long as we could on that account. England was doing its best to control sugar prices and Sir George Foster was trying to do the same here, though in a milder way. As long as we were in possession of high-priced raws we kept the prices down. Sir George Foster agreed that we could raise our prices as soon [illegible] market for high-priced raws, and he approves of the present prices we are charging."

New York sugar is a trifle firmer, and there are forcasts that the market will soon advance further. English importers are buying at present prices on speculation despite the embargo.

Tea is a trifle easier in England this week and advices state that shipments to the Continent have been stopped—whatever this may mean. Offerings were a trifle heavier. On the other hand there was an advance of price in India which is hard to account for considering the manner in which shipments have been held up. The English war-tax should not affect the situation here, but there is the prospect of a tax being imposed in this country, this being considered by many as the probable course to be taken by the Government.

New raisins, currants and figs are in and dates will not be long delayed. Prices have changed but not materially, owing to the fact that adjustments had been pretty well made to the new basis. General situation for dried fruits indicates a firm market until Christmas at least.

Flour market continues very dull with export bids out of line and domestic demand weak. Mills are beginning to close down. Mill-feeds are firmer and may be used as a level in selling flour.

Strong ammonia will remove iodine stains from clothing and flesh.

TURNBULLS

Municipal Pot Is Simmering

The municipal pot is simmering. Candidates, innumerable, have been mentioned for civic honours, and a keenly contested fight is looked for in each ward. Five of the ten aldermen now serving the City, will have to go to the polls or retire. They are Aldermen Duncan, Dobbin, Green, Langford and McIntyre.

If Aldermen Duncan and Johnston carry out their intention of entering the Mayoralty contest two vacancies will be created, in the North and South Ward, respectively.

So far as it is known, all of the retiring aldermen will seek re-election. Those who will remain in office for another year are Aldermen Saunders, Stratton, Duffus, Johnston and Weir.

Ald. Johnston by entering the Mayoralty contest, will sacrifice one year of his Aldermanic career for the prospective position of Chief Magistrate.

PATRIOTIC TEA MONDAY NIGHT

A patriotic tea will be held on Monday next at the home of Mrs. Grady, Water Street, from 4 to 6 in the afternoon, and in the evening from 7 until 10 o'clock. All the ladies of the City are invited to be present. The proceeds are for the Canadian Kitchener League.

"First Aid To The Injured" Club

The young ladies in the several law offices of the city and in the offices at the Court House have caught the military spirit, and while the men of the city have organized a Home Guard, these young ladies are forming a "first Aid to the injured club." A meeting is being held this evening for organization purposes. It is understood the club will meet once a week and receive instructions in first aid from Dr. Cameron.

KEEP THE DATE OPEN.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

GERMAN FOOTBALL VERSUS GERMAN BARBARISM

Players Were Stone and Kicked--Scottish Eleven Win From Ireland--Quinn Will Remain With the Celtic Team

The directors of the Tottenham Hotspur F.C. have the following illuminating remarks on German football and the war: "At a time when German barbarism is shocking the civilised world, it is not out of place to recall the unpleasant experiences of our boys in Germany during their Continental tour last summer. Joyce and Pearson have good cause to remember the game at Pforsheim, where members of the party were assaulted and stoned. Joyce was struck by an umbrella, and Pearson had his head cut open by a flint. When Bob Steel complained of the kicking and hacking that was carried on quite openly by the Pforsheim players during the game, the German captain replied, "You're in Germany now, and we're going to beat you." However, we won this match—4-0, hence, we suppose, the subsequent stone-throwing. At the time Pforsheim was struck off our list in regard to any future visits to the Continent. Later on our Tommies may find time for a game, but it will probably be many years ere another English team plays football on German soil."

For Charity's Sake.

Barnsley followers have long talked of the greatness of a team composed of players, old and new. The calls of the hour has made the opportunity possible, and on the 23rd inst. a game is to be played which will be of historic interest locally and command some attention further afield. The idea is to raise a substantial amount for the benefit of the local Belgian refugees fund, and what a magnetic influence should a game possess with one of the teams comprising four intermediates and others who have gained inter-league caps. The secretary has received the prompt acceptance of the following players to oppose the present team for sweet charity's sake; Thorpe (Northampton), West (Notts County), Stacey (Manchester United), Glendenning (Bolton Wanderers), Boyle (Burnley), Utley (Sheffield United), Mordue (Sunderland), Travers (Manchester United), Lillycrop (Bolton Wanderers), Gadsby (Glossop), and Wall (Manchester United), with Palmer (Everton), reserve.

Scotts Won.

LONDON, Nov. 20.— The International League match between Ireland and Scotland, played at Belfast on Wednesday, resulted in a well-earned victory for the Scottish eleven. They won by 3 to 1.

War Fund.

It is believed that some people who think themselves rather wise have been doubting the likelihood of Jas. Quinn remaining in the Celtic team. Their theory was that the famous centre was merely called back by wa yof a fine advertisement. But they are assured that the Celtic club officials regard Quinn as having many matches to play before he has exhausted his usefulness to them. Quinn has become bigger and rounder, and he is not so quick in his movements on the ball, but he has not forgotten ho wto shoot. It is questioned, in fact, if there is a better centre than the Celt playing in Scottish football and yet he has been with them "all these years." McCall, Quinn's successor, is in bed with a severe knee injury that may keep him out of the game for a long time. So you see how fortunate Celtic are to have a player like Quinn in waiting.

The second game in the War Fund competition took place at Hampden Park during the week of October 31, when Morton defeated Queen's Park by three clear goals. The defeat came sore to the patrons of the amateurs, who a few days previously had performed so magnificently at Tynecastle. Still, the reverse is not surprising. Queen's Park had of necessity to rearrange their team and introduce a couple of players in the forward line in J. Corbett and P. Moodie, who have evidently much to learn in finishing. With rain falling prior to the match, the attendance was not so good as that which favoured the first game of this competition. Nevertheless, interest in these ties is growing, and from this source the winter game will undoubtedly contribute handsomely to the relief funds.

states that the Germans have shut off the railway service in Belgium, and are also closing direct communication between Holland and Germany. These development means that a transfer of troops on a large scale is under way from the Russian frontier to Flanders for a renewal with increased energy of the fight to capture Calais.

GENEVA, Nov. 18. — From Brussels the National Swiss has received the following: "The number of German wounded arriving here is unimaginable. Trains, which we call cemetery trains, full of piled up dead soldiers, continue to arive from the front. They contain bundles of dead; that is, four bodies tied together to facilitate transportation. The bodies are burned promptly in special furnaces erected just outside Brussels."

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The Daily Chronicle asserts that the new war loan already has been over subscribed, and that the applications are still pouring in. According to the Chronicle the amount spoken for aggregates three billion dollars. The total loan amounts to one and three-quarters billions.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Great Britain to-day prohibited the exportation of tea to all continental ports except those of countries of the allies and of Spain and Portugal. This prohibition is due to indications that Germany is receiving large supplies of tea through the Netherlands.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 20.—The shooting of an English woman as a spy in the barracks at Courtrai, was reported in a message received here to-day. The woman it was said was dressed in the garments of a priest when captured by the Germans.

PARIS, November 20.—All the reports indicate that the Germans have found Dixmude, which they again hold, one of the hottest shots along the entire battle line. The town has been knocked to pieces. Warships off the coast are declared to be dropping their shells into the German positions there and forcing of the allies from this point has been of little advantage.

New guns were brought up by the Germans last night but so far have been kept to the rear; the enemy evidently does not intend to run the risk of having these guns mired, so long as those now in positon are able to hold the present line.

ANCONA, November 20.—A terrific storm in the Adriatic has compelled the allied fleet to lift the blockade off the Austrian coast. The warships were forced to put to sea to avoid being driven ashore.

PARIS, November 20. — Many heavy guns have been lost by the Germans in the floods in Flanders. The official communique to-day in stating this declares that the artillery fire from the coast to the Lys slackened somewhat yesterday. Snow is again falling in Flanders and the bad weather has prevented infantry attacks being made by the enemy.

The Germans have followed up their advantage at Chauvancourt in the region of St. Mihiel, and have occupied the village.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—It was at Chauvancourt that the French met with disaster when they occupied the western section of the town, after driving out the Germans. The town had been mined and many of the French were blown up. The operations in Argonne have been without interest, the statement to-day declares.

PETROGRAD, November 20.—The imemdiate objective of General Von Hindenberg's army advancing through Poland, apparently in Loweiz. This town is on the main railway from Warsaw and only 40 miles from the capital of the Polish province. The Russian war office has admitted retirement along the River Bzura, between Kutno and Lowiez. Kutno is 20 miles to the west of Lowiez. The German force which defeated the Russians at Kaliez, to the south of Thorn, is endeavouring to reach Lots. This point is 30 miles southwest of Lowiez, and on the direct railway line from that point.

Argos And 'Varsity Are All Ready

Toronto Mail: Both 'Varsity and Argonauts put in their final workout of the week, last night, in preparation for their respective games tomorrow. At 'Varsity the team was only given a short workout against the intermediates, the play being confined to the intermediates trying to make headway through the seniors' line. Pretty near every play on the map was tried out, but the seniors smothered them with great frequency. Every player was in uniform with the exception of Dick Sheehy, he having a sprained wrist, which is liable to prevent him playing a full game to-morrow, thus weakening the chances of the Blue and White. Up at Rosedale the Scullers had a rattling good workout and if they play to form against the Tigers should bring home the bacon.

HOME GUARD PARADES.

The Peterborough Home Guard paraded on Thursday night after drill at the Armouries. Between five and six hundred is one estimate of the number in line.

FAULT IS WITH THE RICH

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—A great deal has been said about our small contributions to the Patriotic Fund as compared with other places, until it has become a public scandal. While admitting the corn, let us see where the fault lies. It is generally known that the poor people and ordinary well-to-do people have responded nobly to the call, and that the fault lies entirely with our rich people. I can name a score who could easily make up a total of $50,000 without feeling it in the least. I believe that some of them have subscribed from one to five dollars each, and a few, over that amount; and yet, some have subscribed nothing. One subscription which appeared large, but small for his means, was clogged with a condition not likely to be fulfilled, and hence should not be considered, for the present at least. The matter is too serious to gamble on and the rule should be rigidly enforced that all subscriptions should be unconditional and spontaneous and free from uncertainty.

All these rich people have made their money here, whether by fair means or foul, and are enjoying the peaceful possession of the same free from the molestation of the Germans or, for that matter, of any one else, by reason of our brave volunteers having gone to the battle front at the peril of their lives, while enduring the severest hardships, and leaving behind them those that are near and dear to them, at the mercy of these parsimonious beneficiaries.

The civil law does not provide any remedy for such an injustice. The only remedy for such ingratitude, where a country is at war, is to declare military law, when the military authorities can deal summarily with such cases if they see fit, and that is what ought to be done.

I have known cases where poor people have been called upon for subscriptions who did not have a cent to bless themselves with, and, with tears in their eyes, regretted their inability to do something for the brave boys who are fighting our battle. Nor can the ordinary business man do more than he has done with his limited means and heavy expenses made still more strenuous by the war.

If the rich cannot be induced to give plentifully of their means, as they do in other places, then indeed are we in a sorry plight.

Yours truly,
"Equity."

SPLENDID HALL FOR USE OF THE 21ST BATTALION

KINGSTON, Nov. 20.—Ontario Hall, which the City Council granted to the Militia Department for the use of the militia branch of the Y.M.C.A., and which has been splendidly patronized since its opening, will have its formal opening on Saturday night, beginning promptly at eight o'clock.

R.C.H.A. band will be in attendance; speeches will be made by Col. Hamming, Lieut.-Col. Hughes, W. F. Nickle, M.P., and Mayor Shaw, while there will be songs by Mr. Jas. Saukier, Mr. J. Cousins and others. If the time will permit there will also be a moving picture exhibit. A moving picture machine has been installed in the hall and it is the intention to give regular exhibitions.

Ald. T. F. Harrison, chairman of the Property Committee, is kindly looking after the fixing up of the hall with additional electric lights, etc., etc., and with flags. His interest is greatly appreciated by the soldiers.

Lieut.-Col. A. B. Cunningham delivered an instructive lecture on "Military Law" to the officers of the 1st Battalion on Wednesday afternoon.

The entire battalion will be photographed in the cricket field, Saturday afternoon, provided the weather is suitable.

The pipers' band from Renfrew, which has been attached to the 21st Battalion, will arrive in the city today.

MME. CURIE SAVES LIVES.

Furnishes Radio Service to Hospitals of Wonderful Benefit.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—A service of radioscopic, radio-graphic automobile ambulance has been organized and fitted up by Mme. Curie, and has been added to France's medical war equipment. The automobiles are run between the base hospitals and engaged in locating bullets lodged in wounded soldiers.

By means of these examinations the saving of hundreds of lives by expediting and facilitating the extraction of missiles is accomplished. The most remarkable feature of the work of Mme. Curie's automobile radio-graph apparatus is that the location of wounds in the brain and the speedy ensuing operation frequently saves the soldiers from paralysis.

It was dinner time at Mrs. Meaneleigh's highclass boarding establishment.

"Well," said that statistical boarder, leaning back in his chair, "we have at this meal the representatives of two widely separated generations."

"How is that?" asked the inquisitive boarder, rising to the occasion.

"Why, the hen we have been trying to eat was, in all probability, the great-great-grandmother of this omelette!"

Then there fell a palable silence.

POLICE COURT

Eric Lundgren and Charles Swanson were found guilty this morning by Magistrate Dumble of assaulting Abraham Chernikoff, a Hebrew second hand dealer. The Magistrate took the defendants' evidence as far as the actual dealings with the pawning of the watch was concerned but in regard to the assault he was disposed to accept the Hebrew's story and on the strength of it the two defendants were fined $20 and costs each.

The Magistrate went so far in his decision as to say that Chernikoff tried to cheat Lundgren in the watch transaction, but he said that this did not justify their taking the law into their own hands.

"I hold," the judgment reads in part, "that these two men, loaded with at least six glasses of beer each, went to the shop of Chernikoff to deal with him."

The crown was represented in this case by Mr. G. W. Hatton and the defence by Mr. D. O'Connell. The case arose out of the "pawning" of a watch, on which Chernikoff gave Lundgren a dollar, who agreed to pay $1.25 for it on pay day. When Lundgren went back for the watch the Hebrew refused to give it to him for less than $2, so some days later Swantson and Lundgren returned to the shop together and assaulted the Hebrew. They claim he assaulted them. He says they took the offensive. The Magistrate has decided that the young men took the offensive in the quarrel. Lundgren and Chernikoff both had nasty gashes, which the Magistrate said were made by the same instrument, an iron stove poker in the hands of Swantson. He says that in the scuffle, Swanton in trying to hit the Hebrew also hit his friend by mistake. He inflicted also a very nasty wound on the head of Chernikoff.

Both men paid their fines this morning.

Inspection Fees of Weights & Measures

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—My attention has been called to an item published by the "Examiner" some days ago in reference to the judgment rendered by Judge Carman in the prosecution of George Crane, of Beamsville, for non-payment of inspection fees of scales under the Weights and Measures Act.

As Assistant Inspector Howson of your City has had some enquiries in reference to the item published by you, I wrote the Department to ascertain the facts of the case.

In giving his decision Judge Carman accepted the statement of Mr. Crane and his employee that the scales had not been in use for over three years, and that he had notified the inspector that he intended to discontinue the use of same.

Thus the judgment rendered was not based upon a point of law, but upon a question of fact.

Fearing some of your readers might in the future, on account of the item first published, refuse to pay the inspection fees, I thought it best to ask you to publish these facts, and thus avoid any unpleasantness in the matter, for the Act governing the payment of fees for the inspection of all weights, weighing and measuring machines and measures is still in force.

—Yours truly,
F. Davey Diamond,
Inspector of Weights and Measures for the Belleville Division.

THE GIRL FROM BROADWAY.

In the "Girl from Broadway," last night, the Imperial Musical Comedy Company presented a performance of unquestionable merit. Several were heard to remark after the performance that it was the best presentation by a Stock Company they had ever witnessed. In the play there were innumerable funny situations, but the real value of the presentation was the excellent manner in which the whole Company handled the different features. There were a number of splendid musical numbers which took well, and there was an atmosphere of real comedy woven into the play that captivated the audience. The house was a large one and every one had plenty of reasons to be satisfied that they were present. It is needless to mention the various special feautres as after their first four performances here the theatre-going public are familiar with the standard maintained.

At the conclusion of the performance the Country Store Idea was carried out as advertised and created a good deal of amusemnt. Some of the audience profited, too, through the acquisition of useful presents.

To-night the management say they are going to give away a real live baby after their staging of "The Elopers."

Russians Gain Partial Success in Poland

Berlin Reports No Decision In Greatest Battle With Russians

German Cavalry In Trap Russians Laid

Mined Bank of Bzura River and Cavalry Closely Pursuing Suffered Heavily---Severest Fighting in Eastern War Theatre Now in Progress in Poland---Russians Say German Advance Partly Checked.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 21.—Of three battle areas in the eastern theatre of war, that in Poland, between the Vistula and Warthe rivers, is now being drenched with blood in the most desperate fighting of the Russo-German war.

The Russian War Office claims that the German offensive in this section has been partially checked. Losses on both sides have been exceedingly heavy and details received here of the fighting along the bank of the River Bzura, upon which the Russians retreated, bring frightful stories of a trap into which the German cavalry rode.

The Russians withdrawing along the Bzura, mined the banks. The Germans pressed forward in hot pursuit, seeking crossing. When a heavy detachment had reached the river, the mines were exploded. The destruction was terrible. Men and horses were blown to atoms. Wounded riders and their mangled mounts were thrown into the river. The horses of the survivors bolted and leaped into the water. The bed of the river had been filled with barbed wire, and men and mounts became tangled in a hopeless, struggling mass of flesh. The survivors of the explosions along the bank who were not drowned, were kicked or crushed to death by struggling horses.

The Russians also opened fire on the tangle of men and horses and but few escaped. These were immediately taken prisoners.

BUELOW TO ITALY.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—A despatch from Rome to the Fourner Agency states that Prince von Buelow has been appointed German Ambassador to Italy.

ITALIAN AMBASSADOR SUMMONED TO ROME

(Special Morning Cable.)

LONDON, Nov. 21.— King Victor Emmanuel has summoned Ambassador Marchesi from London to Rome for an important conference. The Imperial ambassador left here to-day in response to the summons.

THEIR WORD OF HONOUR.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 20.—Two German officers interned in Holland, who had given their word of honour that they would not attempt to escape, have broken their parole and crossed the German frontier, according to an announcement made here.

Bulgaria May Assist Servia

LONDON, Nov. 20—The advance by Austria into Servia is creating uneasiness in Bulgaria as to the future of the Balkan States. The question as to whether Bulgaria should remain neutral or throw in her lot with the allies was discussed to-day in the Sobranje. Leaders of the Democratic party suggests that the allies should be consulted as to their intentions regarding the future of the Balkans.

Italy, too, has been affected by the Austrian advance and her ambassadors at the European capitals have been called home to confer with the Cabinet. Marquis Imperiali, the Italian ambassador to Great Britain, will leave for Rome to-morrow.

DESECRATION OF GRAVES ANGERED THE MOROCCANS

PARIS, Nov. 20.—According to Le Temps, it was the German desecration of French graves that was really responsible for the recent considerable success at Tracy-le-Val. A correspondent in the firing line writes to the paper: Our troops had taken the village, but the enemy returned and began digging trenches in the cemetery, which so infuriated the Moroccan contingent—many of whose dead were thus exposed — that the commander decided to assault the cemetery. The Moroccans charged with their knives and exterminated 1,200 Germans occupying the trenches. Immediately thereafter 125 others entrenched nearby surrendered, their non-commissioned officers declaring they were the remnant of a whole battalion. All were hungry, sick and wearing rags."

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON.

The blood must be filtered, otherwise you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these diseased organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

BRITISH AIM AN ATTACK AT THE LINES OF COMMUNICATION

PARIS, Nov. 21.—Reports reaching headquarters to-day indicate that the Germans may be about to try a new plan to drive the allied troops from their trenches in Flanders, by the use of huge steel barges of burning oil.

Barges in great numbers have been brought up at the rear, together with great quantities of crude oil. It is believed to be the intention of the Germans to launch these along the Yser canal and in the inundated section between Dixmude and the coast.

Fighting along the northern front was still confined to artillery fire today. There are signs of renewed activity of British from Arras, however, in a movement which has for its object the piercing of the German line of communication.

AUSTRIAN WAR LOAN.

First Two Days' Subscriptions Were About $170,000,000.

VENICE, via Paris, Nov. 20.—The subscriptions to the Austrian war loan during the first two days aggregated 700,000,000 crowns (about $170,000,000), the announcement of Austrian victories over the Servians, it is stated, having greatly stimulated public investments. The imperial family and various organizations were the largest subscribers. Banks and industrial corporations also invested heavily.

In the city of Trieste there is said to be much depression. Twenty thousand persons are reported to be unemployed, and appeals are being made to private charities to assist in feeding them. The municipality of Trieste, it is declared, has announced that it would be unable to support the unemployed much longer.

It is reported that German and Austrian agents are actively engaged in smuggling prohibited goods into Austria, but that the recent Italian decree, directing that the ultimate destination of all ocean freights coming into Italian ports must be clearly stated in ships' papers will make these alleged operations much more difficult.

NO DECISION IN POLAND STRUGGLE IS BERLIN REPORT

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BERLIN, (via The Hague), Nov. 21.—"No decision has yet been reached in the fighting in Poland."

This was the statement from the War Office to-day, where practically all attention is now centred to the battles on the eastern front.

A Month of German Attacks Have Failed

Allies Have Held the Line for More Than a Month and Have Turned Back the Repeated Assaults Directed by the Enemy Along This Wing---Exposure to the Weather is Now a Menace to the Troops.

NORTHERN FRANCE, Nov. 19. —The main German attacks continue directed east and southeast of Ypres, but there has been a further fierce bombardment of Nieuport. All the German attacks have failed. That is the best that can be said. The allies have held the line for more than a month and the Germans are no farther forward, while their losses have been so enormous that in time these must tell, but they continue bringing up reinforcements, and the Kaiser, in his grey motor car, with his worn, set face, and cloaked in grey like Napoleon, is constantly passing from one German camp to another, always within ten miles or so of the allies' lines, exhorting his troops.

Ypres has been almost smashed to pieces, its grand old Flemish halls have been ruined by incendiary shells, and its largest houses demolished by huge shells, weighing more than eight hundredweight, arriving almost vertically, at a speed of two hundred yards per second. Half a house will be crashing into ruins while the remnant is left standing with a section of every room, from garrent to cellar, exposed intact, but the allies are still holding Ypres. That is all that matters, though Ypres is but a mass of ruins.

ANOTHER FRENCH TRICK.

A brilliant feat of characteristic French smartness is reported by a Gascon captain, whose advancing squadron, about to oust if possible the German forces from a position inconveniently commanding the French trenches, was observed from a Taube, which hastened to report the movement to the enemy. The captain caused a number of horses to be so loaded up with hay that, grouped together, they resembled a veritable haystack, and these were despatched along the road towards the Germans. When the enemy saw this amazing monster emerging through the haze of the River Yser they were bewildered and fired. The horses separated and were charged by the German cavalry, who could not believe them riderless. Sabres were slashed at the hay-cocks on the horses' backs, and there was a strange tumult and medley, in the midst of which the Gascon captain and his men took the German position in the rear and charged so effectively that the Germans fled in disorder, abandoning everything, including the guns.

TRENCHES ARE SOAKED.

There has been a heavy rain almost continuously. Exposure and other hardships of life in the trenches are not less menacing to our brave fellows than the risks of death and mutilation. They are bearing up splendidly, and make one proud to be a Briton. They never complain seriously. Their grumbles are good-humoured, and they trust their officers, who deserve it, as perhaps no soldiers of any other army in the world.

DISTINCT SUCCESS FOR BRITISH ARMS

Victory at Bixschoote—Many German Naval Guns and Marines Engaged.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The Morning Post has the following:

BELGIUM, Nov. 18 (delayed)—The British won a distinct success at Bixschoote last night. I learn the action took what has become the usual form of successful engagement along this Belgian line. After a dash the forces of the allies pretended to be broken, the Germans came through and found themselves enfiladed and almost surrounded, and retired precipitately with great loss. On this occasion, however, the British were ready to push the advantage farther, and following up the fleeing Germans vigorously we forced them back upon their supporters, involved those supports in disorder and won a great deal of terrain. It was a fine success, and at a point where an advance was welcome, for it makes the position at Ypres distinctly better, and is an advantage gained at a point where the Germans are seemingly concentrating their chief effort just now. The Prussian Guards regiments, which were at Zoonebeke and Ghilwert, seemed to have been move up north of this Bixschoote attack.

Sidelight on German Fleet.

What may be taken as a circumstance of additional encouragement from the victory is the indication it gives that at last our formation is coming to be better than that of the enemy. The past seven days have provided three notable instances where the Germans have been deluded, to their great loss, and there have been no such instances on our side. The bombardment of Ypres continued up to yesterday but feebly. A shell brought into me from the town unexploded is a naval shell designed for use against battleships. The number of naval guns and marines employed by the Germans gives us little hope that their fleet intends to venture out in force yet, while to set off the defeat north of Ypres the Germans have won absolutely nothing on the Belgian battle-front.

ANOTHER EXAMPLE OF GERMAN "KULTUR"

PARIS, Nov. 20.—In the course of the revision of the Belgian Grey Book it was discovered that the German Foreign Office intentionally mistranslated the French version given to Belgium, giving the ultimatum in a totally different sense from the German original. The German diplomatists (apparently) hoped thereby to hide behind the original text in case of dispute.

The Vossische Zeitung of Berlin interprets the international law of neutrality in new fashion. It contends that Belgium had no right to resist the German crossing of Belgium because it was not a German attack, hence Belgium was guilty of a breach of the law of nations and therefore is undeserving of consideration.

500 Lepers in U. S.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Nov. 20. That there are more than 500 known lepers in this country scattered over seventeen states, was the assertion of W. M. Danner, American secretary to the Mission of Lepers, who is attending the Interdenominational Medical Conference. He advocates the establishment of a national leprosarium.

GERMANS SEND MORE BIG GUNS TO OSTEND

ROTTERDAM, Nov. 20.—Ostend now has a complete garrison. Several guns of long range have been added to the batteries on the sea dyke and in the dunes. The lighthouse at Knocke is constantly occupied by German lookout men, and the coast is guarded by marines.

At Zeebrugge the Germans are still busy with their mysterious work, and civilians are not allowed to approach. At Antwerp the Germans seized the whole stock of India rubber in the two largest warehouses. The owners received a note promising to pay.

SEES FINANCIAL DISASTER AHEAD OF GERMAN NATION

LONDON, Nov. 20.—A report issued by the Swiss Bankverein which keeps in close touch with the financial situation in Germany, shows a strong contrast to the optimism in German official circles. The report says that the Reischabank, into which gold is continually flowing, is no longer the only criterion in view of the creation of numerous institutions to make loans and issue their currency. The amount thus outstanding on October 15th was fiftyfive and a half millions sterling (277,500,000).

The report further describes the German artifices used to disguise the enormous growth of the fiduciary note issue and says in conclusion:

"Germany's method of securing subscriptions and raising funds calls for severe criticism from the economic viewpoint and must result in financial disaster."

WANT KHEDIVE TO STIR UP ARABS

Khedive Hopes to Re-enter Cairo at Head of Turks.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—(By German wireless.)— The news that the Khedive has revolted against British control and plans to return to Egypt with the Turkish army is confirmed to-night.

The Temps correspondent at Rhodes says: "It is common knowledge that following Britain's refusal to allow him to return to Egypt the Khedive became enamoured of the prospect of re-entering Cairo with a victorious Ottoman army which pro-German Young Turks hold forth to him.

He has organized caravans consisting of 200 horses, tents and provisions for the campaign. The Turkish army is concentrated between Damascus and Mahaw, and is estimated at 200,000, but I believe only 70,000 are of effective fighting value. The Germans, therefore, induced the Khedive to march with them with the object of stirring the Arab population to join the army."

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Geo. Allan England

He turned a few pages, his face glowing with enthusiasm.

"April 15—The first ten-yearly census was completed to-day. Even with the aid of Frumuos and Zangamon, I have been at work on this nearly two months, for now our outlying farms, villages and settlements have pushed away fifteen or twenty miles from the original focus at the Cliffs, or 'Clifton,' as the capital is becoming generally known.

"Population ...72, indicating a high birth-rate and an exceptionally low mortality. Our one greatest need is large families. With the whole world to reconquer, we must have men.

"Area now under cultivation, under grazing and under forests being actively exploited, 42,076 acres. Domestic animals, 26,011. Horses are already being replaced by motors, save for pleasure-riding. Power-plants and manufacturing establishments, 32. Aerial fleet, 17 of the large biplanes, 8 of the swifter monoplanes for scout work. One shipyard at Mobile.

"Total roads, macadamized and other, 832 miles. Air-motors and sun-motors in use or under construction, 41; mines being worked, 13; schools, 27, including the technical school at Intervale, under my personal instruction. Military force, zero—praise be! Likewise jails, saloons, penitentiaries, gallows, hospitals, vagrants, prostitutes, politicians, diseases, beggars, charities—all zero, now and forever!"

Allan turned to the unfinished end of the manuscript, poised his pen a moment, and then began writing once more where he had left off when called by Beatrice:

"The great monument in memory of the patriarch, first of all our people to perish in the upper world, was finished on June 18. Memorial exercises will be held next month.

"On June 22 the new satellite, which passes darkly among the stars every forty-eight hours, was named Discus. Its distance is 3,246 miles; dimensions, 720 miles by 432; weight, six and three-quarter billion tons.

"On July 2, I discovered unmistakable traces either of habitations or of their ruins on the new and till now unobserved face of the moon, hidden in the old days. This problem still remains for further investigation.

"July 4, our national holiday, a viva-voce election and Council of the Elders was held. They still insist on choosing me as Krombo. I weary of the task, and would gladly give it over to some younger man.

"At this Council, held on the great meeting-ground beyond the hangars, I again and for the third time submitted the question of trying to colonize from the races still in the Abyss. If feasible, this would rapidly add to our population. The Folk are now civilised to a point where they could rapidly assimilate outside stock.

"In addition to the Lanskaarn, a strong and active race known to exist on the Central Island in the Sunken Sea, there remain persistent traditions of a strange, yellow-haired race somewhere on the western coasts of that sea, beyond the Great Vortex. Two parties exist among us.

"The minority is anxious for exploration and conquest. The majority votes for peace and quiet growth. It may well be that the Lanskaarn and the other people never will be rescued. I, for one, cannot attempt it. I grow a little weary. But if the younger generation so decides, that must be their problem and their labour, like the rebuilding of the great cities and the reconquest of the entire continent from sea to sea.

"In the meantime—"

At the window appeared Beatrice. Smiling she flung a yellow rose. It landed on Allan's desk spilling its petals all across his manuscript.

He looked up startled. His frown became a smile.

"My time's up?" he queried. "Why, I didn't know I'd been working five minutes!"

"Up! Long ago! Now, Allan, you just simply must leave that history and come out and see my roses, or—or—"

"No threats!" he implored with mock earnestness. "I'm coming, dearest. Just give me time—"

"Not another minute, do you hear?"

"—to put my work away, and I'm with you!"

He carefully arranged the pages of his manuscript in order, while she stood waiting at the window, daring not leave lest he plunge back again into his absorbing toil.

Into his desk-drawer he slid the precious record of the community's labour, growth, achievement, ana triumph. Then, with a boyish twinkle in his eyes, he left the library.

She turned, expecting him to meet her by the broad piazza; but all at once he stole quietly round the other corner of the bungalow, his footsteps noiseless in the thick grass.

Suddenly he seized her, unsuspecting, in his arms.

"My prisoner!" he laughed. "Roses? Here's the most beautiful one in our whole garden!"

"Where?" she asked, not understanding.

"This red one, here!"

And full upon the mouth he kissed her in the leaf-shaded sunshine of that wondrous summer day.

CHAPTER XXXV.
THE AFTERGLOW.

Evening!

Far in the west, beyond the canyon of the New Hope River—now a beautifully terraced park and pleasure ground—the rolling hills, fertile and farm-covered, lay resting as the sun died in glory of crimson, gold and green.

The reflections of the passing day spread a purple haze through the palm and fern-tree aisles of the woodland. Only a slight breeze swayed the branches. Infinite in its serenity brooded a vast peace from the glowing sky.

A few questing swallows shot here and there like arrows, blackly outlined with swift and crooked wing against the vermilion of the west.

Over the countryside, the distant farms and hills, a thin and rosy vapour hovered, fading slowly as the sun sank lower still.

Scarcely moved by the summer breeze, a few clouds drifted away—away to westward—gently and calmly as the first promises of night stole up the world.

An arbour, bowered with wistarias and the waxen spikes of the new fleur de vie, stood near the woodbine-covered wall edging the cliff. Among its leaves the soft air rustled very lovingly. A scent of many blossoms hung over the perfumed evening.

Upon the lawn one last, belated robin still lingered. Its mate called from a sycamore beyond the hedge, and with an answering note it rose and winged away; it vanished from the sight.

Allan and Beatrice, watching it from the arbour, smiled; and through the smile it seemed there might be still a trace of deeper thought.

"How quickly it obeyed the call of love!" said Allan musingly. "When that comes what matters else?"

She nodded.

"Yes," she answered presently. "That call is still supreme. Our Frances—"

She paused, but her eyes sought the half-glimpsed outlines of another cottage there beyond the hedge.

"We never realized, did we?" said Allan, voicing her thought. "It came so suddenly. But we haven't lost her, after all. And there are still the others, too. And when grandchildren come—"

"That means a kind of youth all over again, doesn't it? Well—"

Her hand stole into his, and for a while they sat in silence, thinking the thoughts that "do sometime lie too deep for tears."

The flaming red in the west had faded now to orange and dull amber. Higher in the sky yellows and greens gave place to blue as deep as that in the Ægean grottos. The zenith, a dark purple, began to show a silver twinkle here and there of stars.

A whirring, roaring sound grew audible to eastward. It strengthened quickly. And all at once, far above the river, a long, swift train, its windows already lighted, sped with a smooth, rapid flight.

Allan watched the monorail vanish beyond the huge north tower of the cable bridge, sink through the trees, and finally fade into the gathering gloom.

"The Great Lakes Express," said he. "In the old days we thought 70 miles an hour something stupendous. Now 200 is mere ordinary schedule time. Yes—something has been accomplished even now. The greater time still to be—we can't hope to see it.

"But we can catch a glimpse of what it shall be, here and there. We must be content to have built foundations. On them those who shall come in the future shall raise a fairer and a mightier world than any we have ever dreamed."

Again he relapsed into silence; but his arm drew round Beatrice, and together they sat watching the age-old yet ever-new drama of the birth of night.

Half heard, mingled with the eternal turmoil of the rapids, rose the far purring of the giant dynamos in the power-houses below the cliff. Here, there, lights began to gleam in the city; and on the rolling farmlands to northward, too, little winking eyes of light opened one by one, each one a home.

Suddenly the man spoke again.

Cause and Cure of Headache

The cause of headache as you know, is the stoppage of the circulation resulting in pressure on the delicate nerves of the head. In time nature will start the blood going again, but meanwhile we suffer and are unfit for duty.

Assisted by two ZUTOO Tablets, which by the way are as harmless as the soda they contain, nature will remove the pressure and stop the headache in twenty minutes. Why continue to suffer? Why be unfit?

It is really remarkable how many people now use ZUTOO to cure their headaches. Do you? If not, why not?

WOMAN SICK FOR YEARS

Wants Other Women to Know How She was Finally Restored to Health.

Hammond, Ont. — "I am passing through the Change of Life and for two years had hot flushes very bad, headaches, soreness in the back of head, was constipated, and had weak, nervous feelings. The doctor who attended me for a number of years did not help me, but I have been entirely relieved of the above symptoms by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Purifier and Liver Pills, and give you permission to publish my testimonial." — Mrs. LOUIS BEAUCAGE, Sr., Hammond, Ont., Canada.

New Brunswick, Canada. — "I can highly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any suffering woman. I have taken it for female weakness and painful menstruation and it cured me." — Mrs. DEVERE BARBOUR, Harvey Bank, New Brunswick, Canada.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact. Every suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Aunt Sally's Advice to Beauty Seekers

Red Nose. The nose is a more delicate organ than most people imagine. It should be touched as little as possible. For undue redness the treatment recommended in following paragraph will be found effective. Apply without rubbing.

Muddy Skin. The surest, safest and surest method of giving a clear, healthy, transparent appearance to the complexion is to apply ordinary mercolised wax every night for from one to two weeks. This wax, obtainable at any drug store (one once is sufficient), actually takes off a bad complexion by gently and gradually absorbing the thin veil of surface skin. The new skin then in evidence is as fresh and velvety as a young girl's. The wax is applied like cold cream and washed off mornings.

Wrinkles. A harmless lotion made as follows has been found very effective in cases of wrinkles and crow's feet: Powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hazel, ½ pint. Bathe the face in this daily for awhile.—Woman's Realm.

Cut flowers will keep fresh longer if their stems be placed in damp sand than if placed in water.

Sunlight Soap

cuts Monday's labor clean in half.

The Sunlight way is so easy --just note. First you soap the garment; then roll it up to soak. After a while you rinse it thoroughly and the dirt drops out like magic.

Why scrub, and rub, and wear and tear the clothes when the gentle strength of Sunlight Soap will do the work with never a hurt to fabric or hands.

Try it once—this Sunlight way.

PLEASE REMIT.

When the bill of the Great War comes to be settled, it will be found a stupendous one. Political economists estimate that in the event of hostilities lasting six months, the monetary loss to the world will aggregate $17,600,000,000, and conditions will be such that national loans, aggregating $8,000,000,000 will be needed. In times of peace, the annual military expenditures of all the European nations reach $1,772,156,000, so that half of a year of war at the present tension would equal nearly twenty years' expenditures in peace time.

These estimates do not include the great loss sustained by industry and commerce, nor the crops, buildings, and other property destroyed, but relate solely to the provisioning, feeding, wages, cost of mobilization, ammunition (land, sea and aerial), ambulances, outfitting, bridges, and pontoons, fuel, requisitions, loss on taxes, and general incidentals connected with the actual operations of a campaign as vast as that which is now under way in Eastern and Western Europe.—The Christian Herald.

WAR BREAD

Every army in time of war carries what is called war bread which forms a part of the durable rations, and is intended to be eaten if necessary while on the march. The German soldier receives for his war bread a swieback, in which are mixed together 1001grammes of cooked rice togethr with salt. Beaten eggs and sugar are added to the dough in order to improve its flavour, and to increase the nourishing power. The proportion is 500 eggs to 100 kilogrammes of flour. Finally, potato flour is used, it is said, to prevent the bread from growing stale too easily, and caraway seed gives it the necessary spiciness.

The Austro-Hungarian soldiers carry their durable ration of bread packed in small cotton bags. This bread is shaped like a sausage and consits of wheat flour, potato flour, eggs, unskimmed milk, malt, cinnamon, nutmeg and yeast.

In France each soldier receives as his durable ration ten loaves of bread, each of which is 70 milli-metres long, 65 millimetres broad, and 25 millimetres thick. In any case, this bread does not taste as good, nor is it as nourishing as the Austrian bread, for the "piou-piou" as the French infantry men are called, must be satisfied with a loaf which is made only of flour, yeast and water.

The war bread of the Uhlans and Roumanians is very similar to that of France. It is, though, somewhat darker and has a uniformly smooth crust.

The Swiss soldier carries his war bread with him in a small pasteboard box. Each of these little packages contains five small loaves, which weigh together only 250 grammes.

The light-coloured war bread of the English is kept in good condition in small soldered tin boxes.

The Belgians give their soldiers a war bread made of flour, sugar and eggs, each loaf having forty punctures. oles are also pierced through the Turkish war bread which is made in round disks, having a diameter of 150 millimetres and a very thick brown crust.

THE 'WHY' OF THE CONFLICT

What Is Likely To Be The Outcome Of The Present War

By Leon Goldmerstein

NO amount of boxing lore will tell at the beginning of a match who of the two men will take the count, but it does not require quite as much prophetic power to know who will not get the prize at the next beauty contest. This is approximately the situation with respect to the outcome of the European war. How it will affect the map of Europe is a matter which depends on the course of that most uncertain of all gambles, the game of war, in which a thousand and one unforeseen events may upset the calculations of the best commanders and most clever general staffs.

But, after all, changes in the map of Europe are of more importance to geographers and makers of post office guides than to the world in general. Modern nations after conquering a country do not expel its inhabitants and divide the lands among the invaders, nor do they any more convert peasants into slaves and sell women for what they will fetch in the open market. The conquered country has at most to learn new laws, not essentially different from those under which it lived before, and get the habit of dealing with conditions modified but not radically different from those of the old country. The Galician peasant is less interested in the name of the man to whom he is to swear allegiance than in the question whether under that allegiance he will have to starve or will be enabled to have meat on Sunday all through the year. The merchant in East Prussia probably would very soon become willing to put up with his new masters if by doing so he could get better prices for his wares sold to Siberia than he used to when he sold them as "made in Germany."

And even men far higher placed than the Galician peasant, with all their after dinner talk about patriotism, actually think very little about changing their allegiance. There is a very illuminating story to this effect told in the memoirs of the late Chancellor of the German Empire, Prince Hohenlohe-Schillingsfurst. The Prince inherited vast domains in Russia, where, according to the existing laws, no foreigner can hold land in the frontier zone. He would have to sell his land within the statute period of three years, and this in view of the size of the estate, could not be done without heavy loss. He went, therefore, to Russia to make some arrangements in this connection and also to find out the value of his inheritance.

"The simplest way to get around it," he was told by a Russian friend, "is to have one of your sons apply for Russian citizenship."

"I must first find out if the value of the estate justifies such a step," was the reply of the man whom his country made rich, great and famous.

With little and great, it is all a matter of "whether the estate justifies it." We may, therefore, leave the matter of the map of Europe to geographers and diplomats, as the only people who are really interested in it, and concern ourselves with the far more important matter of how the war will affect the conditions of life in the post-bellum Europe, and especially how it will affect the currents in the great oceans of commerce.

We must not forget for a moment, however much we may otherwise cry out against the all powerful dollar, that it is trade after all that makes the most profound imprint on the destinies of peoples. When the man in Sheffield has plenty of work and good wages he sends his boys to school and keeps the girls at home until they are married. He becomes more self-reliant, feels himself a real part of the great British Empire, looks with suspicion on socialists and anarchists and votes for the man whom he considers best. On the other hand, when the man in Chemnitz finds that his business is gone and that there is but little chance for employment the first thing he does is to place every member of the family at work. In days of stress there are no idlers. The boys, from eight on, have to earn at least their own keep; the girls go to town as housemaids, into factories, shops and all those lines of employment where, for the German maid, there is so little profit and so much temptation and danger. And the man himself, with family broken up, future uncertain, the present terrible in its anxiety, may be well excused for taking up any method of forgetting his hardships, be it alcohol or anarchism.

Morality, not in the individual but in the masses, after all is to a very large extent a matter of conditions, and it is the great fortune of this country that it is in itself such a great consumer of its own products that, no matter what may happen, American workmen, led by the sons of American engineers and business men, will always be able to maintain their standard of life well above the average of most countries of Europe.

There are two essential elements in the situation created by the war with which one has to count with respect to its probable outcome and bearing on the world's trade, and they are the present diversion of the flow of trade and the ability of various countries to finance the resumption of traffic after the war.

Imagine for a moment two concerns vigorously contesting the trade in a certain line, say a certain kind of speed indicator. Now suppose that the more successful concern had a fire and that it will take it two years to rebuild the factory and start new output. What will happen in the meanwhile, and after? Why, it will find that its trade is to a very large extent gone. Not only will it find that many of its customers have gone over to its competitors and cannot be lured back, but it will find a still more dismaying circumstance—NEW COMPETITORS HAVE APPEARED IN THE MARKET FIGHTING FOR THE SAME TRADE WITH BETTER WEAPONS AND FRESHER METHODS.

That is what is going to happen to Germany, which naturally must be considered first in this connection, for it is the nation more than any other one relying on exports in the development of its industries, and it is also the nation the business of which has been interrupted more than that of any other combatant. It is, therefore, of the greatest importance to find out just how Germany is going to fare after all is over, especially as, to a certain extent, this may give some indication as to the probable duration of the present struggle.

In the development of German exports there are two elements which have not been sufficiently realized and which have a tremendous bearing both on the present situation and especially on that which is likely to be created after the war.

The first of these two elements is that Germany in its foreign business, went in an extremely large measure after small lines. The United States also has a quite respectable foreign business, but it handles only what may be called staple commodities. It exports, let us say, typewriters, and makes them with Russian, Portuguese and other alphabets, but only when the amount of these special typewriters is large enough to make the handling of that particular line profitable. It exports a lot of steel, but only in sizes and shapes for which there is either a large market at home or heavy orders have been received from abroad. If an American manufacturer were approached with a small order for a special article wanted in, say, the Chinese trade, he would probably decline to take it.

Now this spells overcautious conservatism on one hand, and may even develop into deplorable lack of initiative, but on the other hand let us see for a moment to what the opposite tendency has brought Germany.

It is well known that a market in specialties is far more difficult to keep than in staple commodities. Above all, to hold it you must make your deliveries certain. If you deliver to a jobber in Brazil the special goods which the Brazilian market demands, you will keep his trade as long as you can hold up your end, especially if there is no competition. But if you have failed to do so for any length of time, the jobber will not close his place. If he cannot deliver the exact brand that the trade demands, he will deliver the next best thing that will satisfy the requirements of the market, and that will be your competitors' goods. As these goods are not made to special demand, with special gages, tools and looms, they do not carry with them the extra overhead investment with which all specialty trade goods are cursed. They can, therefore, be sold cheaper, and, like all staples, will in the end prove better made than those made for a limited market. Result, THE MARKET UNTIL THEN FED BY WHAT IT DEMANDED, IS NOW EDUCATED TO TAKE YOUR COMPETITORS' GOODS. If it finds them just as serviceable and at the same time cheaper, it will very soon begin to consider articles formerly made for its special market as OLD FASHIONED AND WILL REJECT THEM LATER FOR THAT VERY REASON.

When Germany comes back to Brazil, China, Argentina and a good many other countries to which it used to export hundreds of millions' worth of goods manufactured for these special markets it will find that such goods are now in demand only in the most backward, and therefore poorest, sections of the country and that everywhere else people are perfectly willing to take the staple goods and are rather proud to be "dressed and addressed" like Americans and Englishmen, rather than maintain their out of date fashions and methods.

In their willingness to deliver to countries somewhat backward in their development exactly what these countries demanded the Germans got their trade at a cost concerning which more will be said later; but on the whole they have been an element of retrogression rather than progress, and that never pays. You can pander to the worse feelings of a people or help them develop the better ones. It is not necessary to explain to the American public which method pays better in the end. And now that the United States and Great Britain have got a chance at educating foreign markets in the consumption of the best that they can make for their own exacting home markets, the opportunity for Germany to get back the trade in what may be considered a poorer grade of goods, either on account of cheapness, or gaudiness, or backward design, as in the case of tools, will be a very slim one.

But the loss of special markets means not only the loss of the trade itself, but also the loss of the very heavy investment which German manufacturers made in the form of development work—special tools, gages and looms. All these will have to go to the scrap heap, a sacrifice to the fetish of "export trade development at all costs." And with it will go the investment in the form of a selling organization built on the principle of "let us know what you want and we will have it for you, even at a loss to us."

The curse of the German export trade, as far as the Germans themselves were concerned, was that it was done to a very large extent without due regard to the question of profits. After all, every man is in business for the income that he has to get out of it. A concern has sometimes to go into unprofitable undertakings when it expects special benefits to derive from it, but if the management is at all wise the unprofitable part of the business will be such as to affect the balance side at the end of the year in a manner as little noticeable as possible.

In Germany the export trade was too intertwined with politics for really close attention to be paid to profits. The government was very active in getting contracts for the leading German firms, and in doing so considered mainly the political bearing of the matter. In St. Petersburg, Johannesburg and Pekin alike, German consular and diplomatic agents were nothing but uniformed salesmen; and, to their credit, it must be said that they did get the business. At the other end, in Germany, the concerns had to take the business even if the prices did not suit them; first, because it was considered in the light of a patriotic duty; and, second, because banking accommodations and railroad rebates are predicated mainly on the amount of foreign business done by the company.

All this created such a mixup in policies and accounts that, while the German industry did a tremendous amount of business, the number of concerns that paid good dividends or had large depreciation and reserve dividend funds is surprisingly small. If there were firms with such funds it was because they did an exceptionally large amount of home business on conditions of absolute monopoly, and thus the home consumer made up for losses in the foreign trade.

The great bearing that this will have on the post-bellum situation is this:—

The German government practically forced the national industry to develop a large export trade in order, first, to create in this respect a political machine scarcely inferior to the war machine in importance to German aggression; second, it was only by the development of a great export industry, even though done at a loss, that Germany could maintain a trade balance in the face of its large foreign indebtedness and mad expenditure for the army and navy at home. What German industry lost abroad was, in effect, a concealed premium paid for gold by the German banks, which otherwise would have gone bankrupt on account of naturally unfavorable trade balances; in the third place, exports were necessary to develop the German merchant marine and then to justify the creation of a navy to protect it.

When the smoke of battle clears away it will be found that the political importance of the export trade is gone, together with plans for aggressive politics. BECAUSE, IF THIS WAR ACCOMPLISHES ANYTHING, IT WILL CERTAINLY MAKE NATIONS UNDERSTAND THAT FOR A FEW YEARS AT LEAST ALL IDEAS OF AGGRESSION AT THE EXPENSE OF WEAKER NATIONS MUST BE LAID ASIDE. THE SIGNING OF A PEACE TREATY MAY NOT BE THE BEGINNING OF A MILLENNIUM, BUT IT WILL BE A RESPITE FROM THE HELL OF WAR.

Trade expansion as a means for the maintenance of a balance also will be scarcely possible for Germany after the war, and that for several reasons. The financing of the war expenses, now done by the issue of temporary securities, will in the first years after the war create such a drain on the world's resources that few new securities will find a market. Then the contraction of the business of concerns which now are kept going by government orders for purposes connected with the war, preceding by a couple of years the resumption of the regular business on the usual scale, will for a time produce such a general depression all over the world that nations will guard their resources too jealously to permit anybody to do much exporting for the sake of the balance of trade. At least, the rapid contracting of exports after the panic of 1907 in this country teaches us this lesson.

We may leave out of discussion the matter of exporting for the sole purpose of developing the German navy, as the whole matter of sea trade after the war is far too complicated to be touched upon in a few words, especially as a new element of immense potential importance is injected into the situation by THE APPEARANCE OF THE STARS AND STRIPES ON THE SEVEN SEAS.

There is, however, one element bearing on the industrial situation in Germany which we have not yet mentioned, and that is foreign investments and the attitude of buyers in the most important German markets, the latter being the very nations with whom Germany is at war now. After all, apart from the United States, Germany had no better markets than Russia, England and its colonies, Belgium and France; and to a very large extent Germany financed its industry by French and British credits and investments.

It has been stated that German bankers asserted with glee that if German industry is ruined it will be French and British investors who will suffer. That may be a pleasant thought while the war lasts, but when German promoters come on the Paris and London markets three, and perhaps thirteen, years from to-day they will have to do a lot of explaining before they can get any new money for enterprises east of the Rhine. There is such a thing as killing the goose which lays the golden eggs, and that is the kind of sport that seldom pays.

In addition to that one must count with the sentiment of the buyers. In trade quality and prices have about ninety-five per cent influence in the decision as to the place of purchase of goods, but there is five per cent of sentiment, future considerations, &c., which must not be lost sight of. It was a very clever idea on the part of the German General Staff to appoint as officers of the troops of occupation in Belgian towns German business men who have been residents of these towns before war began. We may well assume that these business men were not actually employed as spies previous to the war, though there can be scarcely any doubt that the observations of these German business men were not without value. But after the war will not the average Belgian merchant consider every German salesman in Louvain as the man who may NEXT TIME order him shot for expressing his horror at the burning of his native city? This makes for the five per cent of sentiment which will for a long time be a factor against business with Germany, AND IN OUR DAYS OF SMALL PROFITS FIVE PER CENT MAY BE ENOUGH TO TURN THE FLOW OF BUSINESS ONE WAY OR ANOTHER.

This is particularly important in view of the fact that a very large share of export trade is done with large corporations, municipalities and governments, especially with the two latter classes, whose field of activity has a strong tendency to expand in all directions. With this class of buyers it may be conservatively assumed that sentiment, political considerations, &c., play not five but at least fifteen per cent, and a fifteen per cent handicap is absolutely prohibitive to modern business getting.

Suppose that two concerns are out for an order for electrical machinery for, say, the London County Council lighting station, the Thomson-Houston Company on one hand and the Allgemeine Elektrositaets-Gesellschaft on the other. Both are really foreign concerns, the first American and the other German. Suppose that the German concern quoted ten per cent better prices. Who after the war would get the contract? The London County Council and its electors would not fail to recall the days, the memory of which will stay fresh for a long time, the German concern was supplying machinery to blow up the city of London by Zeppelin bombs, while the American concern, at a loss to itself, was running the only factory which could supply carbons for the British searchlights. WHO WILL GET THE CONTRACT?

Add to the foregoing the fact that of all the countries engaged in the present war Germany will suffer the most from the interruption of trade. For instance, Russia exported mainly raw materials, such as foodstuffs, manganese, platinum, furs. Its factories worked exclusively for the supply of the home market, which proved always too big for them, and had to be supplemented by foreign imports. What the war means for them is, therefore, a necessity to satisfy the local demand, and that means good wages for the men and good profits for the employers. If we take into consideration the big demand on the production of Russian factories due to government orders, we will easily get an idea of the rush which must just now prevail in the Russian shops.

Even during the Japanese war, when the number of men in the field hardly amounted to as much as one-quarter of those engaged now, and when for political reasons a fair proportion of the government orders went abroad, the Russian shops were rushed to capacity and the wages went up in many cases, voluntarily, ten to fifteen per cent. Then, however, imports were free, while now the Russian industries have to fill up the big gap created by shutting out Germany, across whose frontier there has flowed annually a current of trade valued at considerably more than $300,000,000.

The Russian chemical industries have been for some time quite active, and it was only the difficulty of competing with German imports that prevented the Russians from developing the production of chemical materials to their fullest extent. Nevertheless there are already several Russian concerns, such as the Tenteleff Chemical Company, which have invented several processes of chemical manufacture and are already independent of German patents in important lines of production. Russia has many first class chemists (the founder of modern physical chemistry, Professor D. Mendelieff, was a Russian), as well as a large number of young graduates of its universities doing good research work—an important element in the development of chemical processes where the cost of experimental work constitutes such a heavy item of expense. One may therefore confidently assume that AT THE END OF THE WAR RUSSIA WILL BE IN A BETTER ECONOMIC AND INDUSTRIAL POSITION THAN BEFORE.

To this must be added the fact that Russia is now to all practical purposes a dry country. The government there has the monopoly of the sale of alcohol, and AT THE BEGINNING OF THE WAR BY IMPERIAL DECREE THE SALE WAS STOPPED. That meant, of course, to the government a loss of revenue to the tune of about $35,000,000 a month, but apparently the Russian finances are in a condition to stand it or it would not have been done. As the sale of alcohol was a government monopoly and the vodka sold was of good quality and comparatively cheap, police supervision and economic considerations prevented an extensive development of the "blind tiger industry." The country has really gone dry. From information received this has already produced a good influence on the general life of the people, and even the government is coming around to the belief that a dry country is more easily kept in order. At the end of the war, therefore, the industry will have available an immense supply of labor free from the grip of alcohol; and all those who have had experience with Russian workmen agree that on the whole they would be excellent material for the development of great industry were it not for their shiftlessness and lack of reliability, always traceable back to drink.

France will suffer loss of men and the devastation of a fair part of its territory, BUT ITS INDUSTRIES ARE OF SUCH A PECULIAR KIND THAT THE CONCLUSION OF PEACE WILL MEAN FOR IT A BOOM SUCH AS NO OTHER COUNTRY WILL KNOW.

French wines, articles de Paris, silks, &c., appeal to the classes which will be least affected by the war, and the rich department stores of America, as well as the fashionable stores of the five continents, will send their buyers to lay in supplies of those beautiful things for which their customers have been hungering. In addition to that, the main industry of the French people—and that is loaning money to countries in debt—will also begin flourishing anew after the war, and while the peasant in northeastern France will try to rebuild his home, burned by German uhlans, the wine grower of Bordeaux and the baker of Paris will consider what investment to make and whether to take up American securities or Russian loans.

In 1871 France, weakened by the misrule of Napoleon, paid a contribution of a billion dollars to Germany and two years later was ready to make extensive investments elsewhere. It has had now forty-four years of peace and good business, and its financial reserves are so tremendous that it will have no trouble whatever "to continue doing business at the same old stand" and in the same curious way—a combination of conservative trading and apparent recklessness; however, with an always increasing balance of saving at the end.

And what about England? From what one hears about the situation in the British Isles the impression is that there people view the future with a considerable amount of cheerfulness. The British trade did not of late expand as much as the city of London would have desired; in fact, in several places the British commerce has lost ground before the import of German exports, but WHAT TRADE GREAT BRITAIN DID KEEP WAS OF THE BEST CLASS, WITH RELIABLE CONCERNS WHICH PAID PROMPTLY.

This trade British firms will have no difficulty to hold, as the Union Jack is flying over the high seas without too much trouble from the few German cruisers still at large. In addition to that the English are going in a very systematic manner after the German trade. The Board of Trade has compiled comprehensive and reliable data on German exports and is ready to furnish them to British concerns.

A possible move of importance in the future may be the tightening of the imperial connections due to the war. An all-empire tariff, which would have given certain preferential rates to British imports in the colonies, is a thing of which British manufacturers have been thinking for a long time, but which a year ago could not have been broached for many reasons. It is curious that now it is the colonial press which mentions the matter for the first time, so that it is not unlikely that after the war one may see accomplished what has been the dream of men like Chamberlain and Cecil Rhodes. But even if the tariffs do not help the British manufacturer he will be powerfully supported by the patriotic feeling which is so strong in the colonies now, as well as by that objection to German methods which is felt in the places "back or beyond," in Africa, Australia and Asia, even more than in Sheffield and Manchester.

Thus we see that of the four great participants in the present struggle one will come out with her industries crippled, if not crushed, with her commerce largely gone or taken by her former competitors and with her credit system shattered by the loss of the markets on which it formerly relied and which in time of stress it has deliberately treated unfairly. We see also that the other three combatants will come out at least as strong as before the war, probably stronger, and this not only holds good in the case of a long war, but becomes all the more pronounced the longer the war lasts.

When Lord Kitchener speaks of a war of three years he has in mind the fact that wars nowadays are carried on not only on the fields of battle but on the far more important field of economic life. War requires money, but in addition to that it must be carried on in such a way as to destroy as little as possible the business of the country. The longer the war lasts the more profoundly it affects the life of a country. If the war were to end to-day Germany would lose far less of its world's trade than after the war has gone on for a year, when the supply of German goods will have run out everywhere, and people will have to buy British and American goods, whether they want them or not. If the war runs on for three years, AND, FRIGHTFUL AS THAT MAY BE, THERE IS NOTHING TO GIVE ASSURANCE THAT IT WILL NOT, England will go on developing its overseas trade; the United States will develop its industries; Russia, with its tremendous production of grain, will go on building its chemical factories and machine shops; France, with the southern ports free, will import and export all she wants, and it will be only Germany that will have to meet a shortage of food and gasolene with a dead export trade.

Thus, as with the Allies not only because of their greater facilities for supplying their armies with men, but also because of their different, and on the whole better, economic condition. As far as the outcome is concerned, that means that the longer the war lasts the better equipped will the United States, England and Russia be to meet the German competition.

The war will leave a deep imprint on the banking and corporate life of the European countries. Already before the war there was a strong tendency toward consolidation, either in the form of several concerns uniting in one or by what is known in this country as trust formation. The war, and especially the economic reconstruction which will follow it, must naturally intensify this tendency, because to do big things the industries must stand together. This will be considerably facilitated through the fact that temporary organizations covering various fields of production have been either perfected before the war or are being perfected now—often with the collaboration of the government—for the purpose of meeting the great problems created by the war.

Europe is practically starting on the same way which after the Spanish war brought in the United States the formation of the Steel, Wool, Tobacco and other trusts, with the important difference, however, that while here the trusts have been all the time considered as things that have to gain their right to exist by political trickery, if not actual bribery, in Europe they are apparently going to take a sane view. THE TRUSTS UNDER PROPER GOVERNMENT SUPERVISION ARE AN INSTRUMENT OF ECONOMIC LIFE CAPABLE OF DOING AN IMMENSE AMOUNT OF GOOD. TO FURTHER THIS THE GOVERNMENT MUST KEEP ITS EYE ON THEM AND AT THE SAME TIME HELP THEM AS FAR AS POSSIBLE.

What a splendid business could be done in the United States if such a view were accepted by the government and big business!

And there is every indication that that is exactly what is going to be done in Europe, especially in England and Russia.

Germany [illegible] going it to a certain extent already, with the difference, however, that it was using its trusts for political purposes of foreign expansion, and in this way prevented them from making any money.

To this must be added another influence which it would be difficult to express in figures or percentages, but which is apt to affect the conditions of life and industry in Europe more profoundly than perhaps the war itself. The twentieth century has been so far fuller of open or nascent revolutionary movements than any other equal period of modern times. The revolutions in Russia, Persia, Turkey, China, Portugal; the spirit of deep unrest in Germany, France, England; the socialistic movement in Italy—all of them created a spirit with which the governments had more and more difficulty to deal. Contrary to apparent expectations in the United States, where a good many people think that European thrones will be sold at auction in furniture shops after the war is over, the general tendency seems to be all the other way, and it is quite likely that most of the monarchies, with possibly the exception of Austria, will remain monarchies, with one important difference, however, and that is that THE MONARCHS WILL RETAIN THEIR CROWNS BY BECOMING ADVOCATES OF THE MASSES AGAINST THE CLASSES.

That very consolidation of industrial and banking interests which is likely to become the most significant feature of the post-bellum Europe may be expected to become the element which will make the masses look for a power able and willing to protect them against the otherwise invincible force of concentrated capital. Just as the President of the United States is considered, with justification, the protector of the masses, as the kings and emperors of Europe may, speaking colloquially, succeed in keeping their jobs, and perhaps even in bettering their positions, by coming out openly as representing democratic ideals, and there is plenty of proof that they have already their chances in this direction. THE KINGS OF EUROPE ARE GOING TO BECOME RENCE-FORWARD NOTHING BUT HEREDITARY PRESIDENTS OF THEIR RESPECTIVE COUNTRIES, AND THEY HAVE ALREADY FOUND OUT THAT IT PAYS BETTER TO BE HEREDITARY PRESIDENTS THAN HEREDITARY EXILES. Real estate men who are holding with ecstatic happiness for the crowned heads of Europe will therefore have to wait, or sell them to local kings of steel and copper.

In the face of a tremendous concentration of capital in European countries, we are therefore apt to witness a powerful rise of democratic ideas in the masses. It would not be surprising to see that capital, rather than fight a battle in which it is sure to lose in the end will at once make such concessions to labor as it would have to make later on, and, while here again it would be foolish to expect the millennium, peace in the industries and good will toward the employers, one may confidently look forward to higher wages, better conditions of living and more facilities for the education of the children of workmen. This, by the way, is of interest to this country, as it will materially affect the flow of emigration westward.

To sum up:—

The outcome of the war will be great losses to the German commerce and a complete change in the export policy of the Kaiser's land, including the dropping of specialized lines and lines carried at a loss for political purposes. This will mean better prices and conditions in the export trade generally, conditions through which the United States and England will profit in the first place.

It will also mean an expansion of foreign trade for England and development of new lines of industry for Russia.

It also will mean concentration of capital, the birth of really big business in Europe, done under government supervision and with the good will of the country.

Democratization of the throne and open ranging of the imperial power and kingly powers on the side of the masses.

Important concessions to labor and working classes generally given both by the big business and by the government.

On the whole, one cannot help expressing the conviction that THE WORLD AS A WHOLE WILL COME OUT OF THE PRESENT WAR BETTER AND CLEANER THAN IT WENT INTO IT. IT IS A PITY AND A SHAME THAT EUROPE HAD TO BE STEEPED IN BLOOD IN ORDER TO UNDERSTAND THAT MODERN NATIONS CANNOT LIVE UNLESS THEY LAY AT THE FOUNDATION OF THEIR SOCIETY THE GREAT IDEAS OF DEMOCRACY.

BUT ONE MUST NOT FORGET THAT THIS IDEA HAD TO BE LEARNED AND THAT THIS KNOWLEDGE HAD TO BE BOUGHT AT THE PRICE OF BLOOD. HAD NOT THE PRESENT WAR COME TO TEACH THE NATIONS OF EUROPE THIS GREAT LESSON THEY WOULD HAVE LEARNED IT IN A REVOLUTION PERHAPS AS BLOODY AS THIS WAR.

AND ONE CANNOT HELP THINKING THAT IF BLOOD HAD TO BE SHED IT IS BETTER THAT IT SHOULD BE SHED IN A WAR THAN IN REVOLUTION.

(Edited by Dr. David H. Reeder. Chicago, Ill.)

Baby's Demands:—It is astonishing to all mothers to see what other people's babies will go through and appear to be perfectly happy and healthy, while her own precious darling seems to require most exacting care and even then colic, constipation, colds, croup and all other kinds of baby ailments appear to afflict it on every hand.

How often we hear a fond mother say: "I don't see how it is that Mrs. Bejones' children are always out in all kinds of weather, wet and cold, as well as dirty, eating all kinds of foods, and yet they seem to be well, while if my children so much as get damp I have to be up half the night with them."

Yes, there is some truth in all that. children are rugged and healthy, according to whether they are allowed a free outdoor life or not, but as a matter of fact the other mother says much the same thing about your children. She has her worries and cares, and her nights of anxious watching of which you know nothing.

Children, especially those we may safely call babies, must be looked after carefully, and should not be allowed to play in a wet yard early in the morning during the fall days, unless it's little feet are securely protected from the wet grass by substantial rubbers. A cold contracted during the fall may, unless properly treated and promptly treated as well, become chronic in its nature and a catarrhal condition established that may become tubercular, cause adenoids, polypus, enlarged tonsils, deafness, or other ailments, that are all too frequently neglected simply because the child makes no special complaint.

Diseased tonsils are frequently the source of infection which later on causes the terrible deformities of articular rheumatism. In some cases, however, such deformities are caused by neglected teeth. While yet a baby, the habit of thoroughly cleansing the mouth and teeth the first thing in the morning and the last thing at night, should be formed.

Examine your child's teeth, throat, nose and ears frequently, and if there is any sort of discharge or puslike secretion, treatment should be promptly applied. I will cheerfully make specific suggestions for individual cases if you write me fully about it.

WORTH REMEMBERING

Cream to whip nicely should be one day old.

Pie tins greased with butter will make the bottom crust of pies flakey and prevent them from being soggy.

A delicious stuffing for roast pork or fresh ham, is made with added chopped celery and apples.

To save the heels of children's stockings, cut heelcaps from the tops of kid gloves and draw over the heels before shoes are put up.

When using gasoline for house cleaning, add a little salt to it and there will be no ring left.

Nothing saves work in the kitchen like a few rugs. Save your rags and have them woven into rag rugs for this purpose. When the work is done the rugs can be lifted.

Lemon juice and common salt will remove iron rust from white goods, if you have nothing else at hand.

Dry a little washing soda in the water with which windows are to be cleaned.

Slightly stale cake cut in fingers, toasted and spread with jam, makes a very acceptable dainty for afternoon tea.

Mix a little vinegar with the stove polish, then the blacking will not fly off in the dust, and it will not take much rubbing to polish the stove. Polish it with old newspapers.

Dry buckwheat flour, rubbed on thoroughly several times, will remove grease from carpet.

WOMEN'S SACRIFICES FOR THE WAR

By May Sinclair in Collier's

Sacrifices are of two kinds — voluntary and involuntary—and they cover the whole ground. I do not mean to say much about women's involuntary sacrifices, about the great and terrible and tragic part they have played in this war and have still to play, about the mothers and wives and sweethearts of soldiers and of sailors; nor about the women whom the war has thrown out of work; nor yet about the multitude of refugee women who are crowding into England for shelter and protection.

You may say that these have not made any sacrifice. They are the sacrifice. And yet thousands of the very humblest of these victims have lifted this passive and involuntary sacrifice to the dignity of the voluntary plane by the incomparable spirit in which they have met their doom.

This spirit is all about us. It is a fiery challenge and a poignant reproach.

The other day, as I was standing on the curbstone in Holborn, a taxicab passed me loaded with humble luggage, bundles of clothing mostly, on the top, and packed with refugees inside. A woman, the very image of disaster, sat at the window nearest me with her baby at her breast. Our eyes met as she was driven past. It was she who achieved the more successful of the smiles that were exchanged. French and Belgian women are going up and down the road I live in, laughing and smiling with an air of unconquerable gaiety, though they are clothed in brand-new mourning and their faces are scarred with grief. Of our own women there are thousands who are glad that their sons and husbands have been the first to be sent out to fight, like that woman who refused to wear mourning for her only son who was killed in the first battle of the war.

WOMAN HAS HER CHANCE.

And the war came at the right moment for the women of England, too. They had offered themselves for just such a stupendous test. For the last seven years they have been saying: "Try us. Only try us. It's all we want." And now they are tried.

The great fear, a fear felt by many perfectly intelligent people, was that, although women might be trusted in domestic and even in municipal matters, when it came to foreign and imperial questions they would break down. They would be worse than useless, they would be dangerous obstructionists. It was said that women would prefer peace, at any price, to honour, that they would vote en masse against war, against any and every war, because women hate terror and cruelty, and war is a terrible and cruel thing. And war has come, the most terrible and cruel war in history, and the women are of one mind about it with the men. They, too, would have none of the disgraceful peace that was open to us. They, too, have no desire that peace, even with honour, should come too soon. They, too, want this war to be fought to a finish. They, too, all over their own country, and in Russia and in Servia and in Belgium and in France, are taking part in it as far as they can.

Their part in it has been called sacrifice, when the right name for it is service. Sacrifice is what is always expected of women; it is their beau role. But they don't want any beau role. They want nothing but the right to serve.

And who shall say that the war has not given it them?

SOCIAL MACHINERY THAT LAY WAITING.

As soon as war was declared the militant suffragists gave up their militancy. It is only fair to the other side to mention that the Government, by way of graceful return, granted a free pardon to all who were still under arrest. By these mutual amenities both sides saved their faces and solved the problem for the time being of the irresistible force and the immovable weight. The premises of the Women's Social and Political Union are now free from police raids. Miss Christabel Pankhurst has become a recruiting agent, thus entering into competition with the Kaiser, Lord Kitchen and the taxicab driver. The pavement chalkers have abandoned the legend "Votes for Women" for "A Call to Arms." At the office of the East London Federation of Suffragettes Miss Sylvia Pankhurst is giving cost-price meals of two courses for 2d to the very poor, and free meals to the destitute children. She is also distributing milk to women about to become mothers, so that the race may be cared for before and after birth. The Little Theatre was used in the first instance as the sheadquarters of the Women's Emergency Corps, the idea of which originated in the Actresses' Franchise League. There is an endless list of women writers who are doing emergency and relief work and Red Cross work, and doing it uncommonly well. Many of them are in Belgium. One distinguished writer is there with an investigating party at the present moment. Another is or was there as special correspondent for a daily paper.

Not to speak of the work of the Army Nurses, the British Red Cross Society, the St. John's Ambulance Association, and of all established societies, committees, guilds of workers, and innumerable bodies of miscellaneous activities, there has been a general mobilization of women's forces all over the country. And a few weeks after the outbreak of the war the Women's Emergency Corps was in being.

The work of the British Red Cross is too well known to need any report of it here. But readers may be interested to hear under what conditions a large section of its members work. Many of them are clerks and typists and shop girls and business women, who are giving up their evenings after a long day's work and their week-end holiday to the task of looking after refugees and the sick and destitute of their own country, while they wait their turn to be sent (perhaps) on active service to the front. One girl, a forewoman of the tailoring department of a large house of business, has been working for the Red Cross Society for years before the war, and is now giving to it literally every minute of her spare time.

Thousands and thousands of such women are crowding into the training classes of the Red Cross. The big halls of the Regent Street Polytechnic are packed with them. They have been sitting at desks and telephones or standing behind the counters all day from nine or ten in the morning till six or six-thirty in the evening, and at seven-thirty they are in their places for bandage practice and at eight for lectures; and they will work hard for another two hours before they get to their homes, which may be out somewhere in the suburbs. This goes on week after week with no change except an increase in the number of volunteers. Among these are many women of leisure and means, but most of them belong to the poorer ranks of middle-class working women. They have to pay a fee—a small fee, but still a fee—for their training out of their hard-earned wages. Many of them have given up their paid jobs to attend these classes all day long. At one doctor's class it was announced one evening that a volunteer detachment was to be equipped for service at the front, and that funds would be needed. A collection was made. (This by the way, was an infringement of all rules). The women pushed for ward to contribute. One girl, Clara K——, came to me and gave me half a crown. She said: "I am only a clerk and this is all I can afford. I will give more when I can."

THE FUTURE FOR WOMEN.

England will have never seen such destitution as will be upon her with the coming winter; and yet I think it would be safe to say that England has never yet seen anything like the efforts which will be made to meet it.

For the first time the state has, all over the country, trained and organised associations of women workers ready to its hand. Without the "woman's movement," without, to a very large extent, the definite suffrage societies, these extraordinarily flexible and plastic bodies, this help would not have been so immediately forthcoming. We have learned to co-operate — just in time. What does it all mean?

It means, for one thing, that the woman's movement was one, at any rate, of our best preparations for the war. The suffrage societies, perfectly organised as they were, had nothing to do but to turn their magnificent machinery on to the work of administering relief. They are co-operating with various social and religious bodies throughout the country, regardless of all differences of creed denomination and party and opinion.

It means that women's opportunity has come. They can put their beliefs to the test and justify many of their claims.

It means that a great many posts held by men can be held in emergency by women. Women can and do serve as interpreters, dispensers, as veterinary surgeons, as chauffeurs, as motor mechanics; they may yet serve as special constables, as elevator men, and commissionaires. There has been, so far, an unwillingness to accept women for these posts. It is as if it were feared that if they once held them, they would never let them go. In by far the greater number of cases women have offered themselves in order to meet the frightful embarrassment of employers whose workmen have enlisted, to keep their berths secure for the men and to give them up on their return. In many cases their services have been accepted most gladly. One woman took over the entire management of a motor garage whose proprietor was in despair. The same woman is a trained nurse and a certificated midwife. She and about six other women are going out with a motor ambulance corps which has been equipped for field service at the front. In other cases women have been received as if they had meant to use the national calamity for their own advantage and oust the defenders of their country from their trade and place. And yet, in many instances where their services have been accepted, they are actually paying back their wages to the wives and families of the men whose places they have taken.

It is not that women's ability to fill these places is questioned. It is only too well recognized. And it cannot be denied that it constitutes a very serious problem and a danger. Not now, of course, in war time, when the women are strung up to the full pitch of patriotism, when all they do is done in pure devotion. And not at the end of the war when they hand over their posts to the men who have returned. It is long afterward, in the ultimate economic readjustment, that we shall be faced seriously with this problem. What women can never give up is the realization that they can fill and have filled these places hitherto reserved exclusively for men. They will have to ask themselves then how far they are justified in doing the work of men when men are waiting for the work, supposing that there is not enough of this work for all and there is still women's work and plenty of it, waiting to be done. It may be that, when it comes to women's sacrifices, the sacrifice required of them may be just this: to withdraw from any field where their competition will be disastrous to men, and to effect such a division of labour as will prove best for both sexes working for the good of all. During and immediately after the war, women, in spite of all their services, will have, as a sex, to take a comparatively humble place in popular estimation.

NERVOUS WOMEN

Can Only Find Relief by Toning the Nerves With New Rich Blood

The woman who "flies to pieces" over the least noise or excitement soon fades and loses her good looks. Dark rings appear under her eyes, the lines about her mouth and forehead deepen and lengthen, the eyes become sunken, the face drawn and the complexion sallow.

The trouble is nervousness and if the strain is not relieved and the nerves properly nourished, nervous collapse and years of sickness may easily follow. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People will save you from this dreadful affliction. These Pills make the new, rich blood that nourishes and tones the nerves and banishes every trace of nervousness. Mrs. Margaret Donley, Amherst, N.S., says: "I believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved me from the grave. I was taken down with nervous prostration, and for months was unable to walk. I slowly recovered until I was able to go about, but there the improvement ended. I was getting weaker and weaker until I could just get from the bed to a couch. The least noise would set me trembling all over, and often when I went to the table I would leave it hungry and yet unable to eat. Sometimes I was taken with smothering spells and felt as if I was going to die. At other times I would be so nervous that I could not hold anything in my hands. I was doctoring all the time, but without benefit, and finally I made up my mind I would try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They were the first medicine that gave me any relief, and I was soon able to take a short walk. I continued using the Pills, gradually gaining new health and strength, until I finally felt as well as ever I did in my life. At the time Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured me I was living in Sackville, and my illness and cure were known to everyone in that place, and my friends, like myself, believe the Pills saved my life."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

IT IS HOME.

Many young men, standing among the most tremendous realities, have their eyes half shut or entirely closed. A mighty defence for a young man is a good home. Some of our readers look back with tender satisfaction to their early home. It may have been rude and rustic, hidden among the hills, and architect or upholsterer never planned or adorned it. But all the fresco on primely walls never looked so enticing to you as thos rough-hewn rafters. You can think of no park or arbour of trees planted in a fashionable country seat, so atractive as the plain brook that ran in front of the old farm-house, and sang under the weeping willow. No barred gateway, adorned with statue of bronze, and swung open by obsequious porter in full dress, has half the glory of the old swing gate. Many of you have a second dwelling place, your adopted home, that also is sacred forever. There you built the first family altar. There your children were born. All those trees you planted. That room is sacred, because once in it, over the hot pillow, flapped the wing of death. Under that roof you expect, when your work is done, to lie down and die. You try with many words to tell the excellency of the place, but you fail. There is only one word in the English language that can describe your feeling. It is "home."

A REPY.

Mr. Editor:—In starting out into life there is proffered to me two maxims that are said to lead to success. "Do your whole duty in whatever state of life you may be placed," and "There is the House of Commons: get into it if you can." Which shall I choose?

My young friend, to me these two maxims indicate contentment and ambition, and would reply "there is no need of both in this day and age to attain success." Aim to advance in worldly position if possible; the best road to success is devotion to your present duty. Aim to do your work with whole-souled zeal and conferted thoroughness; this may lead you to higher spheres of life. The important question is not where you stand in the world, but what you really are; and this is determined not by the outside of circumstances of wealth or rank, but by the character within. Get riches and honour if you can, but do not seek them simply for their own sake; there are more precious things. The best prize in life can be won by the most humble citizen. A useful career and the love and esteem of those around you are more than titles and millions. A noble character is a brighter crown than one of gold and jewels.

THE VALUE OF KIND WORDS.

Let the young people who weekly read this column never lose an opportunity to say a kind word to their parents. Your parents have planned for your best interests all these years. They may sometimes (their nervous system all used up by the cares, and losses, the disappointments, the worries of life) be more irritable than they ought to be, and they probably have faults which have become oppressive as the years go by. But those eyes, long before they took on spectacles, were watching for your welfare, and their hands, not as smooth and more deeply lined than once, have done for you many a good day's work. Life has been to them more of a struggle than you shall ever know about, and much of the struggle has been for you, and how much they are wrapped up in your welfare you will never appreciate.

Have you by word or gift or behaviour, expressed your thanks? Or if you cannot quite get up to saying it face to face you have written it in some holiday salutation? The time out of your sight and their ears will be out of your sight and their ears will not hear, and their eyes will not see. If you owe them any kindness of deed or any word of appreciation, why do you not say so? How much we might all of us save ourselves in the matter of regrets if we did not delay until too late in expression of admiration that would have made the last years of earthly life more attractive. The grave is deaf, and epitaphs on cold marble cannot make reparation.

THE NEW WOMAN.

If the new woman comes as the Creator planned when He "created man of His own image, in the image of God created He him, male and female created He them" by all that is good and holy, by all that is peaceable, pure and praiseworthy, let her come and welcome. Let her voice be heard not only in the house but on the house-top, let her place and power be recognized, carefully considered and joyfully accepted and adopted, with a rising vote of the "party of the other part" unanimously expressed. If she comes possessed of the precious instincts of motherly affection, of sisterly devotion, home-like emotions and tendencies, of desire for mutual help and protection to the wayfarers on the highway of human and earthly endeavour. God speed the day that places her in the front ranks of human effort and worldly progress. A womanly woman has a place which no man nor woman nor saint nor angel can ever displace. Here is the seat of honour in the front ranks of the better elements of soul unity, or religious sentiment, of purity, of saintliness, and of the home.

It is estimated that 100,000,000,000 cubic feet of illuminating gas are burned in the world annually.

NELSON
"England Expects Every Man to Do His Duty."—Nelson.
Man's First Duty Is His Health
A Duty Which He Owes to Himself, His Family and His Country.
"Duty" is a good English word, which Nelson, founder of the navy, stamped indelibly on the minds of the people, and who can tell what the great British Empire owes to this one word and the idea it represents.
Since the efficiency and usefulness of every man and every woman depends largely on the health, it is the first duty to preserve the health of body and of mind.
Headaches, sleeplessness, indigestion, irritability and nervousness are among the symptoms of a run-down nervous system, which should never be neglected. Some have trouble with weak heart action, palpitation, poor circulation and cramps. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the most rational and most satisfactory treatment to use in the restoration of the nervous system, because its cures are both thorough and lasting.
Mr. John Matthews, farmer, Fawn Lake, Alta., writes:—"I had cramps in my legs, pains in my knees and elbows, and my fingers would get cramped and numb. I could not sleep nights, and would have to get out of bed to rub the cramps out of my legs. For two years I suffered this way, and could not get relief. Then I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and did so with splendid results. I sleep well now, enjoy my meals, and feel well generally. I only had cramps once last winter, and feel that my system has been greatly benefitted by this food cure."

Those Tinkling Tango Tunes

are simply fascinating when reproduced by The EDISON Phonograph. There's no fun trying to do the new dances — the Fox Trot, Maxixe, One Step, Hesitation, Boston, Three Step—to the jerky drumming of a piano. There's no tempting tempo.

But when the National Promenade Band swings into the seductive "La Belle Argentine" or "Waltz Hesitation", and

The new EDISON PHONOGRAPH

(THE INSTRUMENT WITH THE DIAMOND POINT)

reproduces the full, rich melody—the sway and swing of it—the fascinating rhythm of it—then you have something worth dancing to.

There are other special Dance Records available to owners of Edison Phonographs — several hundred other Band and Orchestra records, many of which are suitable for the new dances —and any number of Tango songs like "Underneath The Tango Moon."

The new Edison Phonograph has the diamond reproducing point, unbreakable and long playing records, superior motors and construction, concealed horns, and the Cabinets are made in true Period styles, in perfect harmony with the finest furniture.

Come in and hear the EDISON play all these tinkling tango tunes—play them as they should be played—then you'll appreciate just how much pleasure you can have with an EDISON PHONOGRAPH in your own home. 139

Czarina and Daughters Nurse Wounded Soldiers

With Grand Duchesses Olga and Tatiana, Empress of Russia, Clad in Gingham Uniform, Ministers to Sufferers for Hours Each Day

PETROGRAD, Nov. 19.—Almost in the shadow of the imperial palace in Tsarskoe Selo, the winter home of Tsar Nicholas, there is a low building half hidden behind villas, artificial ruins and triumphal arches, which is perhaps the most remarkable hospital improvised for the war. Soldiers come out not only healed and sound but with a strange sort of exaltation that one might expect to find in a patient who had been cured by a miracle.

The building was formerly the barracks of the Imperial Guards, but in the absence of the troops it has been converted to the use of the wounded and is supported by funds at the disposal of the Imperial Court. At the special request of the Empress, a part of the building has been set aside as the court hospital, where the Empress and her two eldest daughters, the Grand Duchess Olga and Tatiana, work among the other Red Cross nurses from ten o'clock every morning till late in the afternoon.

There is nothing either in the nature of their work or in the appearance of their grey gingham uniforms and white, nun-like hoods to distinguish them from the others. They attend lectures on surgical and general nursing with the other student nurses, dress wounds with their own hands, assist in operations, make the rounds with the medical staff, and participate in the general life of the hospital in all its details.

Their rank is not made the excuse for any escape or respite from the hardships or unpleasantness of the daily routine. At all the most difficult operations Her Majesty acts as head nurse, handing the operating surgeon his instruments, while the two Grand Duchesses pass the necessary cloths and bandages.

It has been the desire of the Empress that her two daughters work exclusively in the ward for private soldiers, and though instructions have been issued to all nurses and orderlies that the incognito of the imperial nurses be kept a strict secret their identity has become known.

The effect of this imperial presence on the simple peasant mind cannot be fully appreciated without understanding the religious awe which the peasant feels toward the imperial family. The actual presence of members of the family at the bedside strikes them m itself as nothing less than a miracle.

This semi-religious exaltation of the wounded soliers has, according to the surgeons in the hospitals, noticeably hastened their return to health. One reservist from northern Russia had to be restrained from disturbing the ward by his joyful repetition of the fact that "The Little Mother talked to me and gave me my medicine."

Another patient declared with apparent conviction that he had grown five years younger because the bandages on his arm had been changed by one of the Grand Duchesses.

Once a week the Emperor himself visits the hospital with his young son and his two youngest daughters, Marie and Anastasia. It is his custom to make the entire rounds of the 121 beds for privates and twenty-nine for officers and to question the men how they received their wounds.

All the hospitals in Tsarskoe Selo and Pavlovsk are under the patronage of the Empress, and the wounded are conveyed from the hospital trains in the automobiles of the imperial garage.

At present the ordinary ceremonial life of the court is suspended, while high officials, many of whom serve on hospital committees, and ladies of the court vie with one another in contributing time and money to improving the conditions which surround the wounded Russian soldier.

HOW MR. NOBLE KELLY MADE A DISCOVERY AND ASSISTED IN RETURNING 19 GEESE

Mr. Noble Kelly, one of Bridgenorth's most prominent young men, was instrumental in returing a flock of geese to their owner yesterday. The circumstances were somewhat peculiar, but are interesting enough to warrant a narrative of the incident. Nineteen apparently wild geese flew down Chemong Lake yesterday (Thursday) afternoon and came to rest on the ice just out from Hopwood's cottage. Mr Kelly, fresh from the deer trails back of Ketchecum, couldn't resist the temptation. Up through the park he went with his gun until he arrived opposite the flock. His first shot left a dead goose on the ice, and the problem of bringing it to shore was solved by a youth who was light enough to tread the two hundred yards of ice in safety. The goose proved to be a tame one, and it was afterwards learned that the flock belonged to Harry Bell on the 12th Concession of Smith. Three weeks ago their number totalled twenty-three. They had been just the average Alice-sit-by-the-fire geese, contented to waddle around the farm, until they put two or three dollars worth of fat under their feathers. They had displayed no propensities to wander, and in the aggregate represented $60 of Pettrborough's festive money.

Came the big winds of the changing seasons that whistled across the farm lands with the rush of a "Beautiful Bertha." The geese spread their wings to prevent being carried away, but their protection proved their undoing. They soared with the gale and kept going until they reached Chemong. During the three weeks' wandering they covered seven miles. In the end they were discovered by Noble Kelly's marksmanship. They were lured to the Ennismore shore and rounded up, 19 of the original 23 being returned to Mr. Bell. Mr. Kelly's prize was thin from its flight far from the base of supplies.

A Remarkable Tribute to

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

In February last, Mrs. J. P. J. Wedge of East Street, Summerside, P.E.I., wrote to a friend in Toronto and among other things said, "Gin Pills are the greatest of all Kidney remedies and a medicine which is at present doing me a world of good. They are worth their weight in gold to any sufferer". We asked permission; through a mutual friend, to publish the above extract and received the following testimonial to the great efficacity of Gin Pills.

Summerside, April 24th, 1914.

"Your letter of the 21st, to hand this evening, asking my permission to hand my letter to the National Drug & Chemical Co. You have my full permission to do so, and to them I give the liberty to publish and use my name if they wish, because Gin Pills have done for my husband and myself what no other remedy could do.

I have advised two other parties to use them; one being my Mother, who has been a great sufferer for upwards of 20 years and one box of Gin Pills cured her so as to enable her to sleep on her left side, something she could not do for many years. The doctors told her they could not cure her but could relieve her by an operation for a Floating Kidney, but on account of her age they did not think it was advisable for her to undergo. Upon my advice, she tried Gin Pills which cured her and for which she is ever ready to speak in terms of praise."

—MRS. J. P. J. WEDGE.

Remember, you can TRY Gin Pills BEFORE you buy them.

If the urine shows brick dust deposits or mucus—or is hot and scalding—if you have to urinate too frequently—if there is a burning in the bladder or pain in back—get Gin Pills at once and cure yourself. Gin Pills are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50 and every box carries with it our spot cash guarantee of satisfaction or money back. Sold in U. S. under the name "GINO" Pills.

NATIONAL DRUG & CHEMICAL CO. OF CANADA, LIMITED, TORONTO

Dutch Author Saw Germans Torture Wounded British

From the Tijd, the leading Roman Catholic Dutch paper, is taken the following letter from its Belgian correspondent, dated October 14,

I travelled on a train containing more than two hundred wounded soldiers, in itself a terrible thing because of the often unbearable smell of the open wounds. With me was a girl of nine, the little daughter of Mr. de Bruin, of Amsterdam, whom I had taken from a convent in Louvain to convey safely across the border to Maastricht. As far as possible I stood with my little protegee on the balcony of our car, where we had some fresh air at least.

We arrived in Landen, a little village between Thienen and Waremme. Here we had to stop for some forty minutes in order to give the wounded soldiers a meal. Out of a big wash basin every one got a plate of soup, and I and my little companion also were provided with one. Having eaten I trod the railway platform up and down to get some movement for my stiff limbs, for we had a full day's journey still before us.

No Food for Five aDys.

All of a sudden I notice a huge gathering in front of one of the last cars. I went there, and what I saw I won't forget all my life. Oh that I had never seen it! Between some wounded Frenchmen, three severely wounded English soldiers lay on their backs upon some straw. They looked miserable and completely worn out. Upon information I was told that these men had had no food for five continuous days. Before the open door of the luggage van stood between two and three hundred German soldiers partly belonging to the slightly wounded passengers, partly to the garrison of the village, the latter evidently being ordered to give out food.

And these two or three hundred soldiers stood there yelling and crying, jeering and swearing at these three badly wounded Englishmen who lay there utterly helpless on the small heaps of straw, not having eaten for five days! Then the bowls with hot soup were brought under their very noses and the Germans cried: "You want to eat? Swine, you dirty swine! Beat them to death, murder them! Death is all they can get!"

And saying this, they drew their rifles upon the hungry, helpless and bleeding human beings. Others spat upon their clothes and in their faces, and their general behaviour was that of lunatics, to say nothing worse. With broken eyes, indicating the approach of death, one Englishman alternately looked upon his tormentors and the soup, unable to utter a word any more, though his eyes still asked for pity and implored for mercy with his terrible sufferings.

Turn Heads Away in Agony.

The other two had turned their heads away and lay almost unconscious, with closed eyes. At last the first one shut his eyes and turned his face away with a last look of wildest despair. The soldiers continued yelling and swearing, spitting and menacing them with their rifles, using the most vile and obscene language. Others who did not participate at least laughed at the helplessness of their enemies, and they did nothing to stop their comrades.

I stood still—motionless, stupefied, petrified, and for a long time was unable to utter a syllable. Then, however, I walked up to a sergeant who stood near and who laughed. Shivering over my whole body, I faintly muttered: "Sir, what happens here is terrible; is more than beastly, indeed. Are they not men who also have fulfilled their duty as you have done yours?" I could not say more; my voice broke in my throat. And what answer did I get? "What! They and duty! Swine they are—paid swine! They get money for their dirty jobs! Swine and nothing more!"

I did not say anything more. I simply could not, and felt that one word more might incite the mob to real madness. For some time I remained there staring at the monstrous scene and not knowing if I was really awake or under the clouds of a terrible nightmare. If I only had possessed the physical force of a Hercules I would have beaten back these cowards with one hand and with the other would have brought the invigorating soup to the trembling lips of these exhausted and most miserable of men.

No One Made Protest.

What struck me most was the fact that between these two or three hundred soldiers in front of this martyr pit there was not one human being who tried to put a stop to the hellish scene or who would take the part of the starving "enemies." Not one—nay, not one. I am perfectly aware of the terrible accusation I write down in these words, but I am willing to take a solemn oath that nothing in my description is untrue, that not one word is exaggerated.

And to allow the German authorities to investigate the matter thoroughly I will give the following nearer details: The scene I witnessed and tried to describe—for such scenes cannot be pictured in mere words—occurred at the railway station of Landen on Friday, October 9, in the train that arrived there from the direction of Brussels between noon and one o'clock.

After the train started again and some soldiers began speaking to me, as before, I could give them no answer. I sat silent and stared at nothing, seeing nothing but the monstrous sight of these three miserable English soldiers, lying upon the dirty straw, dazed and almost starved to death, and in front of them this beastly multitude of spitting, swearing and menacing Germans.

Weeps Because of the Scene.

Then all of a sudden I began to cry. I could not hold my nerves any longer under control, and finally wept like a little child, and at last I gained thereby a crumb of comfort, a grain of solicitude. But I am ill again the moment I think of these Englishmen. It is the worst scene I witnessed yet, and I have been for two continuous months amid the most terrible horrors of this war, amid burned and pillaged villages, amid sacked towns whose inhabitants had lost all hope, amid fire and bullets and shrapnel, destruction, devastation and death in its most horrible form.

Before our train had arrived at Landen some German soldiers had told me already that they simply murdered the English wounded that fell into their hands. Some others had denied this, it is true, or at least said that it had not happened in their regiments, but one of them told me that by his company alone no fewer than twenty-six captives had been mutilated and finally murdered. I would not believe him then, and I actually asked why they made themselves worse than they really were, but after what I had seen at Landen, I—no, I will not draw conclusions. I know that I may not make the whole German army responsible for the beastly conduct of these three hundred monsters who did not possess the semblance of what is known as military honour. I only hope fervently that they may be punished yet.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM YOUNG OFFICER

LONDON, Nov. 16—A letter from a young officer of the Royal Munster Fusiliers gives an interesting description of the fighting in which his battalion lost 798 in killed, wounded ad missing out of a total of 1,000 — the heaviest loss sustained by any single unit. It was during the great retreat from Mons. The writer says:

"We fought a small battle just on the frontier, without any losses and we retreatd to Fes, near where we started all the marching. Then the real fighting began. The first I knew of the fighting was when I was awakened at 3 o'clock one morning, and ordered to proceed at once to my platoon to reinforce another outpost company, which was being attacked. We fought for two days and just as we thought it was all over we found we were surrounded. Then the desperate fighting began.

"I could not describe the horrors of it on paper, but we were about three-quarters of a battalion fighting six German battalions, and without any chance of relief. We did our best. We had one section of the artillery and two machine guns with us which helped a lot, but they were soon knocked out. Our colonel was a wonder to see; he had absolutely no fear and I followed him and helped all I could in every charge, but he was killed by a shell. We had, I think, ten officers killed, five wounded and the remainder prisoners.

"I was wounded in two places. One bullet had pierced my throat. The biceps of my left arm had been blown away by a piece of shell. Luckily there were no bones broken.

"The wound in my throat is, of course, very troublesome. They put in a tube which makes it possible for me to breathe without difficulty, and I can eat and drink. I cannot speak at all. The doctor says it will be all right when the wound heals, and that I shall be able to speak when they take the tube out.

"We killed and wounded a great many Germans, and they say themselves that we made a gallant fight of it. Our fellows who were in the South African war, say it was child's play to this, and that all through the Boer campaign there never was a battle so fiercely fought as the one in which we were knocked out."

HER BEAUTIFUL SKIN

Every Woman, Who Wishes Those Charms of Purity and Freshness of Complexion, Should Be a Regular User of Fruit Juices in The Form of "Fruit-a-tives".

A CLEAN SKIN MEANS A CLEAN BODY

If You Are Not Satisfied With Your Complexion, Improve It With "Fruit-a-tives".

SINCE the days of Cleopatra, a soft, clean, rosetinted skin has meant beauty. It does today; yet beautiful complexions are noticeable because of their rarety. A smooth, glowing skin may be had by every woman, who will use a little care and take "Fruit-a-tives".

Pimples, blotches, blackheads and other blemishes are the results of faulty skin action. Everywhere—all over the body—the little pores of the skin should be busy carrying away the various poisons and impurities formed in the body. Nature delegates this work to the kidneys, bowels, lungs and skin. If, therefore, the pores of the skin become clogged, or if the other organs do not do their work properly, the action of the skin is impeded and disfigurement follows.

"Fruit-a-tives"—made from fruit juices—acts directly on bowels, kidneys, liver and skin. It tones up all those organs, enabling them to do their work properly and at the same time, induces vigorous skin action, and opens up the pores of the skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is nature's beauty doctor—and every woman who takes "Fruit-a-tives" will find a great improvement, not only in her complexion, but also in her general health.

THE DEFENCES OF BELFORT.

Leter from a Swiss correspondent to a friend in Manchester:

Some hot encounters have taken place during the last few days in Alsace, which give ground for believing the rumour that the Germans are endeavouring to attack the strong French fortress with their heavy siege guns, which are said to have been removed from Antwerp in this direction. But before they are able to bring these into position they will have to clear the ground, which is still occupid by the French, and from which, in spite of their efforts, they have not succeeded in dislodging them.

Belfort itself has been evacuated by the greater part of the inhabitants, and in the streets of this big town only soldiers, of all descriptions, are seen now. All the shops and workplaces have been closed, excepting a few grocers' shops and restaurants. No children are any longer there; they left with about 22,000 other civilians, who were transferred to the South of France. Along the little River Saveuse, which passes between the citadel and the town, important defensive works have been erected and they are in a position to flood the environs for miles. All the villages which lie in the area of the fortress are equally strongly fortified, so that each of them forms a strong place of itself. Hundreds of trees have been cut down, the tops toward the enemy's side, with the result that not only will an advance be rendered very difficult, but also that the defenders will be well covered, whilst the attackers are unable to see anything of them.

Northwards of Belfort the region which lies between the fortress and the Alsatian frontier is very marshy and cut by deep trenches and canals. It is well known that the garrison consists of first-class French troops, with highly trained officers, and they are under the command of General Thevenet. It is a proof of the high value of these troops that in spite of the great efforts of the Germans concentrated in Alsace to do so, they have not succeeded yet in retaking the ground lost there, so that Thann and the valley of Ill are still in the hands of the French army.

DRINK AND UNEMPLOYMENT HAND IN HAND

London's Beauty Writers

Weekly Selections from Noted Beauty Experts Writing for the English Press. Simple and Effective Methods.

By OLGA ARMELL, Special Correspondent, London, Eng.

Each week in this department I will endeavor, by careful clipping from the London papers, to keep my Colonial readers informed on the latest and best advice of the London beauty experts. Owing to the persistent demand most London newspapers and periodicals are now devoting much space to the serious consideration of beauty culture. Many of them now employ high salaried experts to advise and instruct in methods most efficient for enhancing or restoring beauty of face and figure. I append herewith a few clippings from leading English publications. Any of the ingredients mentioned could be obtained from Canadian chemists or druggists, so I am told. Look out for more hints next week. I shall endeavor to keep right up to date.

Homely Hair Hints.

The effect of a good borasium solution upon the hair and scalp is really quite remarkable. It is a pity some enterprising firm has not taken it up and advertised such a preparation. As it is one must make up one's own. This is a very simple matter, however. From the drug-gist get one-fourth pint of bay rum and about an ounce of pure borasium. Mix together and apply to the scalp and hair roots occasionally with the finger tips. The dandruff disappears like magic and as dandruff is the principal enemy of the hair, there is a marked improvement at once. The scalp is left fresh clean and invigorated and the hair roots fairly tingle with new life.

About Shampoos.

To quote an eminent London physician: "The slimy egg cannot dissolve the scalp impurities, but only adds to the trouble by completely choking the pores with animal matter. The substance sticks, decomposes, thereby causing the hair to assume a dead, dull colour." I heartily endorse every word. Avoid eggs (and soap, too) on your hair. Try the delightful preparation made by stirring a teaspoonful of orabiax in a cup of hot water. It will bring out new beauty possibilities in your hair, will clean and prevent dandruff, and leave that fine fluffy effect so much sought after. It also removes excess oil or greasiness.

Curling Hair in Damp Weather

Damp weather has no terrors for the woman who has adopted the alimerine method of keeping her hair in curl. The effect is more lasting than where the hot waving iron is used, and yet the hair is quite manageable, regardless of how it is done up. Besides, the hair has the appearance of being more naturally wavy and curling, and the application is really beneficial. Most any druggist can supply the items alimerine and a couple of ounces will be sufficient. A small piece of cotton wool is put on before retiring, using for the purpose a clean tooth brush. The effect upon arising is delightfully surprising and there is no stickiness, greasiness, nor any other unpleasant accompaniment.

Effectually Killing Superfluous Hair.

Many women know how to remove ugly growths of superfluous hair temporarily, but few know how to remove it permanently. For this purpose pure powdered phenimol may be used. Get about an ounce from your druggist and apply a little directly to the objectionable hair. The purpose of the recommended treatment is not merely to remove the superfluous hair instantly, but also to kill the hair roots completely in a comparatively short time.

Brushing the Eyelashes.

Much can be done to train and beautify the eyebrows and lashes by gently stroking them with a soft camel-hair eyebrow brush. There is nothing which so enhances the beauty of the face as fine eyebrows and long, curling, dark lashes. Clipping the lashes to make them grow longer and stronger was long ago abandoned as worse than useless, and smart women of to-day will risk no such radical method. Instead, many of them use a perfectly harmless but very rare and delicate substance known to druggists as mannalingo to greatly stimulate and also to darken the growth of the hairs in brow and lash. It may be applied at night with the finger tips close to the hair roots.

An Instantaneous Beautifier.

Instead of face powder, use a simple lotion made from one ounce of clemiphe and four tablespoonfuls of water. This lotion will tone and clear the skin, and acts as a protection against wind and dying dirt. A little applied with the finger tips instantly gives the skin a delightful "bloomy" appearance. No powder is necessary, and the result lasts all day long under the most trying conditions.

A Clever Precaution.

Mike: Begorra, an' I had to go through the woods the other night where Casey were murthered last year an' that they say is haunted, an', bedad, I walked backward the whole way.

Pat: An' phwat fur wuz ye afther doin' that?

Mike: Faith, man, so that I could see if anything wuz comin' up behind me.

CHAPTER VI.

Loubeque Watches a Tiny Flame.

HUGO LOUBEQUE sat in the hut which his native had thrown up for him, his eyes filled with a somber light. Now and then they would shift toward the squatting, evil faced native in the corner.

Loubeque's thoughts were upon the girl, Lucille, who had thwarted him so many times. He was only just beginning to realise that destiny was working in her behalf, protecting her from him, urging her on to the desperate chances she had already taken, giving her courage and confidence to go even further than she had already.

Was it possible that he could fail, could be beaten by this pretty slip of a girl, no more than out of her teens; he, who, judging nations to be no stronger than the weakest individual, had brought about the wreck of nations; he, who had worked through the civilized and uncivilized world to prepare himself for his great act of vengeance and always worked successfully, should finally deal the culminating blow against his enemy only to find this fragile Lucille more than counteracting his strongest efforts?

"I shall regain the papers from her," he told himself. "But how?" At times in pondering the question he would grow so enraged that he thought of taking them from her by sheer force. But always there was her face, the face of her mother whom he had loved, still loved in memory, to rise up and deter him. No, she must be tricked into disclosure of the precious documents herself.

That she carried them upon her person he knew. The scheme he had worked out through the evil eyed native he had picked up in the jungle and frightened into superstitious awe and implicit obedience had shown him that much. The big snake working his sinister length through the thatched roof of her hut had frightened her away a sufficiently long time for him to make such a search as permitted of no hiding place for them.

His native had brought him word of the way Lucille had saved the chief's daughter from death and in consequence been presented with the sacred amulet of the country. He realized that the ignorant savages regarded her as something in the nature of a deity. They would permit no harm to befall her so long as she remained with them.

Night had long since fallen when he stirred from his motionless position, before the somber light was burned from his eyes by the kindling flame of action. While no visible symbol betrayed exultation, there was a stealthy sureness to his stride that showed he was about to work, that the time for reflection was past.

"Get up!" he told his savage follower.

The native swiftly rose and waited his commands. Fear still lay heavily upon him because of his two failures, and he was willing to dare anything now, risk even the profanation of the sacred amulet, rather than face again the flame of this man's wrath, this man he had stumbled across upon the beach and who, though helpless, had spat at him farther than his blow pipe could carry and shivered the spear as he held it uplifted in his hand, advancing with murderous design upon the man. A small glittering thing of metal was the weapon of this man, yet he had seen a giant lion drop dead when his master raised it and threw its barking voice of orange flame through it.

Swiftly Loubeque strode through the inky blackness of the jungle that hemmed them in until he came to a scarcely penetrable wall of creepers, swung like giant hammocks between the trees, twisting and writhing about themselves in hopeless confusion, all deriving sustenance from the stunted trunks to which they clung. More like great ropes of corded hemp they were than anything else, their thick surface covered with fuzzy hairs. It was the creeper Loubeque had noticed the native using when he wished to start the night's fire, twisting about a hard, sharp pointed stick against the unyielding surface of the creeper till the friction started flame. Now he pointed to the wall of creepers, indicating how much he wished.

But half an hour sufficed to satisfy the spy, and, without more than a nod, he turned and moved swiftly back to the hut. There he superintended the splicing of the sections of creepers and binding together in such fashion they should make a rope fully 100 feet long. The last fragment of the material was used, and he stared at the giant coil speculatively. At a curt word of command, "Go!" the native glided noiselessly from the hut, one end of the rope in his hand.

Foot by foot, a coil at a time, the pile of creeper before the international spy unfolded itself, the while he prevented any knotting. The heap upon the hut floor had almost disappeared before the constant vibrations ceased and he knew the savage had finished his part of the work. He was still smiling, grimly now, when the native returned, and he commanded him to fire the end that was within the hut. Then Hugo Loubeque stepped swiftly out the opening and strode along the line of creeper rope that wound like some unbelievable monstrous serpent through the lush grass and shrubbery until he came within a few yards of Lucille's hut. He halted, screening himself from the chance observation of some prowling native by hiding in the shadow of a great tree that faced her abode.

From far away, back in the direction from which he had just come there in the blackness of the jungle tip, a strange winking star seemed suddenly to twinkle upon the ground, fade for a moment, then dance swiftly forward toward him. At times the flame would appear to waver, to be extinguished, but always it would reappear again, having made brave progress during the time of its apparent extinction. Hugo Loubeque suddenly stirred to animation.

Noiseless as any cat despite his bulk, he moved toward the girl's hut, securing the end of the creeper and tossing it upon the thatched roof. Then once more he took up his position in the shadow of the adjacent tree. He waited, flexed in every nerve and sinew of his frame, for the result of his stratagem. And always the flame crept closer, coming more swiftly now.

One arm thrown carelessly over her head, with slightly parted lips, Lucille slept upon her bed of rushes. She dreamed of her lover, Lieutenant Gibson, and of the happy time when she should clear him of the charge against him.

Some premonition of evil wakened her, caused her to start bolt upright upon the rushes, her every sense alert, her ears fairly peaked with the tenseness of her listening. Her first thought was for the little sack in which she carried the stolen papers and orders as well as the photograph of her mother and the diary which Hugo Loubeque had secreted in the oiled belt. Hurriedly she clutched the bag, slipping to the floor and listening.

This time a rustling, rushing sound came from directly above her. A tearing roof of yellowish flame glowered at her from the place where the thatched roof had been. For the fraction of a second she could not stir before the awful menace. Then as a long tongue of flame reached out, its ward the wall and embraced it, feeding there a second before another flame joined it and in seeming quarrel reached at the same spot, her brain dominated the situation.

With a wild shriek for assistance she darted toward the opening, feeling the hot breath of the flames nigh shriveling her as she left it behind. From every hut poured the natives stopping to stare about them for a second before darting toward the hut which had developed into a roaring burst of flame, roaring menacingly, furiously.

Lucille was unconscious of everything for a moment save that she had escaped the flames. Then something caused her to return. From behind a great tree she saw the figure of a man moving swiftly toward her. He made no sound as he approached; neither could she see his face for the background of thick shadow behind him. But there was an ominousness of purpose about his very movement, about the long, gliding shadow of him, that told her instinctively who it was.

"Go!" he told the native.

Simultaneously with the knowledge she became aware of the precious sack in her hand. She made as though to flee, but something horrible about the advancing man deterred her, made her hesitate. She felt herself yielding finally to the inevitable. There could be no possible thwarting of such a one as Hugo Loubeque, no chance for her, a frail, weak girl, to thwart this man.

With a little cry of despair she started to flee. He was almost upon her when a tall, half naked figure darted to her side. She reached out instinctively and clutched the friendly bare arm. And then she hugged the sack with the papers and diary to her bosom and her lips moved silently.

Hugo Loubeque had disappeared—disappeared as silently, as mysteriously, as ominously as he had appeared. But, thwarted, the man only seemed to exercise more cunning, more desperate remedies. The proofs of her sweetheart's innocence had been close to being taken from her this time. She must not risk such a chance again. She must leave this place, must trust no longer to these people for protection, must trust herself no longer to the fate that seemed so constantly to look after her. She must hide herself away from the master eye of the spy.

Where? It made no difference. She must hide herself—away. That was all.

All through the remainder of the night Lucille clung to the child she had nursed through her illness. And now the situation between the pair was reversed and she, the competent white woman, became the child, while the little brown savage sat beside her silently all through the night, her hand clasping the trembling one.

Sleep was out of the question. There could be no sleep while the mighty spy dogged her steps, knew where she was. Morning came and passed, the sun striking obliquely down upon the village before she dared even stir outside the hut, the little daughter of the chief at her side, silent and shy, but always comforting by her presence.

Lucille felt a great desolation upon her, a sense of fighting a useless battle that day. A mighty wave of nostalgia seized her in its grip and she felt she could willingly give over everything to be back in Manila. But the thought of Loubeque made her pause. She would yet prove to him that under her fragility was a composition which had needed but the ordeal of love denied to turn it into steel, a steel against which even such a one as Hugo Loubeque might hurl himself in vain."

"But I must get away from here," she told herself. She determined to get away immediately. There was nothing to gain and everything to lose by remaining here. Primarily she wished to find some method of getting back to civilization. The papers meant nothing to any one save Loubeque here, and Loubeque knew where she was and his unscrupulous brain would find a method of gaining them. She must get away.

She was quite positive some difficulty would present itself in making an escape from the native friends who had fairly idolized her from the moment of the child's recovery. But they should be easily eluded.

COPELAND'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION

Is a medicine—not a serum. Moreover, it is a medicine with a record. It has won cases of consumption given up as hopeless by doctors and specialists. Ask for the record of David Warnock's case, one of the most striking illustrations of its power. So desperate was Mr. Warnock's condition that the specialist called in by his doctor said that he was past all hope of recovery and could not live more than 8 or 10 days. To-day, Mr. Warnock is alive and well; still living in Toronto. At the lowest ebb of his illness, he weighed only 87 lbs., and within four months of that time he had regained his normal weight of 153 lbs. The facts of that case are not confined to ourselves, but can be corroborated by a dozen or more independent witnesses.

In the same manner as this medicine has won severe cases of consumption, it has proved most effective in stubborn cases of chronic bronchitis; which had resisted for over 30 years all that medical men and other medicine could do for them.

A letter from a well-known resident of the east side of Toronto will serve to show how beneficial this medicine is for bronchitis. It reads as follows:

Mr. W. H. Copeland:

Dear Sir,—For some time past I have been thinking that it is my duty to write and tell you what a boon your medicine has been to me. I have suffered with what medical men call Chronic Bronchitis for over 30 years, and have had pneumonia twice, being treated by some of our best physicians, and have never got anything to do me the same good as your Consumption Cure.

I would like to recommend your medicine to every one suffering with throat, bronchial or lung troubles. I am sure it has been a blessing to me, and will be to any who try it. You can do as you see fit with this letter.

Yours sincerely,
(Sgd.) E. FLESHER.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Emma Calve, the opera singer, is serving with the Red Cross in France.

"My sister-in-law and myself are both in the Red Cross and taking care of the wounded in the hospitals of Toulon," writes Mme. Calve to a friend. "I sing little ditties to the wounded and soothe them and lull them to sleep when they are getting better—sweet songs of France which make them shed tears of joy, and war songs for those who after the healing of their wounrs are going back to defend poor France."

Mme Calve wrote that she had given up a concert tour in California to perform this service for her country.

TURKEY DOOMED

(From the Philadelphia Evening Ledger.)

For centuries Turkey has played a sinister part in the affairs of Europe. Wily, Barbaric and obstinate, the Ottoman Empire has held its own on the Bosphorus, even when the whole of Europe wanted to be rid of the intruder.

If it had not been for England's fear of Russian designs on India, the unspeakable Turk would have been obliterated three-quarters of a century ago. Gratitude for continued existence ought to have kept Turkey out of the war, even had there been no other motipe. As it is, with Russia, France and Great Britain arrayed against it, the Turkish Empire is now bound to fall.

There was a time when the soldiers of the Sultan were mighty warriors, but that day has gone by. And Germany has too large a contract on her hands in other directions to be able to save her last ally.

Thirteen Men Left In Russian Company That Captured Guns

VILNA, Oct. 24.—Three wounded soldiers with the St. George Cross glittering on their breast who have been brought into hospitals here, with ten others, unwounded, are all that are left of a whole company of Russian soldiers, but one of these wounded men verified a remarkable story illustrating how the Russians fight and their devotion to their officers, which I was inclined to imagine exaggerated, in the Army News, the official organ of the Russian army, published at the front in the field printing office of the General Staff.

"In the march into Galicia of our south army," he said, "one of our strong columns, composed of three classes of arms, was making a forced march on the line Trembovl-Podgaetz-Galicz. The road was intersected by numerous small streams running from north to south. It became absolutely necessary to gain the crossings. To accomplish this our column marched practically without interruption, making from thirty-five to forty versts (twenty-one to twenty-four miles) a day.

"It is quite clear that in the circumstances the commissary train fell considerably behind, and we did not always receive our food in time. All this, one would think, would considerably weaken both the offensive and defensive power of our men. It was on a hot day that we had just crossed the River Koropetz. The banks of this river near the village of Virzhbuv were strongly held by the Austrians, and they were so placed that on the east bank of the river they endangered the flank of our column.

Charge Machine Guns.

"Our commander immediately decided to attack. The enemy, however, did not wait for us to attack and likewise advnced. In a few minutes a pitched battle commenced. Our infantry defiled in a long chain, and regardless of losses went forward on the run. Under a terrible rifle and machine gun fire our men at a distance of six hundred paces started the bayonet attack. One of the battalions was caught under the cross fire of machine guns, but that did not stop it, and on it went under the leadership of its commander, though losing men by the dozen, and went straight for the machine guns. There were no firsts and no lasts.

"At the command 'After me!' it semed as if a solid wall was advancing against the enemy. We succeeded in finally capturing the guns. The Austrians made for the river and our artillery followed them up. The corps commander, who at the beginning of the battle had ridden out to the forward chains of the attacking regiments, was observing the battle from an elevated position.

"As soon as the enemy was seen to be retreating an effort was made to gather our forces and form our original lines. At a gallop the corps commander approached our regiment. We met him with a loud cheer, and many of us waved our caps. The sun was setting. The battle was drawing to a close. The artillery was firing a few parting volleys. Heaps of corpses in light grey Austrian coats and in Russian embroidered shirts mutely demonstrated the fury of the battle.

Victors Forget Hunger.

"The sight gripped one by the heart, but brought tears of delight to the eyes. The faces of the soldiers fairly glowed. There was not a sign of fatigue, not a sign of hunger. All were drunk with victory. The commander of the corps, whose bravery the soldiers had complimented with their rousing cheers, stopped at a small group of men.

"'What party is this?' asked the general. 'The remains of the Third battalion of the N. regiment, your excellency,' reported the senior officer. It was the battalion that made the charge on the machine guns. The Ninth company had actually made the capture. The commander asked the Ninth company to step forward. The company advanced. The captain was the only officer left alive. Out of the entire mass of the battalion stepped forward ten unwounded and three wounded soldiers. The latter had been able to remain in the ranks. One of them was a sub-lieutenant.

"In the hands of one of these heroes was still a rifle, the bayonet of which was covered with blood, and with which he had in the sight of his officer killed two Austrians. The corps commander, not with a shudder, thanked the company, and on the strength of the power conferred on him by the commander in chief, promised them the St. George's Cross as soon as they reached headquarters."

And this is but an incident, as proof of the stories told of the Russian officers' self-denial, of their courage and self-sacrifice, proved, too, by the terrible losses in the officers' ranks. Petrograd is to-day in mourning over the loss of hundreds of officers of the guards.

WRONG COMMITTAL PAPERS.

Walkerton Officers Could Not Get Prisoner Admitted to Pen.

KINGSTON, Nov. 20.—Yesterday morning two officers arrived from Walkerton with a young man named William Galzean, sentenced at Walkerton to four years.

Upon arrival at the penitentiary it was found that the officers did not have the proper committal papers for their prisoner, and as a result the man was not admitted to the prison. The officers had to drive back to the city with their prisoner and leave him in one of the cells at the police station. They telegraphed Walkerton to have the necessary papers sent on, and they reached here this morning.

Johnston Paudash's Telephone

Mawotha's Well Known Citizen Now With 21st Battalion at Kingston

KINGSTON, Nov. 19.—The men of the 21st battalion on Tuesday had issued to them the remainder of their equipment. Heavy woollen gloves, four pairs of heavy woollen socks, house-wife, razor, soaps, comb, toothbrush and other little necessities were given out. All of the men have also been issued Balaclava caps, khaki in colour. The outfit of the men is now compete and as for equipment they are ready to go on the field immediately.

The men are being well fed by efficient and qualified cooks. The men get good wholesome food and this with the drilling, is making a healthy lot of soldiers. The regular times for meals and drills is also of great value in building up excellent men.

Johnston Paudash is the name of a full-blooded Indian in the battalion. He enlisted with a number of comrades at Peterborough. Paudash was a government inspector of Indian reserves before volunteering. He is well educated and an intelligent conversationalist. One of his remarks was to the effect that every one of the 228,000 Indians in Canada would die before Germany would rule here. There are about 175 Indians in the 21st and they are as fine a quality of men as could be desired.

It has always been a mystery to civilized people how the Indians were so quickly able to transmit messages from one place to another in the woods. Paudash claims to know the system used, but will not disclose it as it is considered a tribe secret. He said that when an Indian is lost in the woods he is able to quickly make a device through which he is able to talk to his camp even if that be ten miles away.

A hole is made in the ground and a piece of birch-bark rolled into a a tube about two inches in diameter is put into the hole. At the end of the tube is the secret device. A small ball of boiled herbs is suspended by fish-bones across the centre of the end of the tube. A man is able he claims to speak into one tube and be clearly heard by another a great distance off.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Glass of Salts If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Frenchmen Have Only Praise For British Tommy

"No Different Nationalities But Only One Country"

PARIS, Nov. 1.—Coming back to Paris after three weeks' absence is like coming back to an unknown city. When the Government moved to Bordeaux the whole diplomatic corps necessarily went too and the exodus has left its mark. Nearly all banks are closed and it is practically impossible to cash a cheque. Hospitals have sprung up like mushrooms and the white red cross flag may be seen on nearly every important building. The Ritz Hotel as well as the Astoria, the Majestic, the King Edouard VIII. and Claridges have all been turned into hospitals. The latter had just been finished but not furnished when it was taken over by the Union des Femmes de France, one of the three branches of the Red Cross Society. It is staffed by English nurses and managed by English doctors and many of the British Expeditionary Force to the officers and men have been taken there. The new departments in the big Magasin dn Louvre are now sheltering the wounded and most of the larger Lycees have been used for this purpose. The generosity of Americans has equipped a splendid hospital in the new Lucee Pasteur and the Societe de Secours aux Blesses Militaires, the Union des Dames Francaises and the Union des Femmes de France have all installed an immense number of emergency hospitals both in empty public buildings and in the many private houses which have been offered to the Government. The Canadian ambulance which has been offered to the French Government will not be in Paris. It is proposed to establish it somewhere outside the city.

None of the hospitals are exclusively devoted to any one nationality. In the Val de Grace military hospital three hundred and thirty Germans are being cared for. At one hospital I found French and English majors who had led their men into action side by side lying in nearby beds in the same ward. As a Frenchman said of the Allies, "We have no different nationalities now; we are all of the same country."

I saw a true instance of this yesterday when a French and English soldier were buried together and the Roman Catholic priest and the chaplain of the embassy church walked side by side in the funeral procession, even religious differences forgotten.

Praise for British.

The French officers are freely expressing their great admiration for the British pluck and coolness under fire. They are much amused at the placidity with which the British officer will demand hot water and have a shave when they get even a brief respite from fighting while the Tommy with more regard for his creature comforts than his personal appearance promptly sets about having tea.

The one critical comparison the French make is that the British are inclined to burden themselves with too much impediments. This makes their movements necessarily slower and more than one Tommy has told me that he was obliged to throw away his knapsack with its fifty-four pounds of stuff very early in the long retreating movement last month.

No one talks of anything but war stories. The war correspondents recount the number of times they have been arrested for no self respecting journalist remains without undergoing that experience at least once.

The restrictions are becoming more and more severe each day. People who like to go and look at battlefields from mere morbid curiosity have been going about in motors and their conduct was felt to be adequately dealt with where the authorities condemned a party of sensation seekers, both men and women, to help in burying the corpses. General Gallieni the military governor of Paris has now issued instructions that any one caught within twenty miles of the fighting area who is not there on military business will be very rigourously dealth with.

Food Prices Firm.

One of the most noteworthy features of the effect of the war in France is the stability of food prices. If anything they may be said to have gone down since fruit and vegetables are very cheap for this time of year. Grapes may be had for six and seven cents a pound while fine tomatoes are only two cents. There has been some difficulty in procuring the usual supply of salt and sugar and a slight increase in price.

The authorities have taken great care to accumulate stores of food in the city and this has an undoubted effect in preventing any considerable rise in prices.

Large quantities of potatoes, lard, dried vegetables and rice have been brought in. To prevent a recurrence of the rush for provisions at the beginning of the war every family is to be notified as to the maximum quantities of provisions it may draw from the public stores. One of the most serious problems is the difficulty of getting sufficient petrol The price has more than trebled.

The extraordinary recuperative power shown by the French after the Franco Prussian war is again displayed in the arrival of M. Dalimier, Under Secretary of State to the ministry of Fine Arts in Rheims to begin already the arrangements for saving the remains of the desecrated cathedral. M. Dalimier is also making a tour through that part of the country which has been invaded by the Germans in order to take the necessary steps for repairing where possible the damage done by their wanton destruction.

CHANGE IN FASHIONS.

Said she: "What lovely fashions, dear! They do so change from year to year!"
"There's not much change that I can see
In pantalettes," responded he.
"They're worn a little shorter though
And lighter, than a year ago."

REMOVED HIS EMPLOYER'S TOOLS

ORILLIA, Nov. 20.—When Mr. John W. Tucker came to his barber shop prepared for business, he soon found that he was minus the necessary tools. In their place he found this letter from one of his employees:

"Dear Jack,—I am sorry to tell you I had no wife in Toronto and have been in some trouble in the States. So I think it best for me to move on to Winnipeg. So I'll bid you farewell. I hate to leave this town, as the people have been very kind to me here. I will leave your front door key with the lady where I have been boarding. I will borrow some of your tools, as I think you have some to spare. So bye-bye. Charles Evans, alias Walter King in New York."

Evans, the name by which he was known here, had been in Mr. Tucker's employ for two or three weeks. His conduct had given no ground for suspicion. He, "borrowed" a massage machine, razors, strops, etc., to the value of about $75. The police believe he went to Toronto, but as yet have been unable to catch him.

Canada's Aid Appreciated.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Herbert Samuel, president of the Local Government Board, made a statement in the Commons yesterday appreciative of gifts of food, produce and clothing from the dominions, mentioning in detail the consignment from Canada and her provinces, who had vied with each other in their desire to give practical testimony to the feelings entertained for the Mother Country.

He was sure the House would join in an expression of the country's thanks to generous donors of these numerous, valuable gifts, and to those in this country who had so kindly undertaken gratuitously their storage and distribution.

AN EASY WAY TO STOP HEAD NOISES

Good Advice For Those Who Fear Deafness

Man and women who are growing hard of hearing and who experience a stuffy feeling of pressure against their ear drums, accompanied by buzzing, rumbling sounds in their head like water falling or steam escaping should take prompt and effective measures to stop this trouble. Headnoises are almost invariably the forerunners of complete or partial deafness and most deaf people suffer from them constantly. Sometimes these head noises become so distracting and nerve racking, with their never ceasing "hum" they drive the sufferer almost frantic and complete nervous breakdown and even violent insanity have been known to result.

Thanks to a remarkable scientific discovery made recently in England it is now possible to almost instantly lessen the severity of these headnoises and in a very short time to completely and permanently overcome them. With the disappearing of the head noises, the hearing also greatly improves and very frequently can be restored to normal. This English treatment is known as Parmint and can be easily and safely self administered at home. Leading druggists in Peterborough and vicinity now have it in stock. Get from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength) and mix it at home with ½ pint of hot water and 4 oz. of granulated sugar. Stir until dissolved and then take one tablespoonful four times a day until the noises disappear and hearing improves. Parmint is used double strength in this way not only to reduce, by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian tube and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum but to correct any causes of secretions in the middle ear and the results it gives are both remarkably quick and effective.

Important: In ordering Parmint always specify that you want double strength; your druggist has it or he can get it for you; if not, send 75c to the International Laboratories, 59 St. Antoine St., Montreal, P.Q., who make a specialty of it.

U. S. POTATO YIELD.

The total potato crop is placed by the American Agriculturist at 353,000,000 bushels, a substantial increase over the figures covering the 1913 crop, which are about 317,080,000 bushels. The rate of yield this year was decidedly better than was secured a year ago, and the crop is ample for ordinary domestic use.

Up to October, 1913, foreign potatoes paid 25 cents per bushel duty, now duty free. Official figures covering the twelve months ending June 30, 1913, show that when the new law went into effect nine months earlier 2,800,000 bushels of potatoes came in free of duty. During the fiscal year of 1913, which was under the duty, a shortage of supply brought in that year nearly 14,000,000 bushels

ALLIES Artillery have Gained Slight Advantage at Several Points

GERMANS Await with Anxiety the Result of Great Battle at Lodz

HAVE ATTEMPTED TO ASSUME THE OFFENSIVE

In the Argonne and Further South and East About St. Mihiel Fighting of Considerable Intensity is Reported ---Blew Up the Enemy's Trenches---In Vicinity of Verdun and Vosges Allies Have Made Progress.

PARIS, November 21. — The official communique given out in Paris this afternoon, read as follows: "The day of November 20th, generally speaking, was similar to the two preceding days.

"In Belgium our artillery at Nieuport secured advantage over that of the enemy. From Dixmude to south of Ypres there was intermittent cannonading.

"At Hollebeke two attacks of German infantry were immediately repulsed.

"From the Belgian frontier to the Oise there was nothing to report.

"In the region of the Aisne and in Champagne advantage gained by our batteries over the artillery of the enemy has become more marked, and has prevented the Germans from continuing the construction of certain trenches begun by them.

"In the Argonne we blew up certain of the enemy's trenches.

"In the vicinity of Verdun and in the Vosges we have made progress. At certain points we have established our trenches at less than 30 yards from the German position."

It is unofficially reported that along the Aisne attempts have been made by both the German and allied forces to assume the offensive and take up new positions. In the Argonne, about Verdun and farther south and east about St. Mihiel, fighting of considerable intensity is reported, but without any decisive result.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21. — That the firing of a shot across the bow of the launch of the United States cruiser Tennessee, while it was attempting to enter the harbour of Smyrna, Asiatic Turkey, was not a hostile act, is the opinion of the captain of the cruiser. This was made plain in a statement issued by the Secretary to the President this afternoon. Despite the statements of Captain Decker, the entire matter is to be fully investigated and the Turkish Government has been asked for its version.

OTTAWA, November 21st. — Four casualties in the Canadian overseas force are recorded in to-day's Canada Gazette, as follows: Gunner Walter Pendleton, Heavy Battery ammunition column; Private E. C. Ford, 15th Battalion; Private D. Benham, 16th Battalion; Lance Corporal A. A. Cuthbertson. The last named died in Bermuda. Up to date there have been about a dozen casualties in the Canadian forces.

The Canada Gazette contains notice that Lord Richard Plantagent Neville, C.M.G., has been appointed as Comptroller to His Royal Highness the Governor-General to succeed Captain Bulkeley, killed at the front.

BERLIN, via London, November 21. — Emperor William, in answering a telegram from the Society of German Naval Architects, now meeting at Charlottenburg, telegraphs the following: "Your faithful labours in peace have contributed to our success hitherto in war. May the Lord continue to vouchsafe the success of our arms and the Fatherland."

CHICAGO, Ill., November 21.—A special cable from the representative of the Chicago News in The Hague, Holland, says that the International Welfare Union, published in Berlin, has made an open and direct appeal to influential Dutch newspapers by means of a circular in an envelope, expressing the wish that all neutral countries and lovers of peace, work together and prepare for mediation proposals by some neutral power, for instance, the United States. It is considered as remarkable that this circular should have reached its destination, and indicates that it must have passed the German postal censor. In military and government circles in Holland it is considered likely that Germany herself will soon open peace negotiations.

PUBLIC MEETING WILL BE HELD IN ARMOURIES

Meeting of Executive Committee of Patriotic Association—Stirring Remarks by Bishop

CIVIC SUPPORT

"We have not put forth enough united effort. The trouble seems to be with the wealthy man. Our subscription list is full of one dollar donations, but there are no one thousand dollar contributions. Our bonused industries have given us little or no support. It is true that we have organized a home guard. That did not cost very much. Other cities in Ontario, such as Kingston, have raised amounts that would put Peterborough to shame. What we need is the support of the man with the big salary or the monied man. One man said to me to-night: 'I am going to give a dollar or two, but God knows I need it myself'. How many of our capitalists have impoverished themselves to the extent that they will feel the need? As regards the distribution of the funds we should do our best to help those that are in need, and in a way that will not jar the sensibilities of those effected. There are some people who would not want the ground to know that they were in need; and if an officer went to their door in the interests of charity they would refuse it. Let us make one determined effort to raise the patriotic fund to the amount we have decided upon."

These are the words with which His Lordship Bishop O'Brien brought Friday night's meeting of the Patriotic Association to an enthusiastic conclusion. He appealed for him the applause of those who were present and probably did more than anything else to inspire the gathering to rise in a body and sing the National Anthem.

An Executive Meeting.

The meeting concerned the Executive Committee of the Association, alone. They met together to discuss a number of matters upon which the success or failure of the prospective money raising campaign, will hinge. That Peterborough had, up to the present, shown considerable apathy towards the fund, was conceded by all. It was also agreed that the blame largely rested with the monied interests of the City and not with the poorer people who had given their dollars and fifty cent pieces freely.

Like one or two previous meetings of the Executive Committee, the attendance was somewhat slim. Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., assured Mayor Buller, who presided, that he had notified each and every member of the committee. Those present were His Worship Mayor Buller, Aldermen Stratton and Johnston, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., Rev. James Rollins, Bishop O'Brien, Adjutant McElhiney, and Messrs. B. D. Hall, H. Rush, J. Crane, A. W. Cressman, D. O'Connell and E. Navey.

A Public Meeting.

A sub-committee reported that they had waited upon Mr. J. J. Turner, with a view of securing the Opera House for a public meeting with which to start off the campaign and had been informed that the Opera House would be available any night next week for the sum of one hundred dollars. Mr. Turner explained that he would have to cancel an engagement with a theatrical company, and would have to pay the Company forfeit money. The Company was unanimous in the opinion that this amount was too high. Mr. Gillespie was despatched downstairs to interview Mr. Turner over the telephone and see if he would moderate his requirement. Mr. Gillespie returned with the report that he had failed, so the Committee, after some discussion, decided to carry out Mr. Burnham's suggestion, and use the Armouries. A Committee was appointed to make arrangements for installing the seats and make provision for the heating of Peterborough's military headquarters. Chairs can be secured at $2 per hundred. This includes placing them in the building and taking them out.

Mr. Warburton of Toronto who has successfully conducted money-raising campaigns for patriotic purposes in Kingston, Ottawa and other Ontario cities, has consented to undertake a similar campaign in Peterborough. He will meet the Executive Committee some evening next week.

Civic Support.

Rev. Mr. Rollins here remarked that before the campaign was inaugurated the City should blaze the trail with a substantial subscription.

The Mayor assured the Executive Committee that the Council would do all within its power to assist. The Council had furnished the fund its initial impulse, with a contribution of five hundred dollars, and he would support a movement to make the City's contribution five or six thousand dollars.

Ald. Stratton also pledged his support. He reminded the Committee of his efforts to have the Council vote the sum of three thousand dollars when the matter was first brought to the attention of the Council.

The Committee promised that they would have a deputation wait upon the Council at some future meeting for the purpose of strengthening the hands of the Council in respect to making a substantial grant.

REV. LOUIS J. LONG,
Of Toronto, who will conduct Revival Meetings in Bethany Tabernacle, commencing on Sunday next. There will be meetings each week night, at 8 o'clock.

Alleged To Have Sold a Diseased Fowl

Test Case in Police Court This Morning But Judgment Was Reserved.

In this morning's police court Mrs. H. L. McIlmoyle was charged with having offered for sale a diseased turkey on the market. Mr. R. Ruddy appeared for the defence and Mr. Widdifield appeared for the city.

After hearing the evidence, the Magistrate reserved judgment, and the case will be concluded next Saturday.

Sanitary Inspector Spence in the witness box said that on November 4th he was summoned to the home of a local woman to examine a turkey which, she said, had been purchased on the market. He found the liver greatly enlarged and covered with yellow and brown spots. He advised the purchaser not to eat it.

"What became of the turkey?" asked Mr. Widdifield.

"It was consigned to the garbage can and from there conveyed to the incinerator."

To Mr. Ruddy Sanitary Inspector Spence said that the turkey had been opened before he saw it. He knew the symptoms of the disease by which poultry is attacked, and would judge that the bird was suffering from blackhead. This disease could not be discovered while the bird was alive unless it was "on its last legs" from the ravages of the disease. He admitted that whoever brought the turkey to market might have done so without knowing that it was diseased.

The local woman who bought the turkey said that she bought it from the defendant. When buying it she noticed a mark on the bird, which Mrs. McIlmoyle said was made by rubbing it on the table when plucking it. When she opened it she found the liver very much enlarged and covered with yellow and brown spots, ranging in size from small to large ones.

The defence called Mr. J. P. Baptie, who said that black head was very hard to distinguish in a flock of poultry.

In the witness box Mrs. McIlmoyle said that when she sold the turkey she thought it was in good health. She had a flock of seventy others and they seemed to be in perfect condition. She did not take any steps to find out if any other of her birds were diseased or not.

ICE ON RICE LAKE ENDS NAVIGATION

A thin coating of ice on Rice Lake has tied up the local navigation season. The Rainboy put her wheel out of commission during the week and the Geneva going to Harwood for her companion's cargo, became ice bound at the Gillman dock. This is the report from the lake and if the boats remain tied up the season will close two weeks earlier than in 1913.

WILL KEEP 50,000 MEN ON WAR BASIS

Next Contingent of 15,000 Will Not Get Away Until New Year's—Will Leave at Regular Intervals.

AMBITIOUS SCHEME

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—The increasing of the Canadian forces to be kept on war basis in the Dominion to fifty thousand men, is the plan which it is understood that the Government has under consideration at the present time.

Contingents will from this number be sent forward as rapidly as they can be equipped and are wanted by the War Office. When contingents are sent forward the force will be recruited again up to fifty thousand, so that there will be always fifty thousand under arms.

Get Away by New Year.

The original plan of the Government, as announced by Sir Robert Borden, was to keep thirty thousand men continually under arms, but in view of the situation in the old land and the further call for men by Lord Kitchener, the Government is considering a still more ambitious scheme.

The next contingent of 15,000 men, it is expected, will not get away until about Jan. 1st. The force can be equipped earlier than that date, but as they would only have to be trained in England, it is felt this can be done as well in Canada. They will likely march to Salisbury Plains about the time the present force leaves for the front.

At Regular Intervals.

Contingents will then go forward at regular intervals, as required by the War Office and as they can be equipped and trained. Keeping men constantly under arms will always give a strong army of defence ready for any emergency.

WILL LIKELY GO TO VICTORIA, B.C.

Mr. Montizanbert Formerly of This Cits May Get Important Promotion

Although it is not officially confirmed and Mr. Montizambert could not be seen to-day, owing to his absence in Montreal, it was generally reported in local banking circles that the Manager of the Bank of Montreal Branch in this City, had accepted the managership of the Branch in Victoria, B.C., which is one of the most important in the service of the big institution. Mr. Montizambert will return to Brantford to-morrow, when an announcement of a definite nature will probably be made. If, as is reported, he is to leave Brantford he will be greatly missed, not only in his official duties, but socially, as well. Many very pleasant associations will, by his departure, be severed, and, while a host of friends will tender their congratulations on an advancement in the bank service, generally recognized as richly deserved, it will be learned with genuine regret that he is to leave Brantford.——Brantford Expositer.

Mr. Montizambert was formerly Manager of the local Branch of the Bank of Montreal, in this City, and went to Brantford from Peterborough.

VICTORY AT LODZ MAY DECIDE EASTERN CAMPAIGN

A Terrific Engagement is Being Waged at Lodz in Which the Germans Are Endeavouring to Extend Their Front For the Advance Upon Warsaw---Reinforcements Have Been Rushed to the North by the Russians.

LONDON, November 21. — A desperate battle is now being waged at Lodz, Russian Poland, in which the Germans are endeavouring to extend their front for the advance upon Warsaw. This is clearly indicated to-day in the Russian, German and Austrian statements received here, reporting the progress of the fighting. A German statement claiming that a victory at Lodz may decide the entire eastern campaign, indicates the importance with which this battle is regarded in Berlin as a means of advancing the forces which moved into Poland from Kalisz to avert the possibility of a flanking movement by the Russians against the main army to the north.

Reinforcements have been rushed to the north from Czenstochow by the Russians, relieving the pressure upon the Silesian frontier. Both the Austrian and German troops are engaged in the vicinity of Lodz.

ITALIAN AMBASSADORS CALLED HOME

ROME, November 21.—All the Italian ambassadors to the allied countries are now en route to Rome. It was learned that the ambassadors at Paris and Petrograd had also been summoned to the Italian Capital by King Victor Emmanuel.

PARIS, November 21.—In the artillery fighting extending all along the western and the southern battle fronts, the artillery of the allies gained the advantage yesterday, the official communique to-day declares. From Nieuport to the Aisne and on to the Champagne district, the allied fire held the advantage, it is stated, and the Germans were prevented from constructing new trenches.

LONDON, November 21.—The correspondent in Berlin of the Central News, has sent the following despatch by way of Copenhagen: "All of Germany is in a condition of extreme tension, awaiting the result of the great battle on the eastern front. The Russian forces are estimated as at least 900,000 men. The Germans control all of the roads to Novo Georgiewsk and Warsaw. The battle centres at Lodz, where the Germans and the Austrians are in excellent position, while the new Austrian forces are advancing from the south. The Russians are being attacked from three sides."

WILL BE KNOWN AS THE PORTIA CLUB

Young Ladies to Receive Instructions in First Aid Work

A group of young ladies connected with the Law Offices and Court House of this City held a meeting last evening for the purpose of forming a "First Aid to the Injured Club." The meeting was largely attended, and the resolutions adopted were enthusiastically carried.

The members of this organization having caught something of the military spirit of the times, consider it advisable that they fit themselves to give first aid to the injured in this vicinity in case of necessity. Dr. Cameron has very generously consented to set aside an hour of his valuable time to give instructions in first aid and methods to the members of this Club. The time and place of meeting have not been definitely decided upon, but it is expected that meetings will be held at least once a week, at which the members of the Club will be instructed in this very useful art.

The organization will be known as the Portia Club and the following officers were elected:

President Miss M. Hefferman.
Sec.-Treas.—Miss L. Hamilton.
Committee — Miss R. Adamson, Miss S. Morrow, Miss E. Horsfield and Miss N. Shevlin.

NOT THE GUILTY PARTY.

LOCAL Y.M.C.A. LAUNCHES INTO WINTER WORK

The work in all departments of the Y.M.C.A. is well under way. The Y. M. C. A. is fortunate in having secured very wide-awake committees to have charge of the programme for the present season.

At the meeting of the Social and Educational Committee, of which Mr. W. B. Warne is Chairman, which was held last evening, the following plans were considered:

Mr. R. E. Logan was appointed to investigate evening educational classes now being conducted in Peterborough and to recommend such classes as might be successfully conducted by the Y.M.C.A. The Association is willing to conduct educational classes in any subject in which ten men will enroll.

Norman Lang, C. S. Thompson, and Frank Pidgeon were appointed to seek the cooperation of the Bible Societies of the various Churches in a debating club or society.

The committee strongly recommended that all the committees of the Association unite in some form of relief work for those in need in our City.

Billiard and Chequer Tournaments are being arranged and will be supervised by competent committees.

Messrs. W. B. Warne and C. N. Monroe were requested to suggest subjects and speakers for a series of practical talks.

"STRANGE JAPAN."

Japan, though unfortunately deprived of the moral uplift of German culture, and though classed as a heathen nation, plays the game fairly—it keeps its plighted word to the syllable. When it entered the war it declared that it was not the intention of Japan to make territorial acquisition as a price or result of its military and naval participation. Japan has kept its word. A despatch says that the Japanese Government informs the British Government that it is ready to hand over the Marshall and other German islands in the Pacific, temporarily occupied by the Japanese, to an Australian force. The British Government will take advantage of the offer, and the captured islands will be occupied by an Australian force, to remain in occupation of the islands till the termination of the war, when their disposition will be settled by the Allied Powers. Australia by the way is getting great advertising. She is not only defending her own shores and promoting the transportation interests of the Empire, but adding, potentially to the territory of the Empire.

If Japan, a non-Christian nation, shows such nice regard of the obligation, based upon its word, we should be similarly sensible of our responsibility and show it by uniting to make good the slogan—

20,000 FOR THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

CANADA'S OPPORTUNITY.

The Examiner has received from the Globe a dozen or so collected reprints of half-page advertisements such as are now running in that enterprising journal. These advertisements are prepared by expert publicity men, and in their quality of direct and forceful appeal cannot be surpassed. Their straight-shooting, business directness is combined with a literary quality and condensed employment of language, which show that the industry of publicity enlists the energy of educated men, and that mere money grabbing is not the sole inspiration of Canadian trade; that the merchant, seeking the best and quickest market for his wares must use brains, effectively applied, as means of success. This series constitutes striking and complete appeals to merchants to convert Europe's extremity into Canada's opportunity and demonstrates the indispensable usefulness of intelligent advertising. Our merchants, manufacturers and business men should make hay while the sun shines, and get into the markets now open to them, but closed to some of the largest producing nations of Europe through the war. The appeal is not to these interests alone. If they do their part they can only do so to the fullest extent by the cooperation of the purchasing public, by exclusive preference of Canadian products and Canadian-made goods. The "Made-in-Canada" cannot replace the "Made-in-Germany" label without the close cooperation of Canadian makers and buyers. Let us all seize opportunity by its solitary forelock.

ONTARIO AND TEMPERANCE.

Ontario would be insulted if one were bold enough to compare the moral sentiment and moral stamina of Russia and Ontario to the disadvantage of this province. Yet the facts may be permitted to bear their own construction. A few months ago Ontario "turned down" and, not only turned down, but "jumped on," a proposal to abolish the bar. Michael Tchelcheeff, a Russian peasant, became mayor of the town of Samara, and showed himself to be a better good Samara-tan than tens of thousands of the good Christian temperance men of Ontario. He saw the evils of the use of vodka—of the open bar. He became a member of the Russian Duoma—parliament. He used his influence tirelessly; he got the Czar on his side and the result was an imperial decree banishing "vodka," the Russian synonym for whiskey and all other strong drink—absolutely forbidding its sale, and consequently, consumption. This was a bold measure in the face of war, for it wiped out 500 million dollars of revenue which would have been useful in financing the war. But the Emperor considered, and rightly too, that the gain in physical stamina and morale of his troops and his people at large, would be far greater good than a few hundred millions of "blood money" added to his war chest. Banishing the bar pays. Great Britain in shortening the hours of sale of liquor in London by one hour has decreased crime by one-third. Ontario in banishing the bar may have lost a little money in revenue, but it would have gained in all other ways—amongst others it would have gained a moral altitude equal with that of "barbarian" Russia. If all the money wasted in strong drink in Peterborough in one year were turned into the relief of our citizens suffering directly or indirectly from the war, we could easily realize the slogan—

$20,000 FOR THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

RELIGION AND LOYALTY.

Religion and loyalty are convertible terms, in that both depend, for their value, upon their practical application. Not either is "worth the paper it is written on" unless the bond is observed. The man who does not live up to his profession of religion or loyalty effectively shares German cynical disregard of treaty or other moral obligations. The world has come, to a painfully general extent, to regard religion as an amiable weakness, well enough for women and children, but as having only a theoretical and passive meaning for men in the strenuous activities of the world. If there is such a thing as religion—and there is — why should there be so general a disposition to regard its practice—the observance of the duties its recognition involves and imposes — as something to be ashamed of? Men in myriads make boasts of their loyalty, and are rather proud to do it, blissfully ignorant of the inconsistency that prevents practice of it making the boast unnecessary; but how often, except among the Pharisees of the world, do we find men willing to boast of religion, or even speak a good word for religion as a vital part of the Christianity they nominally profess? Why should men in their lives and conversation assume the role of the Lord-denying Peter? Greater men than they have not been ashamed to "confess him before men." Lord Roberts, whose busy life was full of stern and strenuous duties, was a personally religious man and strove to pass his religion on. He was like Chaucer's "preste" — who not only "preached Christ and his apostles twelve, but practiced it himselve." If we pose as Christians, our pose is impotent unless we make religion a practice, a factor in the regulation of our lives. We may pose as patriots and loyalists, but if the "root of the matter is not found in us," they are like "sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal." Peterborough is a Christion city—materially; we have Christianity in form in twenty structures of brick and mortar. Our twenty churches will be filled—it is hoped—to-morrow, with congregations if not worshippers. We have the machinery of religion in abundance; have we the religion? We have plentiful assertion of patriotism. Do we live up to our patriotism whose indispensable complement is religion? Have we done our duty by saturating our patriotism with religion to the point of doing our duty by those whom the war has made our wards, to provide, adequately for those left destitute directly and indirectly by the war? Is it not true that we shall have failed of our duty in this regard, unless we "buckle down" to the work of making good the slogan—

20,000 FOR THE PATRIOTIC FUND?

SENTIMENT AND DUTY.

There seems to be some misapprehension of the scope of the objects of the Patriotic Fund. Many think it is solely for the benefit of the dependents of those whose breadwinners are in the fighting line. This is not all; the Patriotic Fund is for the help of all those directly or indirectly affected in "basket and in store," by the war. Among these are those of our civic brotherhood, who have been thrown out of employment by the shortening of staffs in our factories and in other activities through the conditions created by the world at war. Among these are many, to whom and to whose families, lack comes the first time in their lives. They have had for years good wages and independent comfortable living; and now that the state has to supplement their missing income, through the Patriotic Fund, one can imagine how naturally loth they will be to accept what is their right. You know that you and I and all independent-minded men would naturally shrink from the idea of dependence implied by accepting such help. And they and we would feel actual humiliation if such aid came through the agency of a charitable civic organization, putting us at once in semblance, upon the charity list. Our charity relief officer, is exceptionally unobjectionable as to his discharge of his duties, but for the reasons stated, neither he nor any official, no matter how competent, who savours of "charity," should be the distributor of the Patriotic Fund. This distributor should not be an almoner, but a paymaster. The beneficiaries of the Patriotic Fund should receive their share as a right, as something earned, in virtue of the conditions upon which the fund is created—as compensation by a grateful country and people, for the suffering and sacrifices entailed by war. It may held that this repugnances to accepting even the appearance of charity, is exaggeratd sentiment. But does not sentiment count? It is sentiment, not force nor tangible bond that unites us to the Empire; it is sentiment, not compulsion, that sends our soldiers to help the Empire. Sentiment is the grand cohsive force of the Empire, strong as hooks of steel. But it is not a matter of sentiment, but of down-right duty to come to the assistance of those in stress because of the share of Canada in helping hold the Empire together. We should, nay we ought to, recognize this duty and get together in a successful effort to realize the slogan

$20,000 FOR THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

THE BARBARIANS AT WORK.

Germany must bow her head in shame at the news from Czernowitz. When the Russians captured that city the Cossack General made a levy of 300,000 roubles under threat of blowing the city to pieces with siege guns if it were not forthcoming immediately. Yet when the money was gathered and presented he told them he was merely giving them a taste of the German medicine, and that they must take the money back to the subscribers, for not one rouble of it would he touch. That was heaping coals of fire on their heads with a vengeance. —Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

PURPOSE OF THE CENSORSHIP.

In this country we are not used to a censorship, and the public are sometimes a little inclined to misunderstand its object. Rightly controlled, it is not in the least intended — in Great Britain, at any rate—to prevent the dissemination of news of an unfavourable character. Such is very far from its intention at this juncture. Its sole purpose just now is to preserve the reticence enjoined by imperative military requirements. It postpones the publication of news until such news can no longer be of value to the enemy.—London Times.

BRITAIN IS NOT BEATEN; BRITAIN HAS ONLY BEGUN

The view is put forward by an American military critic that the terrible sacrifices of men now being made by Germany in the effort to get a grip on Calais and some part of the French Coast are in order to brace her feet in a good position to wrestle for a victorious peace.

The theory is that France will be glad to have the invader withdraw, while the British people across the channel will welcome any proposal that will remove the enemy from such a post of vantage. The idea is that the Germans will offer to withdraw from Belgium and France if the Russians withdraw from Prussia and Austria—and peace be restored. It is assumed that the world grows weary of a war so ruinous, so tremendous.

The error in these calculations is to be found in the assumption that the allies can ever consent that this war, which has been already so vast and calamitous, can be permitted to end in a draw, with no result reached, so that all the nations engaged in it must begin all over again preparing for another great war which will come whenever Germany feels that she is better able than she is now to crush all other nations and dominate the world.

It is useless to go back to the conditions that preceded the war, and to conditions aggravated and made worse. It is better to make one war of it, and not two. Those who are of the opinion that, on any such inconclusive basis as the war has reached, a peace may be patched up, do not take all the facts into account. The one power among the allies whose people at home would be first to revolt against the vast slaughter and destructiveness of war would be Great Britain. Her people love peace and flourish on it. Their whole scheme of life rests on peace. But they are not going to ask for it in this case—not as matters stand.

In support of that statement it is but necessary to point out that Great Britain has practically not gone to war yet. So far she has but contributed an expeditionary force to support the armies of Belgum and France, and impede the enemy until the British army of a million men can enter the struggle, take the upper hand, cease all these purely defensive operations, these retreats before superior numbers, and take command of the situation.

The British armies will not enter the war in force until next spring. It was never intended that they should. Until they have done so it is premature to discuss peace in any way. There will be no discussion of peace terms while there is an invader in Belgium. It might suit the Germans very well to negotiate a peace on the basis of handing back a ruined Belgium to the Belgians, a ruined portion of France to the French, and giving the Russians for their trouble whatever they insist upon carving out of Austria and Turkey, leaving German's territory intact, her Provinces uninvaded, her towns unshelled—leaving Germany intact, unhurt, strong to resume her designs for the mastery of mankind.

There can be no such termination as that to the conflict now being waged.—Toronto Star.

RELIGION HAS ITS PLACE IN THE LIVES OF GREAT MEN

A correspondent in the Old Country writes:

Many personal friends of Lord Roberts emphasize to-day the religious side of his character. Thus Prevost Battersby, a war correspondent, describes him as "A great man and, what was more, a good one of sincere deed but unostentatious piety, spiritually pure, chivalrous, kind and considerate to all. He was praised to the skies, accounted almost infallible, but ever eager to give praise to others, and modest about himself, a perfect 'gentil knight.'"

Martin Donohoe, the Chronicle's war correspondent, says: "Not the least of his conquests was the domination he gained and maintained over the character of the soldier himself, and the triumph he secured over the twin enemies of Tommy Atkins, intemperance and uncleanliness. Like Cromwell, he sought to crate a sober, God-fearing army, and in large measure succeeded. The religion he preached, he practiced. The least devotional among his South African army could not fail to be impressed and spiritually uplifted by the spectacle of their revered chief himself conducting service, as I have often seen him do on Sunday morning on the open veldt."

Rev. Dr. Hancock, preaching in the Guards chapel at Wellington Barracks, said from experience he knew Lord Roberts was a good soldier for Jesus Christ. He was a man who believed with all his heart and strong soul that Jesus Christ was the son of God. He had himself counted among his friends the Field Marshal's half brother, General Roberts, and had heard from time to time from the family circle of the true Christian life he had led.

The British nation at heart is still profoundly religious. The naval and military missions are distributing individual pocket Bibles to every man in the army and fleet. Each bears this inscription for every sailor and soldier written by Lord Roberts "Fighting Bob," the idol of the British army:

"I ask you to put your trust in God. He will watch over you and strengthen you. You will find in this little book guidance when you are in health, comfort when you are in sickness and strength when you are in adversity.

(Signed) "ROBERTS, F.M."

Desert Bars the Turks From Attack in Egypt

American Engineer in Port From Constantinople Also Declares Ottomans Can Do Little Damage to Suez Canal—German Crews Adopt the Fez.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—How German and Austrian citizns have been ordered to wait in Turkey for the formation of regiments there instead of rejoining their colours at home and how the Goeben and the Breslau have been allowed to keep their German crews are a part of the narrative related by a passenger on board the Transylvania, of the Cunard line, which arrived from Liverpool.

This passenger also declared that the geographical situation of the Egyptian frontier would form the greatest barrier against Turkish invasion of British territory, and that, ecen if the troops of the Sultan managed to reach it, the troops of England were ready for them. The passenger is a young American engineer, and was among the first persons out of Constantinople since the week during which Turkey made her first hostile move against Russia. He left Constantinople several days before actual hostilities began and expects to return in a short time.

"To conect my name with any remarks about Turkey," he said, "would be inadvisable, because I am to go back, but with that understanding I am willing to tell what I saw."

The young man's work has taken him into the more remote parts of Turkey and Palestine, and recently he was on the Egyptian border, which he declared to be well held by the British forces and practically assured against Turkish invasion.

"In order to get at Egypt," he said, "an army would have to cross the desert, and the lack of water would be sufficient to prohibit this. There has been no rain in that section for a long time, and this has had its effect on the population along the border of the desert. I do not know what the people in Palestine will do this winter. Starvation is the only prospect that faces them now."

He declared also that Americans in Constantinople and adjcent territory were safe.

"Mr. Morgenthau," he said, "has seen trouble brewing ever since the Powers went to war and has prepared for it in such a way that the location of most of the Americans in and about Constantinople is known. It will be only in the more distant places that Americans and Europeans will be in any danger."

Germans Worked Long.

In speaking about the activities of the Germans in Turkey the engineer said that their present predominance in Turkish affairs had as its foundation ten years of hard labour.

"Only a little time ago," he said, "two representatives of the German government went among the shieks with decorations and a large supply of arms. They decorated about seventy-five of these leaders and have done their best to instil religious hatred into them.

"I also saw a number of men in the uniform of the private German soldier in Constantinople, and I know that several Austrians who were there on business received orders not to return to their country to join their regiments, but to await the formation of regiments in Turkey. I also saw the Goeben and the Breslau, the two German cruisers that were transferred to Turkey. They still have their full German crews, only the men have substituted the Turkish fez for their regulation cap.

NEATNESS AS AN ASSET.

(The Christian Herald.)

The matter of neatness of appearance of their staff is being taken up by the employers very widely. One great railroad has a "bureau of neatness," through which all the new conductors, ticket sellers and other employees are supplied with a little circular on the importance of a neat appearance.

A foreign ambassador, who has served at several large capitals of the world, told lately of an emissary who had returned to him from a mission and announced failure. "Were you, may I ask, wearing that waistcoat?" with a thumb jerked in the direction of the crumpled garment. "I was." "Then," said the chief, "I do not marvel at your lack of success."

"Next to a cheery manner, a neat appearance is any man's best capital. The two together create an atmosphere in which "luck" likes to linger. Success will not come to meet you half way unless you look inviting and agreeable.

August and Armand Were Tired of War

The Dutch Drummer Van Sloot Insisted They Were Not Game—"They Were Not Good Soldiers," Said He—"What Would Become of the War If All Soldiers Acted as They Did?"

(By Herbert Corey) . . . . . .

CALAIS, Nov. 19—His name sounded like Van Sloot. At any rate he is a Dutch travelling man. He has been over here on one o fthese mysterious missions that occupy so many business men in these times of war. They neither buy nor sell. They do not try to collect debts, where debts are not collectable. They seem unable to escape from their old routine—just as 'bus chauffeurs are said to spend their Sundays off in riding up and down Piccadilly.

"I don't call 'em good soldiers," said the Dutch travelling man with emphasis. "That isn't my idea of the way good soldiers would act. I tell you, they were not game."

He had been telling a story of two soldiers. One was French, the other German. They had been engaged in that breathless, scrambled fighting which dotted the Belgian border near Neerpelt. It had become almost an affair of guerillas. Scattered detachments of both forces roamed over the countryside. When they met they fought or ran.

"The Germans attacked a French Company one night," said Van Sloot "The French were taken by surprise. They rolled out of their blankets and ran like h —. The Germans ran after them, yelling."

Neither Germans nor French were familiar with the country. It is crossed here and there by canals. Clumps of shrubbery dot it. The night lacked even the light of a star. The pursuers and pursued scattered over the countryside, yelling, firing, their rifles. Soon they were separated in groups of two and three. The pursuers stopped. The blackness of the night was a hindrance to them. The routed fled on.

"This Frenchman," said Van Sloot "fell in the darkness. When he rose he had lost his direction. He heard men running and calling all about him. He saw the flash of their shots. He could not tell which was friend, and which was enemy."

"He crept cautiously on, his rifle at the ready. All the time he consciously veered away from danger. He fell again—this time in the funnel shaped hole that had been scooped out by a German shell. It offered him security against stray bullets. So he settled there for the night, first feeling about him with his bayonet. The Frenchman's nerves were shaken. He had a greater dread of dead men sharing the pit with him than of live foes.

"The German, too, lost his friends" said the Dutch travelling man. "I don't know how. But he found himself alone there in the night. He heard the cries. He saw the red daggers of fire cut the darkness. But he did not know which way to go."

So, when he came to the stump of an old tree, he determined to stay there for the night. By daylight it might offer him some slight protection against the French bullets. Anyhow, he was tired—tired almost to death. For days he had been dragging himself over muddy roads on half rations. He had marched at night instead of sleping, or he had attacked or been attacked. He stretched himself out on the moist Belgian turf. Before he knew it he was fast asleep.

"He says he woke himself up once or twice," said Van Sloot, "by snoring. I don't know."

Fifty yards distant the Frenchman had curled himself up in his muddy refuge. He, too, was numb with fatigue. His very bones ached. He saw before him the pleasant prospect of hours of uninterrupted rest. No one knew where he was. He pulled the skirts of his long coat over his knees and slept. The sun's rays were warm upon him when he woke.

"He poked his head out of the hole," said the Dutchman. "Carefully, you know, for fear some one might be watching. Fifty yards away he saw the German sitting up by his stump, whistling. He thought he was all alone."

The Frenchman did his duty as a soldier. He shot at the stranger, sitting whistling by a stump. The stranger wore the green-gray uniform of the official enemy—somewhat dirty and daubed, but still recognizable. He was plainly a stranger to be shot at. But the Frenchman missed.

There followed a long, weary vigil. The German stretched himself behind his stump, his rifle thrusting at the shell hole in which the Frenchman lay hidden. The Frenchman found himself at a disadvantage. He made with a stick a little peep-hole in the mud rmparts of his hide-out through which he could watch the Allemand. But he could not take him without exposing himself.

"They shot at each other three or four times," said Van Sloot, "but they didn't hit. Neither man could align his sight on the other's head without offering a better target than he got."

Thirst tormented them. A dead man lay near the German, with black flies buzzing over him. The French man could see that bit of human wreckage, too. Once he was sure he saw the dead man move. By a strong effort he averted his eyes. But when he looked back again he was certain the dead man had shifted his position. The blank eyes looked directly at him. There was slaver on its mouth, as though it had died in agony. The Frenchman elevated his rifle, butt upwards.

"Bosch!" he cried. "Bosch!"

The German put up his musket butt in token of an armistice. Without leaving their defences they called to each other. "Why should we murder each other?" they asked. "We have no quarrel. Let us talk it over."

So they shook hands and went to the canal and drank and shared the Frenchman's black bread and the German's sausage. They told each other of the night before. In their relief incidents of the past miserable week became funny. They laughed together. The Frenchman was a stamp collector. The German owned to a passion for butterflies. They bored each other with their fads. Each courteously suppressed his yawns, certain that the other would do the same when it was his time to listen. By and by they began to talk of separating.

"You must be my prisoner," said the German. "You asked for peace."

The Frenchman pointed out that he had only asked for a truce. Upon consideration the German admitted this was the fact.

"Then we must return," said the German, "you to your shell hole and me to my stump. We become enemies again."

The Frenchman was frankly bored by this prospect. He proposed a sporting alternative. "Why not go together? Let us approach the first body of uniformed troops we see. If they are German, I am your prisoner. If they are French, you are mine."

They set out along the road, elbow by elbow, talking stamps and butterflies. An outpost fired on them. They realized that, carrying rifles as they did, in that debatable country they were fair game for either side. They ran, and that afternoon another outpost fired on them. One had been German, the other French. They came to another road and toiled down it for a time. By and by they came to a sign:

"To the Holland line, four miles."

They looked at each other, and smiled and shook hands. And so they walked the four miles to the Holland line and roused a Dutch frontier guard from his sleep and gave themselves up, and insisted that they be interned. The next day they were started off for the nearest camp of prisoners of war, to stay there, safe and happy, until this war is over. Van Sloot said the Dutch frontier guard told him the story. They were calling each other "August" and "Armand." The coincidence of initial letters struck them. When they found their wives were named "Lena" and "Lisette" the conclusion seemed inevitable.

"We were destined to be friends," they told the frontier guard. The frontier guard agreed, but the martial Van Slott is not satisfied.

"I tell you," said he, "they are not good soldiers. Suppose that every soldier acted that way!"

ONE ZEPPELIN A WEEK.

Being Turned Out in Plant in Friedrichshafen.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—Zeppelin air cruisers are now being turned out at the plant in Friedrichshafen at the rate of one a week, the New Zurich Gazette reports, adding that so far the Germans have not increased their aerial fleet since the war began by more than forty military balloons read for service.

Each of the new Zeppelins has a small platform above the envelope, from which the lookout can report the approach of hostile aircraft. He has communication with those below by means of telephones.

Bombs are not launched directly from the main car, but a smaller special carriage is hung a hundred or more yards below and occupied by one man. The bombs resemble torpedoes, and are charged with the same explosives as the projectile for the 16½-inch mortars. A Zeppelin carries from 30 to 40 bombs.

STYLES

Not many styles will come from Paris this year. France is in the grip of war. The shops of the great modistes and milliners are closed.

Every year we send millions of dollars, to France and elsewhere, for feathers, flowers, hats, gowns, jewelry, silks, etc., for feminine adornment.

Yet these things are produced in Canada. Canadian artisans and Canadian workpeople are creating and producing dainty frills and furbelows that are hard to beat.

It remains for Canadian women to buy them.

The mere fact of an article being imported gives it no added value. On the contrary it should be a reproach at a time like this when Canadian industries need your support.

These things are made in Canada, of good material and good workmanship, and they're being sold at prices that discount imported articles every time.

It's a splendid thing to knit socks and Balaklava caps for soldiers, but you will be showing yourself strangely inconsistent if you pass up the work of your fellow Canadian women for something that foreign women have turned out. 15A

Cold Weather Tip For Car Owners

Olds' Dealer Discusses Winter Car Problems and How to Meet Them.

"Winter days have their motoring problems," declared President C. H. Larson, of the Oldsmobile Co., of New York. "You cannot ignore them; you must meet them. Primarily, owners of touring cars, expecting to drive during the cold season, should add a closed body to their equipment, thus insuring warmth and comfort. The demand for town cars has increased so rapidly in recent years that it has resulted in many dealers and manufacturers giving special attention to the development of closed bodies of all styles and at all prices from $100 up. There is now being shown such a great variety that the needs of every one, both as to style and price, can be filled. The patterns range from the two-passenger cabriolet to the large limousine. Special features demanded for service in the metropolitan district have been embodied in the bodies built on specifications furnished by the dealer and are exclusive.

"Furthermore, the Winter motorist must realize that the car of steel and wood, leather and rubber, is a sensitive creation, influenced by the frosts of winter. Perhaps the self-starter will only spin the motor at 80 revolutions per minute, whereas in summer it will turn it half as fast again. Your motor will not start as well on a cold day; you may reduce your battery charge; the load of electricity for the lights is much heavier than in summer—in a word, you are operating in a much different atmosphere of conditions.

"If your carburetor has not a hot-air connection on it to bring air from the exhaust you may not get as good results from your fuel as you should. Even gasoline is affected by the cold. It will not flow so rapidly through the

PRZEMYSL IS TOTTERING THE SITUATION IS SERIOUS

Russian Army Now Occupies Trenches Around City

LIME IN THE EARTHWORKS

PARIS, Nov. 21.—A despatch to the Havas Agency from Petrograd says:—

"It is announced here that the siege of Przemysl appears to be rapidly approaching its end. The trenches surrounding the fortifications are in the possession of the Russian troops. Many of the trenches are filled with lime, confirming statements of prisoners that cholera is raging in the garrison of Przemysl."

Britons Rounded Up in Vienna.

VENICE, Nov. 21.—(Via Paris.)—The police of Vienna are adopting much more severe measures against British people remaining in that city. During the past few days many Britishers have been arrested and interned, and the rest, irrespective of age or sex, are now forbiddn to leave thir home between 8 o'clock in the evening and 6 o'clock in the morning, or to visit cafes or other public places.

The Times' special correspondent at Venice says:—

Count Apponyi, writing in The Vienna Zeit, says: "The situation certainly is very grave. We find ourselves, we and our faithful allies, before a strong enemy and coalition created by hate, envy and cupidity, but let us not allow ourselves to fall into black pessimism. It is our duty to prepare our people and to encourage them towards every possible effort and sacrifice."

ARE PRISONERS IN REVOLT?

Many Germans in British Detention Camp Are Reported Killed

PARIS, Nov. 21.—Authentic news was received here from official sources last night that many German prisoners of war were killed and many others were injured Thursday in an outbreak in a concentration camp in England. While your correspondent is unable to obtain details of the outbreak or to get a telegram on the subject to or from England he is assured that the facts stated above are authentic.

There are eight concentration camps in the British Isles for the German prisoners of war.

These camps are located at Aldershot, Newbury, Dorchester, Queenberry, Lancaster, Dyfrim Hall (near Chester), Edinburgh and Templemore, Ireland.

The Aldershot camp is at Frith Hill. That at Newbury is established on the famous race course. At Dorchester the men are quartered in barracks. Two abandoned factory buildings have been transformed into quarters for the prisoners at Queenberry. Similar accommodations have been secured at Lancaster. At Templemore the military barracks have been converted into prison rooms, and at Edinburgh the camp is established in the open, while Dyfrim Hall, a large country mansion, is used to house the officers.

Diseased Turkeys On the Market

Sanitary Inspector Spence is in a Quandary as to What Disposition Should be Made of Diseased Fowl—To-day's Market Prices.

There was little change from last week in the price of commodities that were offered for sale this morning on the farmers' produce market. Potatoes were up ten cents a bag; the supply was more than equal to the demand, with the result that many farmers found it expedient to lower the price five or ten cents a bag in order to dispose of their supplies before the close of the market. First class apples, such as Northern Spies, were sold at three dollars a barrel, while a few lots of the earlier varieties were sold at two dollars a barrel. Onions were offered at one dollar and forty cents a bag.

Beef was more plentiful this morning than it has been for some weeks past. The price ranged from twelve to thirteen cents a pound in quarter lots. Pork changed hands at the same prices.

The Inside Market.

"When is a turkey not a turkey," is the question that is agitating the mind of Sanitary Inspector Spence. Turkeys were plentiful on the market this morning. According to the Sanitary Inspector many of them bore symptoms of diseases common to the turkey fraternity. Some of the chief characteristics would indicate that the fowl had been afflicted with tuberculosis or blackhead, prior to death. The Inspector is powerless to act because of the Police Magistrate's refusal to accept evidence that is not backed up with proof of the fowl's unfitness for food consumption. On previous occasions the Magistrate has asked the Inspector to furnish proof that the consumption of turkeys afflicted with blackhead, would impair the health of the consumer. This is a difficult thing to do, consequently the sale of fowl bearing diseased characteristics must continue despite the efforts of the health authorities to suppress it.

Turkeys were selling at eighteen cents a pound, geese at one dollar and twenty cents each and ducks at one dollar and forty cents a pair. Chickens found ready buyers at seventy-five cents a pair.

The price of butter was a little easier this morning. Twenty-eight cents to thirty cents were the prevailing prices. Eggs were scarce even at thirty-five cents a dozen.

LABOUR COUNCIL TURNS DOWN IDEA OF HOME GUARDS

Although Some Union Men Have Joined the Home Defence Movement, Council Considers Consistency.

THE PRICE OF BREAD

By The Official Scribe

There was a remarkably good attendance of delegates at this week's meeting. The smaller hall was filled with interested representatives as well as with fumes from various brands of cigars and tobacco (all union stuff), and President J. J. Hartley, a staunch exponent of the benefits to be obtained from fragrant weed abstemiousness, is to be congratulated, as well as the other non-smokers, on having survived, not the smoke of battle, but the smoke of militant unionism.

The Fair Wage Clause.

The ball started with an energetic delegate from the Pattern Makers asking what the committee had done regarding the low money paid to girl and women employees by a local factory. He seemed to think that the committee had been slack in their duties, as nothing apparently had been done. This brought both the members quickly to their feet, who declared that they had done a lot, but their greatest difficulty lay in not being able to obtain authentic information. Many would back down about injustice, but when it came to a show-down a signed statement for instance, there was nothing doing. After the subject had been well threshed out the secretary was ordered to write the Minister of Militia, also the Minister of Labour, asking that the scale of prices, if any, be furnished, if any, on contracts for military equipment now being filled by local factories.

Union is Strength.

Mr. Haley, organizer for the Electrical Workers, was then given the floor by the President. Mr. Haley started in by announcing that the two factions of the Electrical Workers who have been at war for the past six years, had settled their differences (as far as Canada was concerned) and were once more a truly united body. Mr. Haley is a labour man of wide experience and still wider sympathies. For instance he believes in all meetings of Trades and Labour Councils being open, so as the public could be educated along industrial lines. There was nothing that transpired in T. and L. sessions that need cause shame, and when it came to the settlement of a dispute the winners were always those with whom the public were in sympathy. The organizer had another pet subject. That of extending help to unorganized workers. It paid to hand out encouragement to those outside the fold. Mr. Haley had been president of a live local in the west and knew what he was talking about. As a wind up to a vigorous speech Mr. Haley called on all workers to try and forget they were Grits and Tories and with the ballot they possessed vote for Labour representatives so as to come fully into their own.

Home Guards.

This proposition introduced by the President, was promptly flattened out. Labour is against war, and a Trades and Labour Council Company of Home Guards was considered inconsistent. Moreover several members had already joined different companies.

The Price of Bread.

Why is it, asks one representative who has been travelling in the vicinity lately, that Peterborough bakers sell bread locally for 12 cents, while their product obtains 10c. in Lakefield, 10c. in Campbellford, 10c. in Hastings, Norwood 12c., and at Keene, where there is no competition, for 13c.?

This created quite a discussion, enlightening, as it proceeded, the Council on the methods employed by our local staff of life handlers. The thrifty housewife was baking the bread now more than heretofore and handing out a slam from which recovery would be slow. Light weight by two ounces per loaf was also mentioned, and government intervention would be more than welcomed.

The Approaching Elections.

As has already been announced, President Hartley declined nomination for the Mayoralty. The Council was loth to accept this decision and asked Mr. Hartley to reconsider. To support a Labour Mayor it was felt that Labour aldermen were necessary and a strong committee was given a week to find out the Labour men available for the different wards and if successful Mr. Hartley, perhaps, could be induced to run again.

TO SPEAK BEFORE YOUNG MEN'S CLASS

Mr. J. H. Burnham M. P. to Give Series of Addresses on 'The Benefits of Our Necessity for Protective Tarriffs'

Mr. Burnham is to address St. Paul's Young Men's Bible class.

Last winter Mr. H. B. Cowan, the leader of St. Paul's Young Men's class discussed with them a number of subjects relating to social well being. He spent considerable time in the discussion of the subject of "Free Trade." All these subjects were considered from a Christian standpoint with the object of equipping the young men of the class for better service and for the promotion of Christian citizenship.

A desire was expressed by the class that the other side of the subject of "Free Trade" should be discussed by someone competent to do so. Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., has kindly consented to give three addresses on "The Benefits or Necessity for Protective Tariffs." The first of these will be given to-morrow at three o'clock in the Guild room of the church, the entrance of which is off Water Street. The public generally is invite to be present.

GUARD THE CHILDREN FROM AUTUMN COLDS

The fall is the most severe season of the year for colds—one day is warm while the next is wet and cold, and unless the mother is on her guard the little ones are seized with colds that may hang on all winter. Baby's Own Tablets are mothers' best friend in preventing or banishing colds. They act as a gentle laxative, keeping the bowels and stomach free and sweet. An occasional dose will prevent cold or if cold does come on suddenly the prompt use of the Tablet will quickly cure it. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Novelty Of Camp Life Has Now Worn Off

Interesting Letter From Lieut. Chas. H. Ackermen of Peterborough

Mr. E. G. Patterson has received the following letter from Lieut. C. H. Ackerman, of A Company, 2nd Battalion, 1st Infantry Brigade:

Bustard Camp, Salisbury Plain,
October 30, 1914.

Dear Mr. Patterson,—I have had good intentions for some time, that is in keeping my promise about letting you know something of the Peterborough contingent in particular and the whole contingent in general, but soldiering, as Kitchener is making us soldier, leaves but little time for letter writing.

To start with I know of very little that would be of interest to you, as you are not at all interested in the new Platoon establishment, and I think that has been the only real piece of new interest to occupy our time for the past week or so. It means that we have to forget most of the company drill that we worked so diligently at, at Valcartier and become accustomed to new work.

I suppose you have seen many detailed newspaper accounts of our prolonged voyage across the Atlantic escorted by cruisers and two Dreadnoughts that were constantly on the lookout for trouble? No words could describe the impressive sight that we saw; for twelve days and nights we could see nothing but the same boats around us and if it hadn't been for the wash of the water beside the boat it would have been almost impossible to know whether or not we were moving.

We remained on board for several days in Plymouth harbour at Devonport to which place we were compelled to make to avoid the confusion of coming in contact with three German submarines that were counting on our putting into Southampton. While we were in Devonport I managed to get aboard H.M.S. "Tiger," the newest, largest and fastest Dreadnought in the world. It had come in to be looked over and coaled, after its final gun tests. It is certainly a wonderful boat with eight 13.5 guns and a speed attained already of nearly 32 knots; the Benbow, another Dreadnought, and sister ship, was alongside, but I hadn't time to see it.

The morning we landed at Amesbury to detrain for Bustard Camp (8 miles) we saw no less than six military aeroplanes flying around learning the new Platoon drill I suppose (?).

We have a splendid bunch of fellows in our battalion; they work and take their grub, which by the way, is sometimes none too good, and never a grouch. That I think is a sign that they are commencing to realize that the game is going to be fairly stiff, especially if we are moved about Xmas as we expect we will at present, though some others think that it will not be until early spring; of course everything depends entirely on the course of events for the next couple of weeks in Europe.

Am not going to try to explain the reasons I have for using pencil, nor the variety of paper. Since leaving off the pencil I have had various experiences as orderly officer to which duty I was detailed before I could finish my letter, and have been unable to find time until this a.m. November 1st.

To-morrow morning we have a divisional review under active service conditions in preparation for a review by the King and Queen on Tuesday. I am quite anxious to see the review, but it means the disorganization to a great extent of our daily routine.

I spent last Saturday and Sunday in London, and I may say the reception extended to us Canadians is beyond all comprehension. All officers have been put up at all the clubs, and they cannot apparently do too much for the Colonials that have come to their assistance, and I only hope we may get an opportunity to get across and go into the mix-up soon. Not that I am afraid we are going to be too late by any means, but the novelty of camp life under active service discipline has entirely worn off. I'm sorry that time will not permit me to write further, but when we get across I shall try and write again. I remain,

Yours very truly,
C. H. ACKERMAN.

GRANTS TO RURAL SCHOOLS

Amounts to be Paid in East Peterboro' are Announced.

Part of the grant to rural schools is paid on the basis of accommodation and equipment. For this purpose a certain sum is voted by the Legislature which is distributed among the counties in proportion to the number of schools. An equal amount must be raised by the county and this joint sum is apportioned among the schools. The portion based on equipment is ten per cent. of the total value, and the part on accommodation is based on the grading made by the inspector in accordance with a scheme furnished by the Department of Education.

The amounts for the schools in the Inspectorate of Peterborough East for the current year are shown below. They will be paid by the County Treasurer to the various school section treasurers, from funds provided half by Provincial treasuries and half by a tax levied on all the Public School supporters of the county. INTERESTING LETTER FROM FORMER LOCAL BOY NOW AT SALISBURY PLAIN

The following letter has been forwarded to this office by Mr. William Pitts of Toronto, who received it from his brother, Chas. L. Pitts, with the second Field Ambulance, Canadian Expedition Force, England. Both gentlemen formerly resided at 548 Aylmer street.

The letter is as follows:

"Our trip on the Scottish ship, "Cassandra," was almost uneventful. We were one of the first to leave Quebec, but we made up for it by a very monotonous wait in Gaspe Bay. In a few days there were more ships in that harbour than had ever been there before. It was a fine sight to see some great Ocean Liner, escorted by a little "war-dog," coming in crowded with troops, and some of them were certainly crowded. The natives came out and sailed around the fleet, but were not allowed on board. Just before sailing, "Col. Sam" (as the boys speak of our Minister of Militia), came up in a launch and was received with deafening cheers.

On comparing notes on this side I found that some of the troops were well fed and others were not — we were not—but our berths were fine.

It was curious to look out upon the great ocean and to see ship after ship in line, Some of the cruisers at a distance seemed almost monotonous, so quietly did they sail.

A little cruiser came within a stone's throw of us one day. I shall always remember the incident as one of the most impressive sights I have ever seen. I had often seen British ships in time of peace, but never before had I seen a warship actually cleared for action. She seemed such a grim little dog; so ready and yet so quiet that her very appearance inspired confidence. We broke into involuntary cheers and sang "Rule Britannia." And then back into the wind again. As an officer led them from the bridge came the roaring: "Hip, Hip, Hip, Hurrah!"—the salute of the nation's sailors to the men of her colony. We saw a great first-class cruiser as we neared England; and although she looked like a great fortress afloat, peopled with men of our own nation, with great guns ready to protect as well as attack; she did not arouse quite the same feeling in me as the little "war-dog" which caused me to think that England must be the "Mistress of the Seas." Still, I suppose that was because we saw the little one first. We had a fine passage, so fine that we drilled all the way across. There was almost a famine of tobacco and matches on board. In fact these articles are needed by the men quite as much as extra socks. The government looks after the socks, but not the tobacco. The "housewives" met with universal favour among the boys. There was a piece of bees-wax in each and, as it was wrapped in candy paper, some of the boys had visions of some pretty girl wrapping candy for the hungry soldiers; mine tasted fine and was really disappointed when some unkind person told me is was for mending shoes—then I felt sick. We passed one of the old-time French ships as we neared England and exchanged salutes. I did not know how close we were to England until one afternoon I came on deck hearing the anchors let go, and I found, after three weeks on board, we were actually there. Later in the evening we moved into Plymouth Harbour. As we moved in we crowded to the rails and yelled ourselves hoarse; we shouted at the forts in the distance and we called to the boys' training ships—some of them of the Nelson type—but I think that the "dinky" little submarines received the most attention, as they came through the waters. There seemed to be so many ships and forts near to us that I wondered how the enemy could ever think of invading England. After having been in every Province in Canada I am safe in saying that never in my life did I see such beautiful pastoral scenery as in the country around this harbour. Here and there among the willows stood some old Church, so old in appearance that it made me think that England had a right to refer to Canada as "Young Miss Canada."

We tied up to the "Scotian" for several days and had inter-ship sports, we being the winners. Our landing took place Sunday night, and although the people were not expecting us they crowded the streets as soon as they heard that we had lande'. They seemed to give way to a perfect frenzy of welcome. We could hardly march through so often did they rush out to shake hands. Some of the girls and women even rushed out and kissed the soldiers. I tried to escape but some of my husky comrades dragged me up to one exuberant young woman who managed to reach the top of my head, to the delight of the crowd, and alas, to the eternal joking of my section. The people gave us more cigarettes and apples than we could dispose of for days. One old woman, she looked about seventy, and was apparently very poor, had a single package of cigarettes which she divided among us. Though I don't care much for this kind of a smoke not for worlds would I have refused a smoke from this very respectable old woman. She told me that she had several sons in the war and I could believe her. We entrained at about 2 o'clock in the morning, and the people stayed with us right to the doors. I cannot say that I think much of the English railroad; at least the one we were on but we had a good chance to see the view at any rate. We marched ten miles to a camp. Thank goodness the roads oves here are fine. Salisbury Plain reminds me more of the Canadian prairie than any place I have ever been, except that there is more rain here than I ever knew of in the Canadian West. In many respects, in my very humble opinion, the Plain is away behind Valcartier as an up-to-date training ground. There are no electric light showers, sidewalks, or any of the things which made the Quebec Camp so like a city. Of course I dont pretend to speak as a military expert or anything like that, but we only realized how much Colonel Sam and his staff accomplished. He seems to be "some boy" in the opinion of the Contingent. There is what, I suppose to be, a typical English Village here. It is called Tulshead. We are only allowed there on a pass, as a result of a few men spoiling things for the rest. We have our washing done there, which is one of the few things in which this place is ahead of Quebec. Another is board floors and mattresses for the tents. The drill and general work is just about the same as in Canada. In fact, save for the few men who have been on pass and who bring back tales from the wounded, it seems to realize that within three hundred miles desperate battles are probably in process. Nevertheless we are glad to be here, because we are nearer to the front and have a better chance to get there some time. For my part I think I would like England for a home; at least for a time. One of our men who was on pass, met his three brothers, all of whom were wounded in the recent fighting. One of these men said that while the actual marching and work of that kind was not so bad as in South Africa, the Boer war was simply child's play, as far as the fighting was concerned. He wondered how any of them managed to get away alive. Another wounded man said that the ambulance work was prompt, but that some of the men did not seem to know their business. I think this was likely due to the result of his pain, because any of the Red Cross men of the Imperial Army I have met seem to be away ahead of some of ours.

Things seem to be very quiet here, but I think that we'll have more excitement if they move us to another part of England. The English money still bothers some of the boys; I usually pay for anything I buy by holding out a handful of change and letting the vendor take what is his due. Some of the men figure out their change with a pencil and paper.

There are several boys here with some of the Western regiments. Rumour has it that they are stowaways. They look funny in Stetson hats and spurs; one being only twelve years of age. There are all classes of men here and the talk at night varies from discussions on Theology to concrete. We are going to have a recreation tent. I will write you about that later."

FIGHTING ON MEUSE

Three-Day Battle Gives Slight Gain For the Germans

LONDON, Nov. 21.—In the western war area the Germans have moved their main point of attack from West Flanders to the Argonne forest. Sharp fighting has been in progress in this region for the last three days.

The French troops have lost the positions from which they drove the Germans in the town of Chauvincourt, in the Meuse region, several days ago, it was officially announced yesterday. Following the blowing up of the French stations by German mines, the Kaiser's forces reoccupied the destroyed sections, the French retreating to their trenches.

The British army was victorious in a sharp artillery duel south of Ypres, the vigor of the British cross-bombardment compelling the Germans to cease firing.

In West Flanders the weather conditions are bleak and wintry, operations apparently being almost at a standstill. The frequent artillery duels and boat forays recall the historic siege of Leyden.

The German official statement issued yesterday says that a French attack southwest of Verdun was repulsed.

The French official statement says that the Germans have reoccupied the western part of the Village of Chauvincourt, thereby confirming the report from other quarters.

Announcement comes from Bruges, Belgium, of a German defeat in a determined attack at Nieuport to gain control of the canal locks to stop the flooding of German battle positions. The Kaiser's troops were sent forward in armored automobiles, but were driven back by the Franco-Belgian army which now holds a strongly-fortified line east of Nieuport.

Large forces of German engineers have been sent to the front to construct bridges at the points of strategic importance in the inundated territory. Their first efforts will be devoted to preparing a roadway west of Dixmude for the renewal of the German attack to force the passage of the Yser Canal.

The Germans have completed a secondary line of fortifications in Belgium in case of a retreat and the troops employed in their construction have been sent to the firing line.

Further charges of atrocities committed by the Germans in Belgium, including the allegation that a total of at least 2,350 civilians were executed at Tamines, Dinant, and in Belgian, Luxemburg, were made by the Belgian commission in an additional report made public by the war bureau yesterday.

PRO-GERMAN LITERATURE

"Unity" Would Ban it From the Mails.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—The Government's intention to prevent the circulation in this country of the three American pro-German periodicals, is quite proper, but it should act diligently and stop them at once.

I happened to take up a copy of the "Saturday Evening Post" yesterday, when sufficient evidence caught my eye in a moment's reading, of its specious arguments, based upon a tissue of false statements which showed at once its bias, if not its virulence, causing many persons to believe that these papers are in the receipt of German bribe money for the purpose of influencing the minds of our American friends against us, if not indeed the minds of our own if not indeed the minds of our own sions, when the exigencies of the crisis demands a solid front. In war times such matters should be dealt with summarily.

These papers have a large circulation in this country and the loss they would sustain by such exclusion might be greater than what they gain by the German bribe funds.

Yours truly.

"Unity".

Peterboro' Boys With The Second Contingent

Are Branching Out Into More Practical Lines of Military Training—The Field Work is Increasing—Shooting is Carried on in the Armouries.

KINGSTON, Nov. 21.—We are getting into good shape, writes one of the Peterborough boys with the 2nd Canadian Contingent now in training at Kingston, with drill and shooting. We still have the early morning parade at 6:30 to 7:00. Capt. Gray turned out this morning and was delighted the way the boys are getting into condition. The boys don't lag now when on the double and they seem to be rather disappointed when on our way back for breakfast, but you may bet we do justice to our breakfast. The morning parades this week have been chiefly company drill with squad drill at intervals. Capt. Gray has given our company a football which we were all delighted with. Section 1 and 2 played 3 and 4 with a win for the Elephant Battery 3 and 4. This name has been given to us on account of the size of the boys. Not because they are chunky as we have no such men in E Company. Col. Sgt. McCracken opened the game by kicking the ball and then the fun started.. We played for about one-half hour. If the wather keeps good we hope to get a Bttalion schedule, and not boasting, the other companies will have to play some to beat E Co. The afternoon parades we go to the Armouries for shooting. We each have five rounds. It's wonderful how the boys are improving with their shooting. We have some good shots and others are coming on.. After the shooting we go on a long route march.

Field Work.

Yesterday (Thursday), we took the Barriefield route and had manoeuvrings all round. The object was to get to a certain point under cover without the other company sighting us, which we achieved with success. One of our scouts brought one of the other company's men in and brought him to one of our officers, and the man did not realize his mistake till he saw it was an officer of E. Co. We are anxiously looking forward to Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock to get our second dose of serum aginst typhoid. It makes you flinch to think of it.. But we shall have Sunday to get over it. But its like being hanged; its nothing when you are used to it.. Saturday afternoon the whole Battalion will parade on the Cricket Ground to have a photo tawen, and in the evening the Militia Club Room will have its forami opening by W. R. Givens, Chairman of the Militia Y. M. C. A. The programme for Saturday:

Two vocal solos, music by R. C. H. A. Band, reading by Major Gillespie, wrestling bouts by the students of Queen's University, songs by the soldiers, moving pictures, and speeches by Col. Hughes, Hemming and Major Shaw and W. Nichol, M.P. One cannot speak too highly the way the Militia Y. M. C. A. committee are making things so enjoyable in the club room, and it should be well supported by all who can help it along.

A Company "Yell."

The latest addition to E Co. is their yell, which is used when marching easy. Our Captain Gray has given his consent for the company to use it. It is as follows:

One, two, three,
Who are we?
We are the boys of E Company,
Gray's Pets, Gray's Pets, Ra Ra Ra!
Best of all! Beat them all! Ha Ha Ha.

Gray's Pets, Gray's Pets, we should smile,
We've been his for a long, long while,
Will we flinch, will we run,
Nor sir, no sir, no not one.

TRANSFERRED TO THE CYCLE CORPS

May March to Either Brockville or Belleville.

A letter from Pte. Percy Gray at Kingston this morning, states that he has been transferred to the cycle corps. There is talk of the troops taking a long walk, either to Brockville or Belleville. He speaks in the highest terms of the treatment of the men by the officers. Most of the companies have footballs, and football games are frequent. The work now consists of squad and company drill, route marching and lots of musketry. The food is getting better every day and there is plenty of it.

It is two days sinc the Peterborough Patriotic Fund was enriched by a subscription. The fund totals to date $6,040.70.

Over two hundred and twenty-five dollars have been disbursed during the week. These funds came from the Patriotic Fund, and have no connection with the monies disbursed by the Charity Department.

HEART WOULD PALPITATE.

HAD WEAK and DIZZY SPELLS.

Palpitation of the heart is one of the most common of all heart troubles. The heart will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over the system accompanied by weak and dizzy spells, making you feel that you are surely going to die. When you feel this way what you require is a real good heart and nerve tonic; one that will strengthen the weak heart and build up the nerve system. For this purpose we know of nothing that can equal Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to try your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better within a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble ever since childhood and finds great relief in using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

HOME FOR THOSE WHOSE POVERTY IS IN REALITY NO CRIME

Salvation Army Has Promulgated Suggestion That Will Be Carried Out.

A plan has been found by the Salvation Army to take care of a number of folks who are deserving of assistance this winter and has been endorsed by the Mayor and the chairman of the Charity Board, Mr. H. Rush, together with a number of the business men of the city interviewed by Adjutant McElhiney.

A number of beds will be put into a "Home" to be rented for the purpose for the accommodation of any who cannot afford it in a boarding house and have respect enough left not to go to the police station, though they are treated well there. It is no crime to be poor this winter, and no crime to be assisted, either.

Many cases that are really deserving have come to the Adjutant's notice and plans are being shaped up to assist them. The work test will be applied to every case, and the man who won't work if he can, will be dealt with summarily, in a way that he really deserves.

A nice comfortable reading room with magazines, papers, etc., will be kept clean and neat, allowing no profanity or tobacco using. And in cases where a man is hungry and needs the inner man looked after, this will be done.

Clothing will also be supplied to all asmuch," and ought to have the good moral and spiritual influence that will elevate them in every particular, keeping them from becoming common loafers on corners, bar-rooms and pool rooms.

The Army will try and practice the Scripture that contains the word, "Inasmuch," and had ought to have the hearty support of the City Council, Patriotic Relief committee and the citizens generally.

Adjutant McElhiney will supervise the work generally.

RESOLUTION OF REGRET

Passed by the Executive of Women's Local Council.

The following resolution was unanimously passed at a meeting of the Local Council of Women, held on Wednesday, Nov. 18th:

"That we, the Executive of the Women's Local Council of Peterborough, desire to place on record our sincere regret that circumstances have made it necessary for Miss Weir our able and trusted Corresponding-Secretary, to resign from the Executive of our Council. Miss Weir has always filled this office since the organization of the Council, and from its inception, has been most efficient, painstaking and conscientious in promoting the interests of the Council, and carrying out every duty devolving upon her. We feel that her removal from our midst is a distinct loss, not only to our Local Council, but also to our City, in which, for over ten years, Miss Weir has filled with dignity and ability her position on the staff of the Collegiate Institute.

We cannot allow her to sever her connection with the Council without assuring her of our continued confidence and esteem; and our earnest hope for her future prosperity.

We also desire that copies of this resolution be forwarded to Miss Weir and the newspapers."

News From the Old Country Soccer Camps

Good Outside Rights Are Plentiful—Well Known Footballer Among Refugees—Bradford City Boast Eleven Scotchmen—Is a Prisoner of War.

With eleven goals in nine games, McLean, of Sheffield Wednesday, bids fair to have a fat time this season.

With the exception of Halley, all the Burnley players have agreed to accept reduced wages. Such is the effect of the war on soccer.

Sheffield defeated Glasgow by two goals to one at Hillsborough, in the annual inter-city game. Morton, of Queen's Park, was the outstanding man of the game and led Utley a fine dance.

Good outside rights are again more plentiful in first-class football than any other type of forward.

In Leslie Scott, Sunderland possess the youngest goalkeeper in the English League. He is but 18 years of age.

No English League club has gained both points in every home match this season.

With the improved stand accommodation, Tyneeastle can now house a crowd of 70,000. But where is the crowd?

Aberdeen have only two wins over Falkirk at Brockville in nine years.

Lyall, Bell and McStay have played in every game so far for Ayr United.

De Meyer, a Belgian international footballer, is among a party of refugees now residing at Nottingham.

Miller, Nichol, Banks and McDougal have all been tried at centre forward by Liverpool this season. A capable successor to Parkinson is hard to find.

Sixteen Croydon Common players have joined the colours. This is a record for a professional club.

Dr. J. M. Young, of Partick Thistle has commenced practice at Falkirk.

Rumour has it that Bradford are trying to secure the transfer of Sandy Higgins from Newcastle. 'Tis said the price is too high.

Edinburgh Hibernians have the doubtful record of losing goals in five matches this season. Something is surely wrong at Easter Road.

Interclub football matches have been resumed in Paris, according to authentic reports.

Clapton have only called upon twelve players in their games to date this season.

Ayr is a real hotbed of soccer this season. The wonderful success of the club has boosted the drawings at the games, and only in Glasgow are they excelled. Ayr United have a clever team and look like making the best of them hustle this season.

The new Clydebank club is making a name in the Second Division. The advent of the club has all but killed the junior games in the district. Abercorn, the one-time famous Paisley club, was defeated at Clydebank by 9 goals to 1 two weeks ago.

Bob Crompton, considered the greatest back of all times, has played 503 league matches for Blackburn Rovers, and is still going strong. Crompton played his first game against Scotland n 1902, and it seems highly probable that he will make his thirteenth appearance against the Scots at Hillsborough next April. Meredith, of Manchester City and United fame, at present suspended for an indiscretion, has played 621 league games out of a possible 651 since 1894.

Bradford City boast eleven Scotchmen.

Fancy Buckley, Shepherd and Waddell in Bradford City's reserve team.

L. R. Roose, the famous goalkeeper, is at present in hard training at Aldershot.

Harry Tow will be out of the Sunderland team for some time yet.

Sunderland will be without the services of George Holley, until after Christmas at any rate.

Bob Pailor had an outing with Newcastle Reserves against Carlisle, and scored one out of six goals.

Charlie Roberts, captain of Oldham, is the most consistent pivot playing.

Can Walter Smith and Fletcher, on merit, be overlooked by the selection committee? Not if merit counts for anything.

Manchester City have lost twice as many goals at Hyde Road as in their away league matches.

Asheroft, late Blackburn, Stevenson, and Bullough Bolton, are playing wonderfully well for Tranmere Rovers.

When is Sandy Higgins going to get another run out with the league team?

Chris Craig, the ex Merthyr Town half back, is a prisoner of war in Germany.

Lindsay, Burnley's new inside right, came from the Belfast Glentoran Club, but he is a Scot, not an Irishman, as many followers of the game imagine.

WELSH AND DUFFY FOUGHT 10 ROUND DRAW

BUFFALO, Nov. 19.—Freddie Welsh lightweight champion, and Jimmy Duffy, of Lockport, fought ten spirited rounds to a close draw at the Broadway Auditorium to-night. Both boys were in fine shape, and came out of a roughish fight unmarked, save for a slight cut over Welsh's eye. The champion seemed somewhat perturbed by Duffy's fast and accurate work with a left jab. Seven thousand people saw the bout.

The opening round was even, Welsh getting a good right to body and left to face, while Duffy used his left jab repeatedly but did little damage. Welsh opened the second round with a hook to the eye and a right and left to the body, but Duffy came back with a straight left to the nose, right to body and repeated left jabs to the face, Duffy having a shade at the finish.

The third and fourth rounds were slow, Welsh's right across to Duffy's jaw in the former being the only telling blow. The fifth round was even.

In the sixth Duffy staggered Welsh with a right across and put a solid left to face. Welsh came back with a punch that open up Duffy's ear.

The eighth round was Welsh's best round, the champion landing solid lefts to face and rights to body repeatedly. He also had the better of some fast infighting. The ninth and tenth were very fast, both men apparently trying for a knock out, but neither found a spot that gave a decided advantage.

F. J. DALY BUYS GRAND OPERA WILL RACE HIM

Grand Opera (2.05 1-2), the great pacer, changed hands yesterday. G. A. Proctor selling him to F. J. Daly for $2360— a good price, under present conditions. Before the war Mr. Proctor refused $6,000. Grand Opera will be raced through the ice circuit having been entered in the different stakes, including the $5,000 event at Ottawa.

Bresnahan To Manage Chicago Cubs

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 19.—Roger Bresnahan was to-day appointed manager of the Chicago National League Baseball Club. He succeeds Henry O'Day. Bresnahan signed a contract for three years. He was formerly manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, and last season was catcher for the Cubs.

Bresnahan's terms, according to newspapers quoting a "trustworthy source," include a salary of $6,000 as player and $12,000 as manager, or $18,000 a year. A clause providing that he cannot be dethroned without his consent was also included.

Speculating on the future of Hank O'Day, deposed as west-side leader to make room for Bresnahan, Chicago fans believe he will again join President Tener's staff of umpires. Upon his retirement as Cincinnati manager, he resumed his place as umpire during 1912.

Newspapers also published to-day a report that Jimmy Archer, the Cub catcher, is considering an offer from the Buffalo Federals. He refused to discuss the rumour.

Because Bresnahan's contract, it is said, requires him to be a playing manager and catch a great number of games, Archer is believed to be eager to leave.

HARVARD'S NEW PRODIGY ONLY SIX YEARS OLD

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 20.—Enter Lester Snow King as the newest of prodigies, and he comes from Cambridge, where lives William Jamees Sadis and Norbert Weiner. The King box is six years old. He just leaped through the primary school and has now received his fourth promotion and is in the grammar school.

Cambridge offers him as the youngest grammar school pupil in Massachusetts.

Lester is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Myron L. King. He began in the kindergarten. He soon exhausted all the training given there in one term. Then he entered the Merrill Primary School. Even here he passed from one class to another and did mathematical stunts for the boys in the advanced classes. Now he has been transferred to Harvard Grammar School, where he is tackling fractions, and come home and tells his mother. "It's just as easy as the kindergarten. Why, mother," he says, "I can do all that they give in arithmetic in my head. The master of the school tells the boys to be careful about using up so much paper in doing their arithmetic, but I don't want any paper. I can do it all in my head."

He has the multiplication table at his finger ends. Given a big sum in addition, in a few minutes' thinking about it, without putting anything down on paper, he will tell the exact result.

Lakefield Hunters Are Successful

Apsley Hunting Party Shot Fifteen Deer.

Mr. T. Z. Webster, who hunted at the head of Stoney Lake, brought home a fine deer.

Dr. Gibson and C. Young brought out their number. They hunted in the Parry Sound district.

Alvin Graham hunted with a party in the vicinity of Apsley, and was fortunate in securing a fine deer.

Mr. N. A. Moore hunted with the Kosh Lake Hunte Club this year. The party consisted of six members and secured five nice deer.

The Payne-Spence party, who were hunting in the Parry Sound district brought out eleven fine deer. There were eleven members in the party.

Messrs. John Blewett, W. Blewett and B. Blewett were camped in the vicinity of Cox's Lake this season. The party brought home a fine doe.

The Pencil Creek hunting party had good luck this year, securing six fine deer. The party consisted of A. J. Kidd, Harold Kidd, Wm. Preston, Wm. Adams, H. Webster, C. S. Tanner and Gordon Ridpath.

The Serpentine Lake party hunting north of Apsley had good luck, shooting fifteen deer. Messrs. D. Miller, William Miller, David Miller and R. Knox hunted with the party which consisted of seventeen members.

The Jack's Lake hunting party brought home four fine deer. The first week of the hunt the party had bad luck and was unable to secure a deer, but the second week it was more fortunate. The party had an exciting chase after a bear, but old bruin was too cunning for them.

NOTES FROM THE DIARY OF BLACK CREEK HUNT CLUB

Thursday, Oct. 29— Left Peterborough on the noon (12.10) C.P.R. Reached Bannockburn down Madoc way, 4.30 p.m. Train late. Stayed at Thompson's for the night. Fowl supper was fine.

Friday—Took to the woods at 7.50 p. m. Roads dry but rough. Destination at 1.30. Put stove up and had dinner at 2 p.m. Pitched tents, made beds and put camp in good order. Mr. Rose had his first excitement. He shot at a wild cat, but on close examination found it to be a "fretted" porcupine.

Saturday—Wolves howled at night and some of us slept only in stanzas. There were no casualties, however, and we all reported for breakfast. While Captain Loukes was taking us over our hunting grounds, incidentally picking off a few partridges for dinner, he spied a doe and two fawns feeding and gamboling. He called the party together to witness this bit of nature, as Mr. Rolands, the game inspector, was camped two hundred yards away the guns remained silent, although buck fever had our temperatures around 105.

Saw First Bear.

Sunday—While out for a stroll we saw a bear feeding on wild honey. This is surely real bite. The country is rugged and wild. There is a mountain range near us and the grounds seems to be entirely of rock, covered with unbroken stretches of scrubby second growth trees. Apparently the country was fire swept some years ago. We were tempted to take a shot at bruin, but as it was Sunday we let him go.

Monday— We got up with great hopes and eagerness to get out on the runways after a night's rest on Thompson's straw. Not a shot fired. It was a wet morning. All still hunting.

Tuesday— Things started early. While Capt. Loukes was conducting the party to their watches he spied a big doe, but the party failed to keep silence and our chances were spoiled. Mr. Rose was the first lucky hunter. He brought down a big buck, but not before it ran 250 yards. In the afternoon the Captain selected new grounds, on which Mr. Windsor brought down his deer about four o'clock. Leger Letellier spied a big doe. He took careful aim at its head in order to have its hide, but he began tanning it too early. He missed its head and as Mr. Deer departed he wagged his tail, seeming to telegraph the jeering salute. "That's once you fooled yourself, old man."

Dogs on the Run.

Wednesday —The dogs were let loose for the first time. "Prinnie" hounded three deer within range, but the sights on Jimmie Windsor's mitral-reuse were not working well and the enemy retired without loss. "Joco," our famous hound, the best in the north country, chased the next herd. Aleric and his father fired to their heart's content, but great was their disappointment when, after the smoke had cleared away, they found only one buck kicking his last. Just then Capt. Loucks arrived, saying, "What the h—— have you got." The reply was, "One, the pick of the drive." He was not at all satisfied and said, "If this goes on, we'll hunt no more." In the afternoon our old friend, Mr. Garmon appeared and put new life into the camp. He gave us a chase, but the weather was rough and rainy and we did nothing.

Thursday—Capt. Loucks awoke happily saying, "This is going to be our banner day." Out on the watches a beautiful deer appeared on No. 1, which Aleric was occupying. She was saluted with a volley of shots and disappeared, and here our famous Joco appeared. Our catain's orders were to stop the dog after a missed deer. This was done, but the deer reappeared to Aleric's surprise. He wasn't long in disobeying orders and letting the dog go, he took careful aim and finished the job, not knowing it until Joco came back with his paws all blood.

After dinner another chase was given, which added another deer to our string. After such good luck the boys decided to drag our deer to camp. Only deer hunters can appreciate the extreme pleasure of dragging two hundred pounders over the creeks, snags etc.

Friday— Mr. Windsor started the dogs and also shot a deer. The Captain wounded one that afterwards went to awtch No. 1, where it was killed. On the way there Joco caught it twice, but he had got away with a long rope attached to him and he was held up, as it caught on stumps and brushes. Captain Loucks found him held fast in a swamp.

Saturday— Wet. Mr. Windsor left about night o'clock.

Sunday—Bright calm day. We went for an after-dinner constitutional. Joco started a deer which we had the pleasure of watching speed through the woods.

Monday— Captain started a chase that came towards Aleric and Mr. Rose. The fruit of the fusilade was a doe, which had been dropped with a bullet from Aleric's gun clean through the heart. Alerje had his rabbit's foot with him. Dinner time reveals the fact that our grub is getting low. In the evening Capt. Loucks and Mr. Rose brought in a big supply of bread they had rustled in the populated belt. We had a great supper.

Tuesday—Saw several deer, but did not bring any home.

Wednesday—Capt. Loucks, finding it difficult to separate his party from their beds, put on a big fire, and leaving the door open smoked them out of the camp at 4 a.m. At daybreak we took our watches but got nothing. Broke up camp. Arrived at Thompson's at six p.m.

Thursday—Nothing doing at Thompson's. Arrived in Peterborough 4.23.

Friday—Sold 412 lbs. deer at 10c. lb. Skinned and prepared the others.

Khedive of Egypt Is With Turks Says German Despatch

PARIS, Nov. 21. — (By German wireless.)—The news that the Khedive has revolted against British control and plans to return to Egypt with the Turkish army, is confirmed to-day.

The Temps correspondent at Rhodes says: "It is common knowledge that following Britain's refusal to allow him to return to Egypt the Khedive became enamored of the prospect of re-entering Cairo with a victorious Ottoman army which pro-German Young Turks hold forth to him.

He has organized caravans consisting of 200 horses, tents, and provisions for the campaign. The Turkish army is concentrated between Damascus and Mahau, and is estimated at 200,000, but I believe only 70,000 are of effective fighting value. The Germans, therefore, induced the Khedive to march with them with the object of stirring the Arab population to join the army."

Two Snyders Set Free.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Nov. 21.—The three Snyders, father and two sons, who are accused of high treason to the British Empire because they helped to smuggle Austrians out of Canada across the Niagara river, received preliminary trial before Magistrate A. Fraser yesterday.

The crown attorney announced that he held no evidence against the two sons of Joseph Snyder.

The magistrate dismissed them, amid the hearty cheers from the spectators.

GEN. VILLA'S TRIUMPH

Examiner Special:

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 21.—General Francisco Villa, at the head of his column of the northeast, is to enter Mexico City in triumph on Sunday, according to despatches received early to-day.

The general movement from Queerato and Irapuato of Villa's troops has begun. Twenty thousand soldiers with 100 cannon, are being sent to the Capital. As the railway conecting Irapuato and Queerataro with Mexico City has not been interrupted, Villa expects to reach there by to-morrow. He does not expect any resistance from the forces remaining in the Capital.

It is said he has received assurances from General Blanco, commandant at Mexico City that his forces will support the Gutierrez-Villa faction of the Constitutionalist party.

THIRD DIVIDEND PAID

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, Nov. 21.—The third and final dividend of the famous York County Loan and Savings Company, which failed in 1905, has been paid by the liquidator, the National Trust Co. Ltd. The cheques were mailed to-day to shareholders all over Canada. The dividend amounted to 5½ per cent., which, added to the two previous dividends of 25 per cent. each, makes a total return to the shareholders of 53½ cents on the dollar. There were 115,000 creditors and shareholders.

NO INFANTRY ATTACKS.

Artillery Is Also Less Violent, Says French War Office.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—The bulletins of the French War Office issued yesterday afternoon and evening were:—

"There is no important incident to report.

"The day of Nov. 19 was marked by the almost total absence of infantry attacks on the part of the enemy. At the same time their artillery fire was much less violent than on the afternoon of Nov. 18.

"To the north the weather has been very bad, and snow has fallen. All the region of the Yser Canal, to the east of Dixmude, is invaded by the waters.

"In front of Ramscapelle we have withdrawn from the water two 16.5 centimetre mortars abandoned by the Germans.

"There has been a very fairly intense artillery fire to the south of Ypres.

"On the centre there have been no important actions to report. In the Argonne three vigorous attacks on the part of the enemy's infantry have been repulsed.

"On our right wing the Germans have reoccupied the destroyed section of Chauvoncourt.

Crowds Braved Winter Breeze For Rugby To-day

Examiner Special:

'VARSITY STADIUM, Toronto, Nov. 21.—The play-off for the championship of the Canadian Intercollegiate Union, between 'Varsity and McGill tok place here this afternoon, before, by long way, the largest crowd of the season. The weather was cold and crisp and a breese from the southwest carried the chill of winter to the marrow making it difficult for players to handle kicks in the open. However, the fact that the field was clear of snow was appreciated, as it would have been impossible to get such conditions in Kingston, Montreal or Ottawa.

By 1:30 o'clock the rooters' section of the bleachers was filled with hilarious, uproarious students. Rooters' tickets were forty cents for this game, instead of the usual quarter, but the increased coast of Rugby did not deter the supports, even in these stringent times. Parodies sung to Tipperary, and Poor Pauline, led by the 48th Highlandrs' Band, were favourites with the rooters, not to mention the doxology dirge to McGill's memory which was chanted with due solemnity and uncovered heads.

Rev. W. E. Hassard Will Preach

In George Street Methodist Church To-morrow Night

On Sunday evening, the Rev. W. E. Hassard, B.D., of Toronto, will preach in George Street Methodist Church. In the morning the subject of Rev. R. G. Peever's sermon will be, "The Death of Lord Roberts, Our Empire's Veteran Christian Soldier." Two of the hymns that were sung in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, England, will be sung to-morrow. They are: "The Lord Is My Shepherd," and "Peace, Blessed Peace."

ANGLICAN CHURCH WAS ENTERED

Someone Went Through Religious Supplies But Nothing Was Taken

Someone entered St. John's church last night and interfered with the stores that are kept there for use in connection with religious services. Nothing was taken, however, and the matter was not reported to the police. It is thought that the entrance may have been made by someone who had a key to the various departments of the church, and while several of the cupboards were gone through nothing is missing to-day.

80 Mines Beached On Dutch Coast

Bodies of Two Hundred Sailors Have Also Been Washed Ashore.

THE HAGUE, via London, Nov. 20.—Holland's difficult position as the result of the European war is shown by one week's reports from the coast and frontiers. Along the coast eighty mines of French, German and English make have come up on shore and, exploding, have caused the death of nine persons and the wounding of five.

More than one hundred bodies, presumably of British sailors from sunken ships, have been washed ashore and buried with military honours.

Along the southern frontier nearly two hundred Belgians, who had been aiding from the Germans, surrendered to the Dutch army. They crossed the frontier in civilian clothes and then put on their uniforms, which they carried in bags, and asked for protection in the Dutch international detention camps, saying that otherwise they would starve. Since the beginning of the cold weather a dozen Germans have crossed into Holland, surrendering their arms and been sent to the detention camps.

On November 17 an apparently damaged war balloon floating at a great height passed over the southern provinces and disappeared in an easterly direction.

On November 16 a German border patrol near Nieuweschans opened fire on Dutch frontier guards, mistaking them for smugglers.

Through trains to Germany have been abolished, while the trip across the North Sea to England, which formerly required seven hours, now takes twenty-seven hours.

APPOINTMENT OF DISBURSING OFFICER

Was Taken Up at Last Night's Meeting of the Peterboro' Patriotic Association.

The matter of appointing an officer to undertake the administration of the Peterborough Patriotic Fund was taken up at last night's meeting of the Peterborouhg Patriotic Association. A name was submitted by a sub-committee composed of Ald. Stratton and Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P. After a little discussion the matter was turned over to the Distributing committee with power to act. Ald. Stratton was nominated a member of the committee.

Some objection was raised to revealing the identity of the officer recommended by the committee. It was felt that the best interests of the movement would be served if the matter was kept as quiet as possible. Some objection had been made to having Mr. Miller, Relief Officer, in charge of the fund, owing to his connection with the Charity Department of the City. It was unanimously agreed that Mr. Miller was a very capable officer, and general regret was expressed at having to dispense with his services.

The Correspondence.

The correspondence received from Ottawa condemning the appointment of a relief officer to disburse the funds was read by His Worship Mayor Buller.

Ald. Stratton rose to inquire as to the means by which this correspondence was created, whereupon Mr. J. H. Burnham confessed that the correspondence in question was created by himself, adding, "It does not matter who wrote the letter, no authority from the Peterborough Association was necessary for the purpose of ascertaining the views of the Canadian Patriotic Association at Ottawa."

A resolution dated November the ninth was recalled, showing that the Executive committee had proposed dispensing with the services of the Relief Officer, before receiving the opinion of the authorities at Ottawa. It was generally agreed that the original purpose of the committee should be carried out.

The whole matter was turned over to the Distributing committee with power to act.

"Extremely desirable; no atmosphere of charity must be attached to the relief, but the officer mentioned would no doubt be very helpful in reporting on needs of families."—G. A. Warburton.

The above telegram has to-day been received from Mr. Warburton. It refers to the matter that came up last evening before the Executive Committee of the Patriotic Association.

RUSSIANS HAVE CHECKED AN ADVANCE ON WARSAW

GERMANS SEEM TO BE PREPARING FOR A RAID ON LONDON OR THE FRENCH COAST

German Activity in Belgium Causes Much Speculation

May be Part of Plan to Raid London or to Endeavour to Land Troops Down French Coast---Belgians Ordered Out of Zebrugge and Knocke---Warships Said to be Prepared.

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Extreme activity of Germans along the Belgian coast as well as reports indicating that warships are about to move from Emden was causing the greatest uneasiness here to-day. The greatest mystery surrounded the movements along the coast. Military experts here express belief that this activity in Belgium may be a part of a plan for the establishment of a base, and for a daring raid upon London or the forerunner of a movement to engage the allied fleet off the coast, and under this cover endeavour to transport troops by sea to the French coast. The entire population of the Belgian coast towns of Zeebrugge and Knocke has been transferred to Bruges by the Germans. The people were not permitted to move into Holland. Bruges is now said to be garrisoned largely by slightly wounded soldiers, the others having been moved toward the front. Reports have been received that six submarines are being put together on the docks at Zeebrugge. The inhabitants of St. Nicholas, a city of 40,000, between Antwerp and Ghent, have been ordered to leave immediately. St. Nicholas is an important railroad junction. The people of the town were ordered to meve to Antwerp, where they were told unoccupied houses originally abandoned by Belgians, who fled from the city, would be turned over to them.

THE FIGHT FOR VERDUN

Twenty miles southeast of Verdun the Germans advanced on the Meuse capturing forts St. Mihiel and Camp des Romans and erected siege guns. They got a hold on the west side of the river at Chauvoncourt. This week the French captured the west side of the village, but the German mines blew the entire attacking force into eternity with some of their own men. The Germans have reoccupied the ground lost.

GERMAN CAVALRY SCOUTS ARE THIRTY MILES FROM WARSAW

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, Nov. 23.—German cavalry patrols have penetrated to within thirty miles of Warsaw, the capital of Poland. Heavy fighting is still in progress between Lowicz and Skiernewice, where a Russian force is opposing the main line of advance of the army of Gen. Von Hindenberg. Reports have been received of the destruction of a German cavalry patrol ten miles in advance of the main battle line. The Germans were cut off by Cossacks, and those not killed or wounded were made prisoners.

OFFERED TO SURRENDER

Przemysl Ready to Open Gates to Russians if Garrison Might Go Free—Fall Expected Soon

ROME, Nov. 23.—Przemysl, the Galician fortress which has been under siege by the Russians for some weeks, has offered to capitulate on condition that the garrison be permitted to march out with arms and baggage. The Russians refused to grant these terms, knowing that the fortress is unable to resist longer. It capitualtion is imminent.

The Giornale D'Italia's correspondent at Bucharest says that the Austrian garrison at Przemysl made a sortie Friday and was repulsed with enormous losses, including many prisoners. The correspondent states that the garrison is short of ammunition and that a general assault is expected at once

The Russians are anxious to take the town before December 6.

Russians Check German Advance on Polish Capital

No Decision Reached But Claim There Is No Danger of Enemy Reaching Warsaw----Six German Army Corps Striking at Warsaw Route.

Examiner Special:

PETROGRAD, Nov. 22. — What has been called the "most important battle in Europe" is still progressing between the Warta nd the Vistula rivers, where the Russians have checked and are believed to be at least holding the German invasion, aimed apparently at the Polish capital.

With characteristic modesty the official statements to-day made no claim to decisive successes, and said merely that "fighting continued with great persistence."

On the other important battle-front, in Galicia, however, the unfortunate Austrians again were swept back by the great grey-coated side. Nowy Sandec has been evacuated by the Austrians, and while nothing further has been received on the reported offer of the Przemysl garrison to surrender if guaranteed the honours of war, it is the general opinion that the fall of the fortress is a matter of very few days, perhaps of hours.

No Danger of German Victory.

Latest reports from Poland declare now that there is not the slightest danger of the Germans this time reaching within striking distance of Warsaw. As in the last campaign in this section Grand Duke Nicholas withdrew his troops before the enemy until on the ground previously selected; then he turned. Now his troops are occupying naturally strong positions, which can easily be held, while the armies on both flanks continue their onward march.

The Russian Plan.

The plan of the Russian staff undoubtedly is to get all the three armies aligned, then advance at once, striking for Cracow, Breslau and Posen simultaneously.

It is admitted that progress in East Prussia is retarded in the Mazurian Lake district, where the difficulties of maintaining an offensive are unusually great.

Six German Army Corps.

The German column between the Warta and Vistula rivers, according to to-day's official reports from Russian Poland, comprises six army corps, and presents a front fifty-five miles in extent.

The two rivers prevent flanking by either side, hence the fighting consists of straight frontal attacks, in which the losses of both armies are heavy, but neither side so far has been able to gain a marked advantage.

ADVICE TO OWNERS OF FRUIT TREES

Peterborough, Nov. 22, 1914.

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—As there is a large amount of young apple, cherry, plum, and pear trees that were planted last spring through Peterborough County, and which I am interested in seeing at least 98 per cent. of them have survived the extreme dry summer, and are in a vigorous state, I feel that a few lines regarding the future care of them through your valuable paper, would not be out of place. I find passing through the country that some have already done the mulching. This is a mistake as it prevents the frost going in the ground. The frost should be allowed to go in the ground and then the mulching should be done in midwinter to retain the frost as late in the spring as possible to prevent sun scald which is caused by an early growth and then a late frost.

All trees should be slit with the point of a sharp knie up the trunk and large limbs each year for the first five or six years. This gives expansion to the bark and prevents bark binding and bursting. The slit will heal up immediately, but a burst will never heal and finally the tree will die. The slitting should be done about June. If these precautions are taken and a little extra care in cultivation, etc., there will be no trouble in growing fine fruit trees in this locality, providing hardy varietys have been planted. Thanking you, I remain,

Yours truly,
W. H. MERRILL.

SPENDS A DAY IN TRENCHES WITH BELGIANS

Count de Beaufort Tells of Soldiers Crawling Out Under Fire and Changing Their Shoes for Those of Dead Germans

BELGIUM, Nov. 18.—I have had an unique experience for a civilian, spending a day in the trenches with the Belgian troops. I reached the front with the help of an officer of the Belgian field artillery. Here are my impressions of the war at close quarters:

About 3 a.m. we reached a small farm, where the horses of a battery were sheltered. We proceeded on foot to the guns in the vicinity of the village of Saint George. There I was introduced to German shrapnel.

The Germann aim was bad; one projectile after another whizzed over our heads and either exploded or more often embedded themselves in the mud 200 feet behind our position. Though our position was within three miles of the German advanced lines, it seemed hard to realize we were part and parcel of this gigantic world struggle.

The bursting shrapnel, with its deadly charge, reminded me more of festive fireworks than death and destruction.

Goes to Front.

About 5 a.m. an observer for our battery requested over the telephone to be temporarily relieved and when one of the younger officers was sent ahead I got permission to accompany him. The rifle had ceased, so we reached the infantry trenches where the observer had spent the night, without any mishaps.

On the way we passed great numbers of stretcher-bearers with their sad loads. When gradually dawn broke, war in all its horrors was gradually revealed before my eyes. Close by us sat a Belgian soldier bravely trying to bandage what had once been his left hand, with a rib-bon held between his teeth and right hand. Two nurses from an English ambulance were bandaging the head of a man who had been frightfully lacerated by a shrapnel.

The most revolting sight was a number of unburied dead. The day before several Belgians and German had been buried behind the trenches. During the night the heavy German shells had dug holes and unearthed many bodies. I saw here a head and there a leg or an arm—rarely a whole body. It was simply ghastly.

Asks Shoes of Dead.

A corporal, not more than nineteen, crawled up to the officer and said:

"Pardon, mon lieutenant; several open most respectfully ask whether they can have another pair of shoes; most of ours are in very bad condition."

The lieutenant exclaimed: "Bapristi, Jansen? Do the men think I am carrying boots about in my knapsack?"

"Ah, mon, lieutenant," quietly replied the corporal, "there are plenty of good boots over there," and he pointed over the trenches. We saw at a distance of 300 feet in front of the trenches, fifty or sixty dead Germans. The lieutenant shrugged his shoulders.

"I can't give them permission to leave the trenches, you know," he told the corporal, "but if they want any more chances of risking their necks, well—" and he turned back to the men.

The corporal understood. A few minutes later one man got up slowly and carefully peeped over the trenches; then he took his rifle, and on all fours crawled over and down the other side, slung the rifle over his shoulder, and, still on his stomach, advanced. Before he had gone half way three of his comrades followed in the same careful manner.

Before long a dozen men were in front. They reached the Germans, most of whom were lying face downward; quickly they were turned over and their boots unstrapped. Then, instead of returning with their booty, the Belgians sat down among the dead and proceeded to take their own shoes off and tried those off the Germans on. We could see the shoes flying around, and hear them laugh and joke. It was the most absurd, yet the most dramatic scene imaginable. Few of the dead Germans were left with any boots. When the men returned to the trenches, the spare ones were exchanged for a cigarette, a pipe or tobacco, a lump of bread, or even a button.

125,000 BELGIAN TROOPS FIGHTING THE GERMANS

Not 25,000 as Germans Say — Spirit of these Soldiers Better than Ever.

HAVRE, Nov. 22.—It was announced at the headquarters of the Belgian General Staff to-day that the Belgian army in the field is composed of 125,000 men and not 25,000, as the Germans assert. The spirit of the Belgian soldiers is better than ever, as the Germans who sustained considerable losses on the Yser well know.

Leather Prices Must Go Up

Only Three Months' Hide Supply in Canada and Prices Soaring.

Local hide and leather men are somewhat covered over the high level to which the price of hides has advanced during during the last two or three weeks. There is very little doubt among the hide and leather men that the placing of the embargo on all hdes and skins coming either from or through the United States, as a result of the outbreak of foot and mouth disease in Chicago, will have a very serious effect upon the leather situation in Canada. Latest quotations show that prevailing prices here are above the highest point reached on the Chicago market of late.

"The supply of hides and skins in Canada is very small," said the manager of one large leather goods firm in explanation of the advance.

"At the most, the supply will not last tanners for more than three months, at the rate they are being used at present. Canada does not produce very many skins, for, as a rule, the cattle are not sufficiently large and they are not fit in other ways. This will mean that if no leather is forthcoming from the United States in a short while, tanners and manufacturers here will be confronted with a very great shortage of leather. Even now, prices are advancing rapidly and the latest quotations show that leather is now higher than the last price at Chicago.

LARGER ACREAGE OF WHEAT IN THIS DISTRICT

It is expected that there will be a much larger acreage seeded in this district than ever before. It is up to the farmer to produce just as much as by possibly can next year, as the demands for farm products will be immense, both local and foreign. As an instance of how the farmer is alive to the situation it might be stated that Mr. A. H. Toole, who resides near Omemee on a 200 acre farm, has ploughed and put in shape for seeding a 50 acre field that has not been cultivated for seven years, just in order to produce more, and there are no doubt, dozens of others who have viewed the situation in the same light.

SCARCITY IN MILK SUPPLY

Milk is scarce. If you have not been advised by your milkman that milk is scarce and that he can only spare you half your needs or none at all to-day, you are fortunate. A number of the milkmen are in this predicament. One farmer who supplied 130 quarts daily is now only able to supply half the quntity without seeing any improvement in sight for a month or more.

Sure.

"Virtue is its own reward," quoted the Sage.

"Yes," replied the fool. "But we all expect a bonus."

LOYALISTS IN CONTROL

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Reuter's Cape Town correspondent says that two sons of General Christian DeWet, the rebel leader, have surrendered to a magistrate in Cape Town.

Several of General DeWet's chief officers, together with most of his supporters to the west of the railway line, surrendered at the same time.

A despatch to Reuter's from Pretoria, says: "It is officially announced that General De Wet's rapidly-dwindling rebel commando became surrounded by loyal forces in the vicinity of Boshof, on the Vaal River. OUR SERIAL STORY PAGE

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Geo. Allan England

"More than a hundred thousand of us already!" he exulted. "Over a tenth of a million—and every year the growth is faster, ever faster, in swift progressions. A hundred thousand English-speaking people, Beta; a civilization already, even in a material sense, superior to the old one that was swept away; in a spiritual, moral sense, how vastly far ahead!

"A hundred thousand! Some time, before long, it will be a million; then two, five, twenty, a hundred, with no racial discords, no mutual antipathies, no barriers of name or blood: but for the first time a universal race, all sound and pure, starting right, living right, striving toward a goal which even we cannot foresee!

"Not only shall this land be filled, but Europe, Asia, Africa, and all the islands of the Seven Seas shall know the hand of man again, and own his sovereignty, from pole to pole!"

His clasp about Beatrice tightened; she felt his heart beat strong with deep emotion as he spoke again:

"Already the cities are beginning to arise from their ashes of a thousand oblivious years. Already a score of thriving colonies have scattered from the capital, all yet bound to it with monorail cables, with electric wires, and with the ether-borne magic of the wireless.

"Already our boy, our son—can you imagine him really a man of thirty, darling?—elected President on our last Council Day, guides a free people — a people self-reliant and strong, energetic, capable, dominant.

"Already the inconceivable fertility of the earth is yielding its bounties a hundred-fold—and trade routes circle the ends of the great Abyss; and all the vast territory once the United States has begun to open again before the magic touch of man!

"Of man—now free at last! No more slavery! No more the lash of hunger driving men to their tasks. No more greed and grasping; no lust of gold, no bitter cry of crushed and hopeless serfdom! No buying and selling for the lure of profit; no speculating in the people's means of life; no squeezing of their blood for wealth! But free, strong labour, gladly done. The making of useful and beautiful things, Beatrice, and their exchange for human need and service—this, and the old dream of joy in righteous toil, this is the blessing of our world to-day!"

He paused. A little, swift-moving light upon the far horizon drew his eye. It seemed a star, travelling among its sister stars that now already had begun to twinkle palely in the darkening sky. But Allan knew its meaning.

"Look!" cried he and pointed. "Look, Beatrice! The West Coast Mail—the plane from southern California. The wireless told us it had started only three hours ago—and here it is already!"

"And but for you," she murmured, "none of all this could ever possibly have been. Oh, Allan, remember that song—our song? In the days of our first love, there on the Hudson, remember how I sang to you:

"Stark wie der Fels,
Tief wie das Meer,
Muss deine Liebe,
Muss deine Liebe sein?"

"I remember!" And it has been so?"

Her answer was to draw his hand up to her lips and print a kiss there, and as she laid her cheek upon it he felt it wet with tears.

And night came; and now the wind lay dead; and upon the brooding earth, spangled with home-lights over hill and vale, the stars gazed calmly down

The steady, powerful droning of the power-plant rose, blended with the soothing murmur of the rapids and the river.

"Seems like a lullaby—doesn't it, dearest?" murmured Allan. "You know—it won't be long now before it's good-bye and—good-night."

"I know," she answered. "We've lived, haven't we. Oh, Allan, no one ever lived, ever in all this world—lived as much as you and I have lived! Think of it all from the beginning till now. No one ever so much, so richly, so happily, so well!"

"No one, darling!"

"But, after toil, rest—rest is sweet, too. I shall be ready for it when it summons me. I shall go to it, content and brave and smiling. Only—"

"Yes?"

"Only this I pray, just this and nothing more—that I mayn't have to stay awake, alone, after—after you're sleeping, Allan!"

A long time they sat together, silent, in the sweet-scented gloom within the flower-girt arbour.

At last he spoke.

"The wonder and the glory of it all!" he whispered. "Oh, the wonder of a dream, a vision come to pass, before our eyes!

"For, see! Has not the prophecy come true? What was then only a yearning and a hope, is it not now reality. Is it not now all even as we dreamed so very, very long ago, there in our little bungalow beside the broad, slow-moving Hudson?

"Is this not true?"

"I see a world where thrones have crumbled and where kings are dust. The artistocracy of idleness has perished from the earth.

"I see a world without a slave. Man at last is free. Nature's forces have by science been enslaved. Lightning and light, wind and wave, frost and flame, and all the secret, subtle powers of earth and air are the tireless toilers for the human race.

"I see a world at peace, adorned with every form of art, with music's myriad voices thrilled, while lips are rich with words of love and truth—a world in which no exile sighs, no prisoner mourns; a world on which the gibbet's shadow does not fall; a world where labour reaps its full reward—where work and worth go hand in hand!

"I see a world without the beggar's outstretched palm, the miser's heartless, stony start, the piteous wail of want, the livid lips of lies, the cruel eyes of scorn.

"I see a race without disease of flesh or brain, shapely and fair, the married harmony of form and function; and, as I look, life lengthens, joy deepens, love canopies the earth—and over all, in the great dome, shines the eternal star of human hope!"

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

When the blood becomes impure the first symptoms which manifest themselves are a breaking out of the various forms of skin trouble such as boils, pimples, abscesses, ulcers, etc., and the only treatment you can use is some sort of a good blood cleansing remedy which will put the blood into a perfect condition, and thus eliminate all the different poisons from the system which cause these different eruptions to occur.

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters. All we ask you is to try it and be convinced. Thousands have used it during the past forty years, and have nothing but praise for its curative powers.

Mrs. John Fitzgerald, Plantagenet, Ont., writes: "I am one woman who cannot speak too highly of Burdock Blood Bitters. I was covered with boils, and could not get rid of them. I was advised by a friend to try B.B.B. which I did, and I can truthfully say that it completely cured me. I have never had a sign of a boil since."

See that our name appears on both the label and wrapper as there are many imitations placed on the market which are said to be "just as good."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

CHILD BORN WITH HARD COLD

Remarkable Statement of Girl's Mother. How She Suffered Until Six Years Old. How Finally Cured.

Pittsfield, Mass. — "My little girl now six years old was born with a hard cold and very delicate. Every winter she would suffer from croup and poor digestion. Dr. Currier recommended Vinol and within a week she had improved considerably, and her appetite increased so she wanted things to eat that had disgusted her before.

"On the first bottle she gained one and one-half pounds, and now at the age of six Vinol has made her a solid, healthy, good-natured child, and while sick she was so cross and fretful I grew discouraged and was worn out taking care of her."—Mrs. GEORGE WAGNER, Pittsfield, Mass.

Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, is a wonderful appetizer, and you can see delicate, ailing children improve day by day under its use. It enriches the blood, builds up the body, making pale, delicate children rugged and rosy.

We ask all parents of weak, sickly, delicate children in this vicinity to try Vinol, with the understanding that if it fails to benefit your little ones, we return your money.

GOOD SHORT STORIES.

Innocently the two old farmers looked at each other as they chatted in the busy marketplate, talking on "taters, turnips, and all other old farm claptrap."

And then, as if it had just occurred to him, old Pontin asked Farmer Steele if he still felt inclined to sell that Shorthorn cow.

"Will you take twelve pounds for her?" he suggested offhandedly.

"No, no," murmured Steele stolidly, as he lovingly fingered his watch-chain. "Couldn't part wi' 'er for that, by long way."

"Oh, but I thought you said last market day as how you might let her go for that!" suggested Pontin.

"Maybe. But something's 'appened to 'er since then."

"She bain't dead?" said the prospective buyer, looking up quickly.

"No; but the missus, she's dead set on that coo. Wouldn't part wi' 'er for anythink, and quite loves her. She'd sob 'er eyes out if I parted wi' that coo."

"'Um! Suppose that ends it, then?" said the farmer, as he prepared to move along.

"Well, I don't know. Look here, Pont, make it twelve-pound-ten, and let the missus sob!"

A WORD OF GRATITUDE.

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles, and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Hins, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

Two Irishmen met once and referred to the illness of a third. "Poor Michael Hogan! Faith, I'm afraid he's going to die," said one.

"And why should he die?" said the other.

"Och, sure, he's got so thin! You're thin and I'm thin, but begorra Michael is thinner than the both of us put together."

Scream of culture
Round the ruins of Louvain!
Rheims is burning
While your learning
Boasts a lordship of the brain!

Prussian Vulture,
Scream of culture
O'er the ashes of Termonde!
Satyr searches
Maids and churches,
Violated, like your bond!

Prussian Vulture,
Scream of culture
To the slaughtered priest and nun,
Mutilation
Of a nation
Not so cultured as the Hun.

Prussian Vulture,
Scream of culture
To the races yet unstirred,
By your lootings,
Hangings, shootings,
And your bloody, broken word!

Smashed, disbanded,
Henceforth branded
With black infamous disgrace.
By repentance
Seek re-entrance
To the outraged human race.

EXPECTATIONS.

(By James J. Montague.)

The kid that lives next door to me
Is talkin' mighty queer.
He says that Santa Claus won't be
A comin' round this year.
He says we're poorer than we was
An' that's why he is sure
That Santa Claus won't come, because
He doesn't like the poor.

I guess I know we're poor, all right.
My dad ain't got no job,
An' all my mother does at night
Is lay awake an' sob.
But I should think old Santa'd know
That 'count o' this here war
Us kids that's boasted for him so
Would need him all the more.

He must be rich as rich can be,
For every Christmas Day
The papers tells about how he Gives loads o' toys away.
I ain't expectin' him to bring
A very awful lot.
But, say! I'd like some little thing
To show he ain't forgot!

RHYME AND REASON

Who'll pilot me o'er life's rough way,
And laugh the frowning clouds away,
With ne'er an unkind word to say?
My husband.

Who wins for me the gens of fame,
Who sees my faults and does not blame,
Who shields me with his own good name?
My husband.

Who strikes for truth, and does not fear,
For Justice sake to do or dare,
Whose help is nigh when danger's near?
My husband.

Who can the day's long hours beguile
With hopeful word and cheerful smile,
Who chides my fears and laughs the while?
My husband.

When twilight's shades encircle all
And life's dim shadows gently fall,
Who'll fondly love me more than all?
My husband.

Another Nebula Coming.

(From the Ohio State Journal.)

The latest from the skies is that there is a big nebula coming in the direction of the earth at the rate of one hundred miles a second. If that nebula strikes us it will be like a ton of coal falling on a gnat. It will overwhelm us and annihilate us. Its speed is more than three billion miles a year.

One might think at that rate it might soon reach us, but it never will. It will veer off into endless space long before it would strike the earth. But think of the distance and its coming one hundred miles a second and never getting here, it is so far off. This fact gives one an idea of the bigness of the universe and the littleness of the earth, and to lead one in the ways of modesty and simplicity, where selfishness and unkindness are never tolerated and the rule of purity, honour and duty becomes the law of gravitation.

Twitching of the Nerves Broken-down System

Now Entirely Cured—Never Used Any Medicine With Such Benefit as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

MRS. M'KELLAR.

Headaches, sleeplessness and nervousness are often very disagreeable, but when your nervous system gets into such a condition that the nerves twitch and jerk, and you have peculiar nervous sensations come over you there is cause for grave alarm.

Everybody dreads the thought of paralysis or locomotor ataxia. Nothing is worse to look forward to than helplessness. Sometimes it is helplessness of body, and at other times the mind is affected, which is far worse.

The writer of this letter did not know what to expect, but fortunately began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in time to head off danger, and writes that she was entirely cured of the old trouble. The last paragraph proves that the cure was lasting.

Mrs. John McKellar, 11 Barton street east, Hamilton, Ont., writes:—"I was injured some years ago, and that left me with a broken-down nervous system. I could not sleep, and suffered from twitching of the nerves and disagreeable nervous sensations.

"I then began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and can say that I never used any medicine that did me so much good: in fact, I am entirely cured of my old trouble. The Nerve Food not only strengthened the nerves, but also built up my system in every way."

Under more recent date Mrs. McKellar writes confirming her cure, and states that she has had inquiries from many people who had heard of the great benefits she obtained from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

GIVE THANKS FOR WAR OR FOR PEACE?

Many Confused and Perplexed Worshippers.

How "In Everything Give Thanks"—Knowledge Necessary Approaching Throne of Grace—Variant Praises and Thanks to God Throughout the World—The Solution of Our Perplexities—The Bible the Only Guide—The Spirit of a Sound Mind Rare—Hence Majority of Thanksgiving Vain Formality Unnoticed or Resented.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (nonsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

Philadelphia, Nov. 22.—Pastor Russell, at Frankford Theatre, had for his text the words, "In everything give thanks."—1 Thessalonians 5:18.

Reviewing briefly the condition of the world, the speaker declared that it must be a difficult matter for the majority of people to determine correctly the nature of the thanks they would offer to God. Three hundred and fifty millions of humanity, our blood relatives, are at war, seeking to destroy each other. Ninety million Americans, deeply interested in them, are invited by our Honorable President and the Governors of our several states to render thanks to the Almighty. Truly, we have many causes for thanksgiving to our Creator; life itself is a blessing, a boon; our nation in many respects is the most favored on the face of the earth, enriched by God's bounty above all others, not the least of our blessings being our civil and religious liberties.

Surely no one of even average heart and head has cause for other than great thanksgiving to our Creator. "Our lines have fallen to us in pleasant places." Those who feel no gratitude are surely soured by discontent, the fruitage of ignorance, selfishness and sin. How appropriate, then, that each and all bow heart and head before the Giver of every good and perfect gift! To whatever extent this course be followed heartily, without hypocrisy, undoubtedly a blessing will result, individually and nationally. The custom is a beautiful one.

There is a difference between thanksgiving and prayer. None have the right or the privilege of approaching the Throne of Heavenly Grace except those who have come into covenant relationship with God. The Jews came into covenant relationship with God through their Law Covenant by Divine arrangement through Moses. The followers of Jesus, who accept the Divine arrangement of the Gospel Age, are privileged thus to come into relationship with the Creator through Him. He is our Advocate, who has opened up for us a new and living way, through the sacrifice of His flesh. All whom the Father has accepted through Him—all whom the Father has begotten by His Holy Spirit—are Scripturally termed sons of God, children of God, heirs of God, joint-heirs with Jesus Christ their Lord.—1 John 3:1; Romans 8:17.

These are invited to come to their Father and to address Him thus: "Our Father who art in Heaven," and to ask for the blessings which God has provided for His children, according to His Divine purposes and arrangements. But none others are permitted to come to this Throne of Grace, because not in covenant relationship with the Saviour, because in God's arrangement "There is none other name given in Heaven or amongst men, whereby we may be saved" from our sins, or be brought into relationship with God.

Thus we see that only a limited number may enjoy the privileges of prayer or expect answers to their prayers. But, thank God, others may worship and bow down! "Come, let us worship and bow down; let us kneel before the Lord our Maker." Many have this privilege, and the exercise of it is sure to bring a blessing. Whoever has a thankful heart, which takes delight in offering worship to the Giver of every good gift, will surely receive a reflex blessing. His love of righteousness and truth, holiness and goodness, mercy and justice, will thereby be strengthened; and so also will be the probability of his some day reaching the point where he will see the wisdom and the desirability of giving his heart—his little all—to the Lord in consecration—to be a faithful footstep follower of the Redeemer.

Very evidently the majority of mankind have an insufficiency of knowledge of God, of the Bible, and of the Divine Plan therein set forth, to thank God for the present state of war. But to the Church, whose eyes of understanding have been opened and who are able to see the lengths and the breadths, the heights and the depths, of God's Love in the Message of the Bible, St. Paul writes: "In everything give thanks!"

Ripe Christians have learned to give thanks to God for the adversities of life in their own experiences, convinced that under God's supervision the direst of calamities may be overruled for good to His people and for glory to His name. But only the advanced, the developed, Christian is able to give thanks under circumstances of severe trials and testings. Only those who have great faith, built upon clear knowledge of the Divine promises, can realise thoroughly that all things are working together for their good.

Similarly, in respect to the great European war now in progress, its casualties, desolations and wounds, only the well-instructed of God's people may understand the Divine plans and arrangements so thoroughly as to be able to give thanks in respect to the war—and able to exercise confident faith that the outcome of it will mean blessings of instruction and preparation for future blessings.

If the Scriptures did not foretell this time of world-wide "distress of nations," we might not know that God had foreseen it and had made provision for its results before permitting it. But the same Bible that foretells the war tells of its results, saying, "When the judgments of the Lord are abroad in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness." (Isaiah 26:9.) If, then, the war is teaching the world lessons along the lines of righteousness and justice, it will be doing permanent good. Moreover, the same Bible tells that the war is merely the outgrowth of human selfishness, ignorance, superstition and false doctrine, and assures us that although it will lead on to revolution, anarchy and the utter wreck of the present order of things—the present civilization—nevertheless, God is prepared for the emergency. "Man's extremity will be God's opportunity."

The hour having come for Messiah to take the reins of government, He will stand forth in Power and Majesty at the proper moment, and exclaim to the raging elements of the restless human sea, "Peace! Be still!" And there will be a great calm. The lesson learned in the Trouble will be a lasting one; and the blessed opportunities of Messiah's Kingdom, which will be built upon the ashes of present institutions, will bring everlasting life and everlasting joy to all the willing and obedient.

Those who see the war from this viewpoint may indeed in everything give thanks; rejoicing that the reign of Sin and Death will soon be ended! rejoicing that God's Kingdom will soon come, and His will be done on earth, even as in Heaven! rejoicing that soon the knowledge of the true character of God will be universal! rejoicing that then, in the light of that knowledge, "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess, to the glory of God"! rejoicing still further, that any who under all those favorable conditions will refuse to make a full surrender to the Lord, will be mercifully cut off from life in the Second Death!

The explanation of the sorrows of the world is given in the Bible, which tells us that sin lies at the door, and that the mental, moral and physical blemishes which cause humanity such distress are incidental to the penalty pronounced against sin; namely, death. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." When Father Adam was on trial representatively for his race, he sinned and came under the penalty for sin—"Dying, thou shalt die." Therefore all his children share by heredity his imperfections and are likewise imperfect—sinners, as St. Paul explains. (Romans 5:12.) Thus, during sixty centuries, approximately twenty thousand millions of Adam's children have been "born in sin and shapen in iniquity," and have entered the world condemned and dying, mentally, morally and physically.

Divine sympathy exercised toward this race of sinners provided a Saviour, "who for the joy set before Him" sacrificed His life for the world. (John 3:16; Hebrews 12:2.) "Jesus Christ by the grace of God tasted death for every man." (Hebrews 2:9.) Then, instead of setting up the promised Kingdom to bless the world, instead of saving the world, the Saviour did something else; and that which He has been doing from the time of His resurrection until now is, as the Apostle explains, a Mystery. (Ephesians 3:3-8; Colossians 1:26, 27.) "The Mystery of God" the world does not understand; for He prefers to keep the matter from them. But "the secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him, and He will show them His Covenant."

This Mystery is that God has purposed that the blessing of the world should be accomplished by our Saviour in association with a select class gathered out of the world and especially prepared in the School of Christ during the Gospel Age. During the centuries required for the finding of this saintly class for whom the Lord has been searching with the magnet of Truth, various false theories have sprung up and found acceptance in the world. One of these is that God does not love the world and has never purposed its salvation; but that, on the contrary, He has predestinated all except the saints to suffer eternal torture, because He wished to have it so.

Another of these false theories is that whilst God wished to save the world, He is unable to do so, because handicapped by human self-will and by Satan's aggressiveness. This theory declares that God loves the world, including the heathen millions; that He longs to have the Gospel taken to them, but cannot do so except through human agency; and that He is baffled and disappointed because those who profess to be His people fail to raise sufficient funds.

To rational minds these theories are no longer satisfactory; hence many are turned to infidelity. But leaving these errors of the Dark Ages and going back to the Scriptures, we find their teachings consistent; namely, that as soon as the Mystery of God, the Church, is finished, the Divine blessings will proceed through The Christ—Jesus the Head, and the Church the Body—to the world. As it is written, "In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." The Mystery of God is that the spiritual Seed of Abraham is not the Lord Jesus only, but also His members—the Church.—Galatians 3:8, 16, 29.

During Messiah's Reign of Righteousness, all nations will be instructed, enlightened, blessed. The merit of Christ will then be applied on behalf of the billions who have gone down into the prison-house of death—Sheol, Hades, the grave. The Church will constitute the First Resurrection. All sharing in it will attain life on the spirit plane. Later, during the Millennium, the world will return from the tomb, "every man in his own order." The process of resurrection will continue with them, in order that the willing and obedient may rise gradually towards perfection on the human plane and finally attain it. Meantime the earth will be rejuvenated and become the promised Paradise restored.

Looking down into the future, the Psalmist exclaims, in view of the Kingdom blessings promised the world. "O, give thanks unto the Lord; for He is good! for His mercy endureth forever!" It is the mercy of God toward us—toward all who need His mercy and who desire it—that constitute the ground for thanksgiving. It is true that praise must come from thankful hearts; and that, to be properly thankful, one must see more than is now visible to those who have not the eye of faith and the Divine revelation of things to come. But these very opportunities the Lord's consecrated ones possess. As it is written, "Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear."

Not only so, but to the extent that any sees and hears of the grace of God he has responsibility. To possess the knowledge of God and to disdain it is to receive the grace of God in vain.

God's people not only give thanks for future blessings received now by faith, but additionally they appreciate blessings granted them in the present life, and give thanks for these. The first of these is the knowledge of the goodness of God in releasing us by faith from sin and its penalty, so that without waiting for actualities we can now rejoice in the mercy which has justified us freely through the blood of Christ. The realization both of the rolling away of our sins and of our forgiveness by the Father calls for gratitude. All other blessings rest upon this one, and all thanksgiving should properly include thanks for our justification by faith.

After our justification we were inducted into a still further grace, or privilege—that of becoming members of the Body of Christ. Through acceptation of this privilege we gain the opportunity of a change of nature—from human to Divine. (2 Peter 1:4.) Our human nature justified, cleansed, made acceptable to God as a sacrifice through the merit of Christ, will be replaced by a spirit nature and glory, honor and immortality, joint-heirship with our Lord and Head, if we faithfully make our sacrifice. (Romans 12:1.) What cause we have for thanksgiving! What shall we render unto Him for His benefits toward us?

The heart that has come into faith-union and communion with the Lord, learns something more every day respecting the Heavenly Father's loving care for His children; and such fresh item of knowledge is a new well-spring of pleasure. "He satisfieth the longing soul." "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled." "Surely goodness and mercy follow me all the days of my life." These are the experiences of those ripe Christians called upon by the Apostle to give thanks unto God in every matter and to know that this is the will of God in respect to all who are members of the Body of Christ.

Let us not overlook the fact that our text indicates that we are to give thanks for our sorrows, our trials, our disappointments, as well as for our joys and our pleasures; for the word everything includes all things. Nor is this the only Scripture to this effect. The Apostle elsewhere urges the members of Christ to rejoice in tribulation—not because tribulation is a joy-producer, but because tribulation works out additional patience, and patience brings additional experience, which in turn brings larger hope, until we are not ashamed of our tribulations, because thereby the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts.—Romans 5:3; 8:35.

The basis of all rejoicing as respects both the future and the present is faith: First, that there is a God; second, that He has a noble character; third, that His Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power are perfect and are thoroughly co-ordinated; fourth, that all these attributes are enlisted in the salvation of the world; fifth, that this salvation began to be worked out by our Lord at His First Advent; sixth, that it is still working out in the selection of His Church; seventh, that shortly it will begin to take practical shape in the establishment of Christ's Millennial Kingdom; eighth, that through this Kingdom a blessing shall extend to every creature of our race.

Then let every man to the extent of his enlightenment appreciate and confess the Almighty God and give thanks unto His name; for He is good, and His mercy endureth forever. Let those who have tasted of His grace go on, that they may grow in grace, in knowledge, in faith and in character-likeness to our God. Let His saints, who are addressed in our text, more and more appreciate their wonderful privilege, their high calling of God in Christ Jesus—to be heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ our Lord.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GREY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural colour dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and abundant. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old recipe which can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two it becomes beautifully dark, glossy and abundant.

BARGE LOST IN GALE.

Eight Bodies Washed Ashore From Wreck on Lake Superior.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 21. — Despatches from Senay, Mich., last night report the discovery there of the wooden barge Annie M. Petersen broken up on the Lake Superior shore, eight miles from the life-saving station at Grand Marais, Mich.

Eight bodies have come ashore, those of six men and two women. They will be sent to Grand Marais for identification. The Petersen was supposed to have a crew of only seven, and the finding of an additional body gives basis for the fear that the steamer C. F. Curtis and barge Selden E. Marvin of the same tow, may also have been lost. No trace of the two vessels has been found as far east as Whitefish Point.

The Petersen is believed to have been wrecked Thursday night. The three vessels, owned by the L. Edward Hines Lumber Co., Chicago, cleared from Baraga, Mich., at five o'clock Wednesday morning, with lumber, bound for Tonawanda, N. Y. They set out in the face of storm signals and in a heavy northwest gale.

The Annie M. Petersen, Capt. John M. Walker, was a barge of 631 gross tons, 190 feet long, and 38 feet beam. She was built in Green Bay, Wis., in 1874. The barge Selden E. Marvin, Capt. Fred. E. Anderson is a vessel of 618 gross tons, 174 feet long, 38 feet beam, and was built in Toledo in 1881. The steamer C. F. Curtis, Capt. J. P. Jennings, Detroit, Mich, is a vessel of 691 gross tons, 196 feet long and 38 feet beam. She was built in Marine City, Mich., in 1882.

A telegram, delayed in transmission, received at Harbor Beach yesterday from the keeper of the Hammond Life-saving Station, 16 miles above Rogers City, Mich., on the Lake Huron shore, stated that the wooden steamer Mary Sicken of Marine City was wrecked on Nine Mile Point, below Cheboygan, Wednesday.

Two Others Ashore.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Nov. 21.—The steamers Barth and Lackawanna are ashore off Bois Blanc. The wrecking tug Favorite has gone to their assistance.

FILLINGS FOR PIES

Apple Filling

Peel, core and slice good tart apples such as the Baxter, chop fine and add granulated sugar to sweeten and the desired seasoning. Bake with upper and lower crust. This makes a delicious pie, better to my taste than sliced apples. If cooked apples are used stew them with as little water as possible so the sauce will be thick. Add sugar and seasoning when done.

Custard

Take two eggs, a large half-cupful sugar, pinch of salt, about one-quarter teaspoonful grated nutmeg, or half teaspoonful extract of lemon, one pint milk. This, if properly baked, will quiver like jelly and will cut firm. Custard pies are spoiled by overcooking or too quick cooking. They should be slowly cooked in a moderately heated oven. To test when done try running the knife blade into centre of pie. If knife comes out clean pie is done.

Lemon Pie

Two eggs (yolks), one cup sugar, one tablespoon corn starch, one cup water, a pinch of butter, juice and part of grated rind of one large lemon. Beat eggs, sugar, etc., together, then cook thoroughly on stove, taking care not to burn. Do not add lemon juice until cooked. Have pie crust baked in a slow oven, then add filling. Make frosting of the whites beaten with about one-half tablespoon granulated sugar.

Pumpkin Pie

Take a cupful of pumpkin, add two well-beaten eggs and milk (whole milk) to make proper consistency. Sweeten and season to taste. (Maple syrup makes a superior sweetening).

A word about pumpkin sauce, as there is pumpkin sauce and pumpkin sauce, and a great deal of difference in the methods of preparing it. Some cooks stew sliced pumpkin in water until soft, then take out of kettle and squeeze through a colander. Others steam pumpkin and, treat it likewise. By either method the good of pumpkin is lost in water. Try this method:

Prepare pumpkin in the ordinary way. Put in a kettle with a small quantity of water, cover and let cook slowly for about two hours, or until thoroughly cooked, then mash with a potato pounder. Leave cover off and continue cooking, taking care not to burn, until juice is all absorbed, or until sauce is perfectly dry. A cupful of this is worth two or more of the ordinary to thicken, and is real pumpkin. To cook a large pumpkin is the work of the greater part of the day; but it doubly pays for the trouble. —Farm and Dairy.

A WHITE CLOTHES ROOM

No matter how old fashioned a house may be, if it is roomy one can have a white clothes room, a room which I consider almost a necessity in every home.

Select a convenient room either upstairs or downstairs, paper neatly with very light paper (perfectly white if you can procure it), having a white and green border. Paint all woodwork with good white paint, floor included. Place a square of white linoleum on the floor. Hang a shelf in a snug corner and curtain with white cretonne. Paper the top of shelf with shelf paper, green or white. Paint a small old fashioned rocking chair white and cover with white and green cretonne, having a cushion of white. You can drop into this chair while you are admiring your fine white clothes that have been beautifully laundered and symetrically arranged in this neat little clothes room. You might also place in the centre of the room a stand painted perfectly white on which could be kept flowers.

This style of clothes room is suitable for old fashioned houses. Modern houses have clothes rooms, but they are costly and elaborate.

OUR GREATEST NEED

Mrs. C. N. McL., Norfolk Co., Ont.

"I WOULD advise country girls not to accept the proposal of any young man until he promises to provide the house with running water and a sanitary kitchen," says Prof. L. H. Bailey. This may seem like a radical measure to obtain necessary conveniences, but I say to Prof. Bailey's advice, "Hear! Hear!"

My own experience has shown me the necessity of a definite understanding before marriage as to the consideration that the household department on the farm is to receive. When we were married we planned to have all conveniences in the house. We had talked it over carefully and found that our ideas coincided. We started out on a run down farm with an equally run down house. We agreed that profit-making improvements must come first, and we started in to improve our land and our stock. We were both agreed that this was the best plan, and for half a dozen years I carried water from a spring situated fully 20 yards from the back door. Of course my husband had insisted that he carry the water; but he was never around when the water was needed. New needs presented themselves in the farm department, and the improvements in the house were put off from time to time. My husband got used to my doing without things, and it seemed that the slightest improvement needed on the farm was more important than my greatest need in the house.

I worried about this, but it took a friend visiting me to bring me right up with a start. "Did you ever make a real good kick against this neglect?" was the way in which she put it. I then saw that I was to blame, not my husband. I had given in too easily. We had a good talk. I showed him wherein he was not treating me justly, or living up to our premarriage arrangement. Now we have water works and everything complete. I say to young women have a definite understanding with your husbands-to-be and see to it that that understanding is not violated.

Tribute To British Soldiers.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—A remarkable tribute to the bravery of the British soldiers fighting in France is paid by Field Marshal Sir John French in a special order, part of which was published here yesterday. The order, which is addressed to the second British army corps, is dated field headquarters, Nov. 3. In part it says:—

"Your commander-in-chief has watched with the deepest admiration and solicitude the splendid stand made by the soldiers of His Majesty the King, in their splendid efforts to maintain the forward position which they have won by gallantry and steadfastness. Its courage and endurance is beyond all praise. It is an honor to belong to such an army."

Flying Into Canada Forbidden.

ALBANY, N.Y., Nov. 21.—Following a complaint made by the Canadian Government to the State Department in Washington against American aviators flying across the border from New York State, Governor Glynn yesterday sent out a warning calling attention that the Dominion Government has fixed a penalty of $5,000 or five years' imprisonment for such flights. Clearance papers must be obtained by airman before flying into Canada.

Mrs. David Henderson Killed.

GUELPH, Nov. 21.—Death came tragically to Mrs. David Henderson, wife of David Henderson, M.P., of Acton, yesterday. She was shaking a small rug or mat from the balcony of her home when she lost her balance and fell to the ground below, and died in a few minutes.

Mrs. Henderson was in her 72rd year and highly esteemed. She and her husband have lived in Acton for many years.

London's Lights Grow Dimmer; Aspect Like 100 Years Ago

New Electric Lights Have Blue-Black Glass That Makes Reading Impossible, but Hides City from Zeppelins—Coster Tells of Trip to Church.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Nov.

The "Lights o' London" diminish more and more each night, and the yellow glare which usually floods the skies above the metropolis has practically disappeared. Night life is going. Restaurants and public houses are closing at ten o'clock; and before many more weeks have passed they may shut down at nine. Theatres can hardly pay expenses, and some of them are giving only two evening performances a week, and matinees every day.

Sir Herbert Tree, the chief of the profession, declaring the situation hopeless, "Life in London has undergone a great change owing to this war, and the darkening of the city. The terror of the night has become a reality, and I believe that people much prefer to stay at home instead of venturing into the density of blackness that London streets present under the new regulations. Traffic also is a difficult matter, and people who wish to go to the theatre are favoring the matinee performances more. So I think the six matinees a week will meet the want better for the present."

But Londoners on the whole are accepting the altered conditions with resignation knowing that there is safety in the darkness. They have become used to the searchlights. In fact, trips to the centres, where the brilliant beams search and stab the surrounding blackness are becoming a part of their evening rambles.

Lights Are Becoming Dimmer.

The lights in tramcars and autobuses are also becoming dimmer. Recently the tramcars travelled with every blind drawn, and they crawled across the bridges in total darkness. Now new electric lamps have been installed on the cars. They have a bluish-black glass, and the city workers returning home to the suburbs are unable to read their evening papers. They just sit and think of air attacks, and a phase of "tube stare" has developed in the semi-darkness, as there is nothing else to do.

It is in the market places, however, where the stalls abound, that the change is most notable. Here the gas and oil flares have been prohibited, and the costers do business under very incongruous conditions. But you never hear a grumble.

Take a walk around the busy thoroughfares of North London, where the wives of the working class do their shopping, and you will find the coster and his donah the cheeriest mortals in all London. The London coster reads his papers. He knows as well as any one what the "dousing" of London's "glim" is for, and is quite prepared for a raid of German airships, though he has little belief in much harm coming from it.

Business is bad with him, but he grants it might be worse.

The Costers Trip to Church.

"Ho!" said one to whom I stood and chatted, "but we've got much to be thankful for. Say, guv'nor, d'ye ever go to church? I was there last Sunday. Oh, yuss I was!—as if it was a most incredible circumstance—quite a red letter day to his life. "Me an' the missus went. Ye see it was 'arvest fankagivin', and me and the missus was just curious like to hear what the vicar 'ad got ter say by way ov fankagivin'. 'Fankagivin'! Fer w'at?

"But it was a bivov all right, it was.

"The Vicar, 'e sez—I cawn't just tell you 'ow splendidly 'e put it. But 'e sez, sez 'e, there was much to be thankful for. Just fink, 'e sez, of our brave Tommies 'oo are fightin' for us an cawn't, wipin' up them cowardly, bullyin' Germans, 'e sez—I didn't just call 'em that. That's a bit of my own, but you could tell from w'at 'e said that 'e meant it all the same.

"And there they are, fightin' for us. Not fresh meat, no fine sweet vegetables as I'm a sellin' 'ere, sir.

"And then there's our navy, 'e sez, an' our sylors, Gawd bless'm, keepin' the seas clear for our ships to bring us our provisions and keepin' dahn prices like, so that it don't come 'ard on us pore blokes, 'e sez.

"An' I sez to the missus, 'Gawd, but the Vicar's right.'

"An' then there's the splendid 'arvest we've 'ad, which all goes to 'elp a bit, an' tykin' everyfing altogether, ain't we got much to be fankful for?

"Just Goin' a Bit Too Fawst."

"An' then, sez 'e, sez, guvnor, 'e made us all up, the Vicar did—we are goin' right in fightin the Germans, 'e sez. But then, 'e sez, may be it's just a bit of judgment on us, too. May be we've just been goin' a bit too fawst ourselves—I can just guess a bit what the Vicar was drivin' at. 'E meant we was just gettin' a bit too fresh, guvn'r, an' tykin' too much for grawnted like, ye see. Oh, we were goin' on, all right, but we just wanted tykin' dahn a peg or two. An' though we win this war—an' we're goin' to win, orl right—we'll just perhaps tyke it to heart a bit an' not forget that we cawn't get on without the grace of God.

"I'm not a rerligus man, guvnor, an' never was, but the Vicar was right, an' my missus, 'oo's a bit more eddicated than me, agrees wiv 'im; an' she's a knowin' one is my missus, bless 'er heart.

"An look at the Kaiser. 'E's gettin' it in the neck all right, because 'e got the swelled 'ead, and thought 'e was goin' to rule the world. That wasn't just w'at the Vicar said, but it was in 'is mind, ye could see. Rulin' the world's Gawd's business, not the Kaiser's, sez 'e. An' the missus an' me's goin back fer more fankagivin's nex' Sunday."

Like a Hundred Years Ago.

And I passed down the thoroughfare, where amid the relics of the days previous to gas and electricity, which had been unearthed, shining their fitful and smoky gleams with varied success, the costers, with raucous cry, invited their customers to "Buy, buy, buy!" Here was one, more enterprising than many, who had obtained two end lamps from an old horse tramcar. Another old man, a key cutter, was the proud possessor of a railway guard's lamp, changing the color according to his mood. At one time he grated away with his file on a key under a red glare, giving him a most demoniacal aspect. Then he would switch on the green. It was a better advertisement than any of the big electric signs in the West End, now put out by the War Office.

But it was candles, mostly candles, all the way, candles sputtering and blowing out at the slightest whiff of wind. It was as if old Father Time had put London's clock back a hundred years; as if, agreeing with the coster's vicar, we had been going too fast, and wanted pulling back a bit.

GUNS OF FRANCE BUILT WITH CARE

A city of bustling factories, throbbing mills and whirring machinery, from whose multitudinous chimneys rise clouds of smoke by day and showers of sparks by night; where furnaces glow and toiling pigmies wrestle with ponderous masses of molten metal, where scolding switch engines are continually hurrying about, dragging hundreds of cars over a huge network of rails—this is Le Creusot, where the world-famed guns of the French artillery are manufactured by the firm of Schneider & Co.

Le Creusot is situated in the department of Saone et Loire, in the heart of one of France's richest coal and iron districts. The Schneider works cover 76 acres of ground, while the buildings extend for a stretch of two and a quarter miles. One hundred and ninety-two miles of railway connect the various buildings with one another and with the coal mines and supplementary establishments of the company situated in the surrounding towns of Montchanin-les-Mines, Maseray and other places.

RUSSIANS LOOK FOR WINTER AS ALLY AGAINST THE GERMANS

"Battle of Poland" Is Title Given to the Great Struggle in Which the Germans Have Been Routed by Their Foes—Von Hindenburg Has Soldiers Shot for Minor Infractions.

(Special Dispatch.)

PETROGRAD, Nov.

By the time this reaches you the "Polskaja Bitva," or "Battle of Poland," will be raging, if it has not been fought to a finish. It is the military expert Iszhogin who has named it the Battle of Poland, as he truly says that "modern battles are too vast to be called after hills, plains, mountain passes or rivers." According to estimates made here, there are spread out on a line stretching from Tilsit to the San River about two million three hundred thousand Germans and Austrians, opposed to which, mainly concentrated in the fortress region north of Warsaw and along the Vistula, south, may be two million seven hundred and fifty thousand Russians.

The Russian aim is to resume the invasion of East and West Prussia, terminated by the unfortunate Samsonoff affair at the end of August, while the Germans, who are supposed to be in tremendous force along the Vistula, will be contained, and, if possible, driven back. Such a plan would turn the German left.

Indeed by what we hear here, the German plan is to hold the Northern Russian advance and to force the Vistula, occupy Warsaw, march on Ivangorod and threaten the Russians in Galicia. People here are confident that this plan will fail. It means quick movement, and quick movement is impossible in autumn; impossible at any time in any part of the Russian Empire for the tremendous German guns which are now being used in the field.

Russia Changes Plans.

According to the views of Russian staff officers this scheme of battle represents radically changed plans. The Germans entirely changed their scheme after the fall of Lemberg. This was in part as the result of a change of Russian plans. The best experts here assume that—the first Russian purpose was merely to hold back from Warsaw the forces of Generals Auffenberg and Dankl, in South Poland, and not to invade Galicia. The original plan assumed that owing to the tremendous German concentration in Belgium and France, Russia could hold the Austrians on the South, repulse the small German forces which were to make a fight on Warsaw from the East Prussian salient, and yet have enough men to march via Breslau and Posen on Berlin. The retreat from East Prussia spoiled this.

Instead Russia concentrated more troops in South Poland and made as her aim the subjugating of Galicia. This, Cracow accepted, she accomplished in the month long battles known as Lublin-Krasnik—where at first Auffenberg had a success—and Lemberg. The shattered Austrian army which retreated on Lemberg would have been destroyed and probably Budapest occupied if Germany had not come to the rescue. Germany did come. That explains the terrific concentration of German troops in the Wartne and Oder valleys and the march on the Vistula southeast of Warsaw.

The Grand Duke's army on the Vistula is in close touch with its base of supplies. But even German preparedness may fail before the task of supplying an advancing army in marshy Poland without railway rolling stock, without good roads for motor traffic, in a country in which the natural cart transport is the worst in Europe.

That Germany has sent her very best generals to the scene, including the able and reckless Hindenburg, is taken by Russia as a compliment, and Russia has returned Germany's compliment by sending to the scene of probably the toughest fighting, the brilliant and subtle Russky. I have not seen him since the Manchurian campaign, but I remember Lieutenant Colonel Russky, as he was then, as a brisk, thick set man, with a "German" face and Tartar eyes. He insisted on playing tennis and reading a book at the same time. Brother officers chaffed him.

Russky's picture is in every shop. Marvellous tales are told of his courage and skill. The "learned private" has a snuff colored automobile, which lost one wheel from an Austrian shell. Now it has a new wheel with a yellow tire. The soldiers almost weep with joyful emotion when they see the yellow tire. Skobeleff's white horse was not more famous.

Russky is not loved by his staff, though he is adored by the rank and file. His staff are brainy men, but they hold the modern notion that a staff general should stay well in the rear, where his maps will not be set on fire by enemy's shells. Russky disagrees. He draws up his ordre de battaille, rolls up his maps, seldom unrolls them, and when his battle is in progress tours the field in his yellow tired automobile. This explains the broken wheel.

Just such a tough fighter and ubiquitous—is Von Beneckendorff and Von Hindenburg, who seem to be in command of, or chief of staff of, the German forces south of Warsaw, from the Vistula to the Bzu. Formerly he was in East Prussia. Wounded Lieutenant Rennenkampff, who was captured by Hindenburg at Passenheim, and released with a message to General Rennenkampff, says that Hindenburg is a terrible disciplinarian. He had two men shot for slight offences. He issued an order to his grumbling troops with the passage:—"If I did not have these two men shot I should bring conditions on my army which would get two thousand men shot—by the enemy."

Von Hindenburg's Methods.

Von Hindenburg is supposed to have drawn up the plan of separating Warsaw and the northern fortresses from Ivangorod and the southern Austro-German army. He is a great railway—and motor—transport general, who is reputed to do wonderful things in moving troops. In the Armageddon now impending on the left bank of the Vistula his chance to put his talent in force will be small.

People here rely on the Polish defensive line holding out until the winter. Even if the Russian attack on the Germans left by Russky and Rennenkampff does not succeed, the resistance of the Russian centre and left would check the German plan, which aims at occupying Warsaw, raising the siege of Przemysl and regaining Lemberg. Once winter comes the Russians ought to foil the Germans. Every one here says that for unaccustomed men the relatively mild winter of Poland is more trying than the cold winter of the inner governments.

Around Moscow snow falls early and stays on the ground and there is practically continuous hard frost. This, Napoleon learned, means bad marching but excellent camping. In Manchuria the Russians lived comfortably and warmly in dug outs in the dry snow. The Vistula winter means some snow, hard frosts with interruptions, and plenty of rain. This is more tolerable for the Russians, who occupy Warsaw, Ivangorod, Lublin and the fortress towns to the north, than for the German invaders, who will be mostly in the open. The wet weather means disease for both. The Russians can stand this less better than the Germans.

However, people here hope that the German attack in South Poland will be repulsed and that the counter attack in the north—if such, indeed, is the plan—will succeed. The nation wants a big victory, as only a big victory will make possible the resumption of the march on Berlin, interrupted by the unlucky East Prussia battle.

Not for Him.

German Raids on High Sea Are Arousing British

Writer on Naval Affairs Says Captures by the Karlsruhe and the Emden Are Offset by Superiority in Trade Channels.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Nov.

The haul of prizes made by the German cruiser Karlsruhe in the Atlantic, following those made by the Emden in Indian waters, has awakened the business community to the fact that a mere handful of these raiders, even if they have no ports of their own and have to roam the seas in constant dread of capture or destruction, can make themselves very disagreeable. On the whole, however, the loss of a few cargoes is accepted philosophically by the underwriters. After all, even a dozen merchant ships such as the Karlsruhe accounted for bein but a very small proportion to the great volume of shipping which goes on its way unmolested owing to the superiority of the allied fleets over those of Germany and Austria.

An important factor in the problem is speed. A comparison of the light cruisers which Germany has at present in the outer seas with those of the British navy will reveal the fact that they are as fast as most of the latter and a good bit faster than some. The Karlsruhe, for instance, was designed for twenty-seven knots and was laid down in 1911. The British cruisers begun in that year were designed for twenty-five knots only. Gun power and certain other elements of battle worthiness were given pride of place in the British vessels, so that, while they are much stronger in offensive powers and probably able to stand up much better against an enemy's gun fire, they lack some of the mobility which has served the German raiders so well.

Aided by Wireless.

Obviously the naval designer cannot indulge the wishes of all schools of naval thought, and it may be taken for granted that in allowing gun power an extra large amount of weight in the compromise which has always to be struck when a war ship is planned the British authorities had good reason for their action.

The German commerce raiders, however, do not benefit by their turn of speed alone over the French and British vessels in chase of them. Indeed, by this time, without any docking facilities to make use of, their speeds must be considerably reduced by the foulness of their bottoms and may be little, if anything, more than those of their pursuers. That they have not been captured or sunk in three months of warfare shows that their commanders know how to take advantage of the great size of the oceans in which they are at large. So wide is the expanse of the waters in which they have been operating that the search for them may very well be likened to the proverbial one of seeking a needle in a bundle of hay. It is not at all certain that were the number of cruisers in chase of the raiders doubled they would be any more successful at first in tracking their quarry.

In addition to the large area of the seas the German captains have a great advantage in their wireless installations, which, there can be no doubt, provide them with information through agents all over the world. With a secret service system whose ramifications can never seem to be fully grasped, Germany is well equipped for a naval war like the present, and in the manner these raiders have kept their end up this system has shown to advantage.

That the raiders have been getting information regarding the movements not only of the war ships in chase of them, but of the merchantmen upon which they have pounced with such a dramatic effect, there can be no doubt. Each capture they make, of course, gives them a new lease of life, since they can help themselves to what fuel or provisions they need from their captive and then sink her.

The number and distribution of the Franco-British cruisers protecting the trade routes is necessarily confidential. The proportion, however, is known to be about four or five to every one of the German cruisers. It must be remembered, however, that these squadrons have had other work to discharge lately besides keeping a lookout for the commerce destroyers. Some have been engaged in combined naval and military expeditions against the enemy's overseas possessions, like the Cameroons and the islands in the Pacific. Many others have been engaged in convoying transports bringing the military reinforcements from the colonies and India to the main theatre of war in Europe. The many thousands of troops thus moved across all the seas of the world will give an idea of the large number of ships required for their passage, a number which has run into three figures, and these transport fleets could not be left without adequate protection. That not a man or horse or gun has been lost in the process goes to show that the navies of the Allies have attended well enough to this important business, even at the expense of lessening, perhaps, their watch upon the raiders.

FORESEE A CAGE FOR THE KAISER

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Nov.

How the Russian peasant views the war and his quaint views on the ultimate fate of aKiser Wilhelm II. are narrated by a Russian landed proprietor, writing from the eastern shore of Lake Ladoga, not far from Petrograd.

Ivan Ivanovitch, he says, takes everything philosophically, whether it be a bad harvest or a devastating war. The one comes of God, the other of the ambitions of men, but he views them with the same resignation and opposed to them his overpowering sense of duty.

Ivan is a simple soul. There is something elemental in his temperament in the fortitude with which he bears ills that are unknown to the people of the West. On the shores of the stormy Ladoga, now dim in the autumn sun, soon to be clad in its winter skin of ice, the village peasant views the shock of battle with equanimity. The legions of the Kaiser threaten his peace in vain. He trusts in God and strives to do the right. He will defend his country to the last gasp. The German War Lord knew not what forces he was arousing when he pushed Austria forward to attack the little Slav State to the southwest and tried for the second time to overawe his powerful Eastern neighbor.

The Russian peasants are all certain that this war will be long and difficult, and they are prepared to face calamity and victory with equal composure, bearing every misfortune with Slavonic coolness, and calmly waiting for the glorious end. For Ivan feels in his inmost heart that the only finale suited to the mighty overture which is being played on land and sea is a triumphant victory post that will fling through the ages. The only matter that would shock the vast mass of the Russian population would be a fleeting one—a premature end of the war.

They say, "We know the enemy, it seems and that he must be struck again and again. The newspapers are pleased when we have a so-called victory—when we take 30,000 prisoners. But what is this among 5,000,000 foes? Six per 1,000. What nonsense!" Ivan is thinking just now of Russia's 120,000,000 people.

As a rule, the Russian peasants are not superstitious. But they are profoundly credulous where religion is concerned.

Curious statements are made in the remote villages concerning the future of peace, and they are mostly of a kind to delight the vast majority of the subjects of the Tsar.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

BIANCA MICELE

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

An officer of the carabineers—the government police of Italy—entered a prison in Naples, was admitted to a corridor and stopped at a cell where he could see a girl through the bars. He stood looking at her with a curious expression on his face, the expression of one who would gaze upon a beautiful leopard in a cage. She was a peasant, but endowed with a beauty that a highborn dame might envy. She returned his gaze as one would look upon a captor—with hate, mingled with the knowledge that she was powerless to gratify it.

"Well," he said, "you see what crime has brought you to. You are a woman, and the government dislikes to inflict on you the punishment of a man. I have told the public prosecutor that if he will spare you, let you go free, you will return to the mountains and lead an orderly life; that you will disband your troop and advise them to live honestly hereafter."

As he proceeded the girl's expression changed to one that he did not understand, for he was infatuated with her. He had been sent to capture a troop of bandits who were pouncing on persons, whom they held for ransom, and had found a girl in command. He had succeeded in trapping her and a few of her band and brought them to Rome.

"I will not trouble the police again and will advise my men not to do so. It is not the prosecutor that pardons me of his own accord. You have saved my life," she said.

"The only recompense I wish is to see you a good girl."

Lieutenant Morini the next day came again to the jail with a pardon for Bianca Micele, took her out of prison and proceeded with her by rail to Castellamare, thence up the steep heights behind it till he reached the summit. On reaching a certain point she gave a "coo-hoo" and a couple of men sprang from behind rocks and advanced toward her and her conductor.

"Take this man," she said, "into the ravine and give him the stiletto."

The two men drew back. Morini was in uniform, and they hesitated at murdering one of the carabineers simply to gratify their leader, well knowing that for doing so they would be hunted to the death.

"Signorina," said one of them, "why do you wish to put him out of the way?"

"Well, since you don't wish it, send him down again. But you are wrong. He will return with a force strong enough to take us, and our lives will pay for such folly."

The two bandits consulted in an undertone. Then the one who had spoken said:

"We will obey you if you command us to do this, but we do not advise it."

"Send him away," said Bianca.

Morini, who had expected death, lost no time in descending from the heights. But no sooner had he reached a safe distance than he proved the truth of the girl's words by resolving that he would never rest till he had got her again in his power and punished her for her treachery and more especially for her ingratitude. This she divined when she consented that he should go free.

The police soon heard of more depredations on the part of the band whom Bianca was to advise to change their occupation, and it was reported that she was still at their head. Morini was laughed at by his companions and was impatient to get revenge on the woman who had not only spurned but ridiculed him. He went himself in disguise to reconnoiter the position occupied by the band, then took a sufficient number of carabineers to surround their camp. But he failed to surprise them and was obliged to fight in order to get them into his possession.

Morini was with a party of his men who attacked a rude fort the bandits had thrown up across the mouth of a pocket. Failing to pick off his enemies in sufficient numbers, he determined to carry the work by assault. As he stood on it, about to leap down into it, a man put the muzzle of his gun to the lieutenant's breast. But the ball went over his shoulder, for Bianca, who was there, knocked the gun up with her own piece.

That was the end of the matter, every person belonging to the band being captured, with their girl leader, and all being taken to Naples.

"Well, lieutenant," said his commander, "so you have captured that little devil. I presume that now you are satisfied to let justice take its course."

"As to that I am in a worse fix than before."

"Why?"

"Had it not been for the little devil I would not now be here. One of her men fired at me with the muzzle of his gun close against my breast. She knocked his gun up, and the bullet, instead of going into my heart, grazed my ear."

The officer laughed, but secretly he was pleased. He had no stomach for shooting a woman, and this afforded him an excuse. The band were kept for months without any definite action of the government: then they were released on condition that they leave Italy.

As to Bianca, she is now Signora Morini.

But stranger things than that have happened in love.

PEACE IS IMMORAL SAYS APOSTLE OF WAR

"Love Thy Neighbor" Does Not Mean Love the Man Across the Border, According to This Teaching

Is war better than peace?
Is war a blessing?

It is, according to Gen. Frederich von Bernhardi of the German army, whose book, published before the outbreak of the present war, has been translated into English and is causing an immense amount of discussion wherever it is read.

Gen. von Bernhardi's views represent the views of the ruling class of his native country.

Herewith are given quotations from this amazing work which, Gen. von Bernhardi says, he began to write after studying the future "Providence has set before the German people as the greatest civilized people known to history."

"War is terrible, but necessary," says Bernhardi, "for they save the state from social petrification and stagnation. It is well that the transitoriness of the goods of this world is not only preached, but is learned by experience. War alone teaches this lesson.

"War, in opposition to peace, does more to arouse national life and to expand national power than any other means known to history. It certainly brings much material and mental distress in its train, but at the same time it evokes the noblest activities of the human nature."

Again he writes: "Efforts to secure peace are extraordinarily detrimental to the national health so soon as they influence politics. The states which from various considerations are always active in this direction are sapping the roots of their own strength."

Like his imperial master, Bernhardi must revert to the Bible for justification. He declares: "Christian morality is based, indeed, on the law of love. Love God above all things, and thy neighbor as thyself.' This law can claim no significance for the relations of one country to another, since its application to politics would lead to a conflict of duties. The love which a man showed to another 'ry as much would imply a want of love for his own countrymen. Such a system of politics must inevitably lead men astray. Christian morality in personal and social, and in its nature cannot be political, in order to strengthen him to work unselfishly in the interests of the community. It tells us to love our individual enemies, but does not remove the conception of enmity."

"If we sum up our arguments," he concludes, "we shall see that, from the most opposite aspects, the efforts directed toward the abolition of war must not only be termed foolish, but absolutely immoral, and must be stigmatised as unworthy of the human race.

"Every means must, therefore, be employed to oppose these visionary schemes. They must be publicly denounced as what they really are—as an unhealthy and feeble Utopia, or a cloak for political machinations. Our people (the Germans) must learn to see that the maintenance of peace never can or may be the goal of a policy. The inevitableness, the idealism, and the blessing of war, as an indispensable and stimulating law of development, must be repeatedly emphasised."

WOULD FIGHT FOR BRITAIN

Many Subjects of Austria Anxious to Take Field Against Her

The Bohemians, Czechs, and other non-German subjects of the Austro-Hungarian empire resident in London have formed themselves into a society, and many of them offered their services to the British government.

They recognize that, as they are the subjects of an enemy power, the British government has no other course than to treat them as technically hostile aliens. But, being strongly pro-British in sentiment, they are grieved that Bohemian and Czech prisoners in England have to be treated as Germans and Austrians. They desire, not only the victory of Britain, but to serve in the ranks of its army.

When it was pointed out to some of their representatives that if they fought on the British side they would, if captured, be shot as traitors, the confident reply was:

"We have thought of that. We shall take precautions never to be captured alive."

Under No Delusion

SECRETS OF SHIPYARDS

Great Precautions Taken Both With Employes and Visitors

Every shipyard that builds for the British Navy must take great precautions that none of the secrets entrusted to its care shall leak out. Detectives watch all visitors and keep the workmen under observation also. Plain-clothes officers guard every entrance, and nobody is allowed to bring in even a small parcel unless it is first examined for fear that it may conceal a camera. At one of the big construction yards one man in every two dozen is thoroughly searched from head to foot each night on leaving. All the draughtsmen engaged on the drawings of a new warship are sworn to secrecy, and the plans are invariably kept under lock and key when not in use.

These precautions have brought many suspicious circumstances to light. One night when a new cruiser was about to undergo her trials two men crept aboard as she lay at anchor. They were captured and handed over to the police. Shortly afterwards, on the day of her trial, the chief engineer thought it would be advisable to have another look at the interior of the turbines before steaming, to make certain that no rubbish had got inside to injure the delicate turbine blades. But worse than rubbish was found. When the turbines were opened two heavy steel chisels were discovered inside. If the machinery had been started the damage would have taken months to repair.

IN CANADA'S LARGEST ORCHARD

Where is the largest orchard in Canada?

In the matter of number of trees actually planted, its ownership may be a matter of dispute. It has been well settled, however, that the orchard of Mr. Gibson, of Newcastle, Ont., must come first when the area already in bearing is considered. There are now 65 acres of bearing orchard on the Gibson farm, and altogether 100 acres have been planted to tree fruits.

A few weeks ago an editor of Farm and Dairy called in on Mr. Gibson for a few minutes. Of course, our conversation was mainly along the line of apple marketing, and we inquired for the success of their co-operative society. "Our society," said Mr. Gibson, "is small in point of numbers, though fairly large in point of output. There are only seven members actually listed in the society. This year, however, we were helping our neighbors who are not in the society and who have not been able to sell their apples at all through buyers. Altogether we will handle about 19,000 barrels of fruit."

Before leaving we took a trip through the orchards. Everywhere the trees were laden with well-grown fruit that would grade a very high proportion of No. 1's. Mr. Gibson directed our attention particularly to two rows of apples on which the district representative, Mr. R. S. Duncan, had conducted a spraying experiment. On one of the rows Bordeaux mixture was used for the summer spraying and on the other lime sulphur. There was nothing to choose between the results of these two mixtures this summer. In average years, however, Mr. Gibson is inclined to favor concentrated lime-sulphur for the first or dormant spraying and Bordeaux mixture for late sprayings. The Bordeaux he regards as the better fungicide.

Thinning, the operation most recently introduced in Canadian orchards, was practised quite extensively in the Gibson orchards this year, and this accounted in no small measure for the high proportion of No. 1 fruit on the trees we inspected. Mr. Gibson summed up the results of his experience in thinning in his characteristically concise form.

"Yes," he said, "it pays."

The section in which Mr. Gibson's orchards are located is one of the finest fruit growing sections of Ontario. We were informed that in the orchard competition conducted from Ottawa, three out of the five prizes offered in the Lake Ontario district were captured by members of the local cooperative association, and four of the prizes were left in the immediate vicinity.

Turks Assisted By Persians?

LONDON, Nov. 21. — Little news regarding the fighting in trans-Caucasia has reached the outside world. The Turkish War Offices announces that the fighting is progressing favorably. The Turkish troops, it is said, have been reinforced by Persian tribesmen.

Weak Heart

Many people suffer from weak hearts. They may experience shortness of breath on exertion, pain over the heart, or dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals or their eyes become blurred, the heart is not sufficiently strong to pump blood to the extremities, and they have cold hands and feet, or poor appetite because of weakened blood supply to the stomach. A heart tonic and alterative should be taken which has no bad after-effect. Such is which contains no dangerous narcotics or alcohol.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

It helps the human system in the constant manufacture of rich, red blood. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements from the food, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, heart-burn and many uncomfortable symptoms, stops excessive tissue waste in convalescence from fevers; for the run-down, anaemic, thin-blooded people, the "Discovery" is refreshing and vitalizing.

In liquid or tablet form at most drug stores or send 50 one-cent stamps for trial box to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

PLANNING FOR CHRISTMAS

"Aunt Fanny," Peterboro Co., Ont.

Perhaps it seems amazingly early to be thinking of Christmas, but that really depends on what we are planning, for some gifts take a great deal of time to produce. Those which take the most time and yet represent a minimum amount of work are flowering plants and bulbs. Almost any of our friends would like to get a potted plant for Christmas, and when we add to that the value that comes with our having raised it ourselves, we surely have a most acceptable gift.

It is wise to confine our efforts to some hardy variety of bulb or plant rather than the more delicate. Such flowers as crocuses, tulips, daffodils, Chinese lilies, begonias, geraniums or ferns are hardy varieties. Chinese lilies are very easily grown and make a rapid growth. If started in October or early November they ought to be in bloom by Christmas. The best way to grow them is in a broad dish on a bed of pebbles, which is two or three inches deep and water to reach about half way up the bulbs. The dish should be in a dark place for a few weeks to aid root growth.

Geraniums, begonias or ferns make ideal gifts as potted plants and do not requir a great deal of attention.

Such gifts as these that require our personal attention and yet do not entail either much expense or labor, appeal to us as a labor of love and a demonstration of the real Christmas spirit.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS.

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N.B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat trouble, and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

Belgians Refuse to Work For German Conquerors

Resentment Against Germans Animates Persons Who Remain—Wife of Official Stays at Home That Her Six Children May See the Havoc Wrought by Invaders.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Mr. Edward A. Filene, of Boston, arrived here to-day, after a tour of three weeks in Belgium.

"The Belgians are overpowered, but not conquered," he said. "One of their foremost scholars, who ordinarily is a mild and benevolent man—I will not mention his name, to avoid embarrassment—said: 'History may give the Germans the victory in Belgium, but never honour.'

"All amusements are being given up. The public uses its Sundays and holidays in looking at the burned and ruined towns and villages which mark the German advance.

"The emotions of the people are kept fresh by these sights and by the constant passing from man to man of innumerable accounts of what are called German injustice and atrocity.

"The result is that, although food is very scarce and coal sells for $10 a ton, an impossible price for the poor, the Belgians prefer to be without work rather than work for the invaders, or even in ways which may indirectly help them.

"For instance, Brussels has no postal delivery," Mr. Filene went on, "because the letter-carriers refuse to work for the Germans, who have taken over the post office and are selling stamps with 'Belgium' printed upon them. There are some differences of opinion among the Belgians about the wisdom of refusing to labour. There are no differences about their willingness to make any sacrifice for their country, but with starvation threatening the larger part of the population, some Belgians feel, as they look at their women and children, that no further sacrifice in this direction ought to be made.

"The spirit of the people is shown by what the wife of one of the highest Belgian officials said to me. She remained in Brussels with her six children, after her husband's duty had obliged him to leave with the government.

"'Yes, we intended to take our children to Britain for safety,' said she, 'but when we remembered that they might hold important positions in our country and perhaps be influential in future leadership we did not want them to come to this work ignorant of what our people have undergone and suffered during this terrible war. They would not have known, because they would have spent all the period of the war in pleasant living in Britain. When we thought of this we felt with sinking hearts that we owed it to them and to their country to keep them here, although we knew then, and know now, that there is great danger.'

"This woman's palace is occupied by Germans, but she refused to leave with her children and is now living in some of the rooms of her home."

"OUR POOR"

"Only they would that we should remember the poor: the same which I also was forward to do." Gal. ii:10.

How like Paul these last few words were; Paul, so impetuous, whole-souled, eager to help and do! In the verse before we learn that James and John with Cephas, who as he said seemed to be pillars, had given him the right hand of fellowship, and had expressed the wish that he go unto the heathen. This did not arouse the same enthusiasm with him, as the suggestion in the above verse.

So much is implied in the word "only," which is peculiarly applicable now, in the dread times through which we are passing. Our hearts ache with pity and sorrow for those closely connected with the war; those lonely and sorrowful left behind; those wounded and dying on the field; those maimed and tortured through no fault of their own.

"Only" in our generous and responsive sympathy with those far away, we must not overlook the poor and suffering in our own land. This and the next winter will mean untold misery for many; some who have felt the pinch of poverty before, others who have never done so. A little boy was overhead saying to-day: "Daddy is only spare-man on the road now; I don't know how we are going to get along but I suppose we can manage somehow. It isn't as if he was put off altogether." This makes us think of all those that have been "put off," or are going to be.

Have you ever been to a rummage sale, where are all things of every description, which have been given, and then sold? If you have, you will never forget, when the doors are first opened the wild rush to the counters containing what each one needed most. At one we recall the greatest need seemed to be boots, as two young, ragged lads, who reached there first, literally threw themselves upon them to get the first choice of that varied assortment of all sizes and conditions. You would never forget the eager, anxious search through old overcoats and cast-off dresses. "That will make a dressing gown for my missus, and something else for little Johnnie," was one man's satisfied remark.

You would never forget some of all those faces, with such sad marks of sin, poverty, dirt, neglect. Many also bore brave traces of conquest, patience, resignation. It made one think of the needy everywhere.

Each of us must remember those who are our neighbors, or have some claim upon us, and do our utmost to help, wherever we know help is needed, and do it in as kindly and as brotherly a way as one would that others would do to us, if we also needed assistance.—I. H. N.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

Ontario will contribute 100,000 lbs. of evaporated apples to the British navy and make a similar contribution to the Belgian relief force. This contribution is valued at $12,000, and much of it will find its way into the pockets of Ontario apple growers. In addition to this patriotic gift abroad, the Ontario Department of Agriculture proposes to further relieve the apple growers in needy home centres, by donating the sum of $1,000 to the Salvation Army to be expended in purchasing and gathering apples from Ontario farmers for those in distress in Ontario's large centres.

Lambton Co., Ont., has held its first Fruit, Vegetable and Honey Show. The purpose of the show is not money making, but the education of the growers towards still more efficient crop production and distribution. District representative G. G. Bramhill, Mayor Pettypiece, of Forest, Dr. A. J. Grant, Petrolea, Mr. Geo. French, Sarnia, and Mr. G. G. Moncrieff, Petrolea, were the pioneers in organizing this show. The show was extended a day longer than at first planned, and the gate receipts for that day donated towards the Belgian Relief Fund.

In a letter to the Department of Agriculture, Mr. Prudhomme, secretary of the Belgian Relief Committee, states that there are 150 car loads of clothing and supplies contributed by Canadians for the Belgian refugees which the committee were unable to forward with its former contribution owing to lack of transportation facilities. Arrangements have been made for another steamer sailing this week.

FRENCH CAPTAIN PRAISES VALOUR OF FALLEN GERMANS

Kaiser's Troops Die With Faces to Foe, he Writes—Prayer Book Open in Slain Group.

"In one little corner six men had crawled to die together. One of them still held in his stiffened hand a postal card that I will send after the war is over to his family, that they may know at least that their son died a Christian death. It will be some small consolation to this Christian family.

"A little further on was another group of eight, who also apparently had gathered together to die. In the midst of the sprawling bodies a little prayer book was open at the prayer for the dying. Each German soldier carried one of these books containing prayers before battle, for the dead, and so on. One likes to think that these soldiers, our enemies, who have died in this manner, are not the same ones who massacred women, children and old men and despatched the wounded."

The above paragraphs are extracts from a letter written by a French captain of cavalry at the front to a friend in Paris, and published in the Figaro. In the letter the author describes with feeling his impressions as he came across the German dead who lay in windrows. They had been surprised first by French shell and then by French bayonets. He gave due credit to a brave enemy.

"I took advantage of a few hours of liberty," he says, "to go to the battlefield of the woods of ——, to the east of B——; I saw there the most touching spectacle of my life. The dead were so thick one could not count them, but one forgot that they were bodies in the vision of the high moral lesson of the scene. I have sent several of my officers there on a pilgrimage, that they may profit by it. The German dead lay there, more than six hundred of them, resting where death had surprised them.

DEAD FACED TO FRONT.

"Here a section that had been marching, bayonets fixed on their pieces; there a section who had died while they were on their knees, firing carefully; the officers at their posts, before or behind, as the case might be. Not an officer or man had turned to the rear. Nearly all these men were reservists. Here and there the dead of line regiments lay where they had fallen; the regularity of their alignment and intervals was most impressing.

"Passing along the German line I could see the effects of our 75m. cannon. Men entrenched in deep shelters had been torn out by the devastating shells. A little further to the rear, in the interior of the woods, long lines of dead men again. Our charging infantry had left their marks on these."

The writer then describes the post card he mentioned before, which was held in the hand of a dead soldier. "The card," he says, "was addressed to Landwermann Hubach, 1 kromp. Ersats battalion, regiment No. 142 Mulhenn 7 B. On the side reserved for correspondence was written:

"'Sunday afternoon, three o'clock.

Dear Brother, we are to-day at Rastatt with Fritz; a souvenir of the good God to you, for to-day is your birthday. Best wishes from our hearts. Your brother Fritz, your sister Gretchen.'

"On the back was a holy picture, representing the Saviour surrounded by the disciples at Emmaus with the printed quotation: 'But they constrained Him, saying, Stay with us, because it is toward evening, and the day is now far spent. Luke xxiv., 29.' And underneath in handwriting, 'The Lord says, Behold I am with you always, even to the end of time.'

INHABITANTS DRIVEN OFF.

"We are at present in garrison at R——, where officers, men and horses are well taken care of. I sleep every night in a real bed in a house whose owner has left. The village is three kilometres from the enemy's lines; all the inhabitants have been expelled, for spies had been found signalling at night to the enemy, and heavy bombardments caused. It was a harsh measure to drive out all these poor people, but it had to be done, and there again the innocents have had to pay for the guilty.

"This part of the battlefield is a veritable siege, and our infantry only advances very slowly, digging its way through the earth, as at Sebastopol, making from 200 to 300 metres a day.

"My squadron holds the supporting point of R——. That is the only service that cavalry can do here. We have become a new arm, 'fortress cavalry.' Our infantrymen play cards in the trenches a few metres from the enemy. The lines are so close at certain points that the soldiers throw hand grenades into the German trenches, twenty-five or thirty yards away, reminding one of the tales told by veterans of the Crimea.

"The plans of our general staff are good, for if we tried an open campaign and attack we would waste uselessly the lives of thousands of good men. The enemy has entrenched himself most formidably.

"Our men have adapted themselves admirably to the situation. Our troopers organize the defences of the villages with great spirit. They smash loopholes in walls, in houses, make barricades, cover windows with mattresses to shield them from shrapnel, and do it all in good humor. It is a change and it amuses them. Our moral and physical state is excellent.

"On our left is the unit commanded by Colonel Z——. It is a unit of reserve, but the name of its chief and his military valour have made it the equal of any of the regular line regiments. When one asks the men of this brigade who is their chief, they respond boldly and with disgust for your ignorance: 'Why, it is Colonel Z——!' It is astonishing how the prestige of a name will transform a troop and give it cohesion. This name is more than a flag. It is, for these colonial reservists, a gage of success, a talisman."

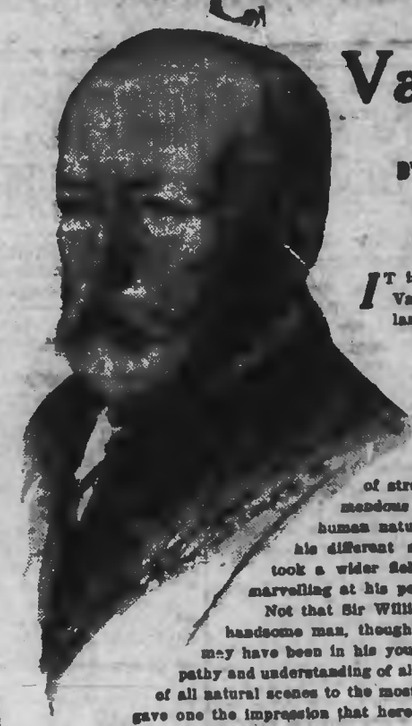
Van Horne

BY A FELLOW ARTIST



IT is hard to describe Sir William Van Horne in fairly moderate language. One finds superlatives cropping up all the time, for there is nothing average about this modern Leonardo da Vinci, this man of many parts, this universal genius.

My first impression of him was that of a man full of strength and kindness, with a tremendous tolerance and understanding of human nature. Then one after another of his different sides appeared as conversation took a wider field, and when I left him I was marvelling at his personality.

Not that Sir William was what one would call a handsome man, though it was hard to judge what he may have been in his youth. But his extraordinary sympathy and understanding of all things beautiful from the effect of all natural scenes to the most exquisite of man-made objects, gave one the impression that here was a man who knew.

The highly trained scholar and overcrammed college youth is not really an interesting person, his knowledge does not seem to make any others better, but the wide knowledge of a man of Sir William's experience given out through his magnetic personality must have had a tremendous effect on all with whom he came in contact.

I went first to see him in order to get his permission to make a sketch of him in black and white. I will admit I was just a little bit afraid that my errand would be fruitless for I was told Sir William was an "Empire Builder," and the man more or less responsible for the great Canadian Pacific Railway. I felt for a moment that I was going to meet the man who laid the rails from the Pacific to the Atlantic—who operated the trans-Pacific ships from Vancouver to the Orient, and the trans-Atlantic from the Maritime coast to the British Isles. It was a great joy when he came slowly into the big drawing-room with a genial smile and an apology on his lips for keeping me waiting—then I knew my request would be granted. His first words were, "Now what can I do for you?" And on my stating my request, he immediately replied in the affirmative with none of the "shilly-shallying" of lesser men who might wish to pretend that they are much too important to give up any time to such an unimportant person as an ambitious artist. He at once fixed a day and hour and it was with great delight that I started on the sketch in his own studio, a wonderful room full of curios and "objets d'arts" from all countries and of all ages. The inevitable cigar was in his mouth most of the time, but every now and again he would take it out and say, "You will tell me when I am to stop smoking, won't you? May I have another puff?" Being an artist he could understand how one felt and his chief idea was to make it as easy as possible for a fellow artist.

Without touching on personal experiences I may say that I have met some of the greatest men of the age, politicians, artists, explorers, musicians and writers; but among them all he stood out in strong relief. He was so essentially human and never was there the slightest hint of trying to show off his power and knowledge, a failing one sees often amongst the world's favourites. His love for his little grandson was one very noticeable trait in his character, and amongst his own paintings is one of a group of "Teddy Bears" on a good sized canvas, painted—so says the inscription, at the wish of "Little William."

His work, his different interest and talents are widely known and perhaps he is best described as "cosmic" for he seems to be made of all this earth's elements and spiritually in touch with all that makes for progress.

MARKET FRUIT CAREFULLY

W. G. Brierly

Only a little extra time and skill are required to market plums and apples properly. If they reach the market poorly graded, and bruised, or in dirty, broken packages, they cannot command good prices. Every farm paper advertises the clean, neat packages necessary to show fruits advantageously.

Pick with care. Don't wait for plums to soften or apples to become mealy. They should be well colored and large, but still firm. A soft plum will not stay up in the market and neither will the price. Fall apples may be picked when full size is reached without regard to color, or the color may be allowed to develop if desired, but the fruit must not be allowed to soften or drop if it is to be handled profitably.

Discard all bruised, stung, or misshapen plums and grade as No. 1 those of good color, and as No. 2 those inferior in coloring. Sort according to size so that every package is uniform throughout in size of plums which it contains. The same suggestions apply to apples, especial care being taken to discard those that are wormy, scabby, bruised or stung. Uniformity in color and size of fruit and size of package, combined with neatness and cleanliness of package, will add greatly to the market price of the fruit.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE 12,000 GERMANS

THE ADVANCE INTO POLAND IS CHECKED

ONLY A QUESTION OF HOW MANY ESCAPED

Russians Claim Fresh and Important Successes in a Battle Between the Vistula and Warthe Rivers—German Losses Said to be Enormous.

Examiner Special:

PETROGRAD, November 23. — It is now only a question of how many Germans succeeded in escaping, it is declared here to-day, in reports of fresh and important successes gained by the Russians between the Vistula and the Warthe Rivers. The battle which has been raging in contesting the German advances upon Warsaw has resulted in the forward movement being checked, it is asserted. The German losses are said to be enormous. At Kutno, 25 miles west of Lowicz, 12,000 German prisoners were taken. Another terrible battle is raging between Czenstochowo and Cracow.

The positon of the Russian troops continues satisfactory it was officially announced to-day. The official announcements are now largely non-committal, however, as to the operations, and it is accepted that when the result of the great battle now being waged is known, it will be of decisive importance. Continued success is claimed along the Czenstochow-Cracow line. In East Prussia conditions are much more favourable for the Russian success than in the first campaign into this German territory, it is stated here. The swamps and marshes which caused so much trouble in the first invasion, are now frozen, and bitter fighting is in progress in that district.

WASHINGTON, November 23.—The German Chilean situation is increasing in seriousness, and the diplomats here would not be surprised if a war declaration by Chile follows recent events. It is now ascertained that the Germans have maintained a floating naval station of coaling ships and supply ships just outside the harbour of Valparaiso.

SALISBURY PLAINS, November 23. — The Prime Minister, Asquith, accompanied by his daughter, paid an unofficial visit here on Sunday, and in the course of the afternoon he went over the whole four camps with the commander and conversed freely with several Canadian officers. He seemed to take particular interest in the arrangements made for social entertainment of the soldiers. The men soon recognized the Premier as he drove up in a motor and gave him a rousing welcome. He was greatly impressed with the appearance of the troops and spoke gratifyingly of their sturdy physique.

BASLE, Switzerland, November 23. — The Zeppelin factory at Friederichshafen, raided on Saturday by British aviators, has been turning out a giant dirigible every three weeks; this rate has been made constantly since the opening of the war, it is claimed. No greater hero has been developed by the war than Lieutenant Briggs, of the British Royal Naval Air Service, who was one of the aviators who tried to destroy the great Zeppelin sheds. A despatch received in London last night by way of Berlin and The Hague from Friedricshafen, states that Lieutenant Briggs with his shell pierced the gasoline tank, setting it on fire, and then volplaned across the sheds, dropping many bombs as he glided to earth, then with his pistol fought single handed until he was felled by head wounds. He is now in a German hospital.

PARIS, November 23. — A violent bombardment of Ypres, Soissons and Rheims by the Germans, is reported to-day in the official communique issued by the war office. The bombardment against Ypres yesterday was particularly hot; the Cathedral was damaged and many of the houses set on fire. Fierce fighting has been in progress in the Argonne district.

GUMBINNEN IS WON BY RUSSIANS

Eastern Prussian Town Captured After Terrific Struggle, Culminating a Five Days' Battle.

COSSACKS' BRAVERY

LONDON, Nov. 23.— The correspondent of the Telegraph in Petrograd reports the capture of Gumbinnen in north-eastern Prussia, by the Russians. He says: "The Russians captured Gumbinnen after a battle lasting five days, the Cossacks being the heroes of the most striking incident of the struggle, capturing the enemy's batteries by a daring charge, which put the gunners to flight. The Russians entered in triumph to discover the town half demolished by shell fire and abandoned by the population. Gumbinnen is sixty miles east south-east of Koenigsberg, and had a population of fifteen thousand.

Merchants of the City Will Form a Company of Home Guards

The wholesale, retail merchants and salesmen are invited to a meeting that will be held in the Y. M. C. A. this evening, for the purpose of forming a company of Home Guards. The meeting will be called to order at 8 o'clock sharp. It is the purpose of the promoters of this patriotic movement to contribute one of the strongest and best companies that have yet enrolled for the "third line of defence."

NEW LINE IS HALF WAY TO THIS CITY

Good progress is being made with the building of the new Grand Trunk line from Belleville to Lindsay. At the end of last week the laying of the new steel had progressed until the workmen were conducting operations between Hoard's and Campbellford. This means that the new line, to which local people have looked longingly forward to for years, has been brought nearly half way from Belleville to this city. It is probable that the 80-pound rails will be laid as far as this city about New Year's Day.

SACRED HEART CHURCH HAS MADE PROGRESS

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien visited the Church of the Sacred Heart yesterday for the celebration of the fifth anniversary of the foundation of the church. Pontifical high mass was sung at 10.30 in the morning and pontifical vespers in the evening. There was an extra mass at 7.30 a.m. The occasion was marked by a large number of the congregation receiving communion. His Lordship spoke briefly, congratulating the people upon the progress made during the year. The pastor, Rev. J. J. O'Brien, reported that the number of communions during the year had been 34,900, an increase of four thousand over the previous year. During the first year the number was 13,000. Father O'Brien pointed out that not only had the congregation grown in numbers, but the number of communions indicated the spiritual growth of the parish. Rev. Dr. Roche preached at the early masses on the gospel of the day, the last Sunday before Advent.

$1800 DAMAGE TO RESIDENCE OF W. H. BAKER

Owner Almost Succumbed to Chill After Fire Was Extinguished

NEIGHBOURS HELPED

Yesterday afternoon a fire broke out in the residence of Mr. W. H. Baker, Dublin Street, that took a good deal of labour on the part of the Fire Brigade and willing neighbours, to extinguish. The fire was first noticed at about twenty minutes after two o'clock, and it was not until half past four that it was extinguished. The damage by fire, water and smoke will amount to about $1,000.

Mr. Baker became aware of the conflagration about twenty minutes after two o'clock yesterday afternoon when he went to the cellar to attend to the furnace. He found one part of the ceiling ablaze and the cellar filled with smoke. At the time he thought that three cords of wood which were stored in the cellar were on fire, but later he found that they had not been touched.

Mr. Baker at once took steps to combat the blaze, while the neighbours and the fire brigade were called. The brigade arrived soon after, but it was found that the flames had spread between the double flooring of the first floor and up between the partitions to the second floor. Three lines of hose were at once attached and turned on the blaze downstairs while, to save damage by water, the blaze upstairs and between the partitions was attacked by chemicals. The house rapidly filled with smoke, making it very difficult to fight the flames. After much trouble and laborious effort the flames were extinguished about half past four o'clock. The bath room had to be litally "chopped to pieces" to allow the fire fighters to get at the flames, and several holes had to be chopped in the floor.

After the fire had been put out some of the brigade and helpers busied themselves in helping to get the water off the hardwood floors so they would not be ruined. In the cellar there was found to five feet of water, which had of course extinguished the furnace fire, and Mr. Baker, ex-Ald. J. G. Graham and Chief Howard went in bathing to try and locate the drain to let the water out of the cellar. In the cellar were stored potatoes, flour, wood and 12 tons of coal. It was found that the latter covered the mouth of the drain, so that the three men, in five feet of icy water, set about to unsover the drain. When nearly an hour had passed Mr. Baker took a severe chill, which proved so serious that in spite of the best attention for the next hour he very nearly succumbed to the effects of his immersion. The water was finally got out of the cellar through the efforts of the three men.

In talking to the Examiner to-day, Mr. Baker said that he was extremely grateful to Messrs. O'Connell, Graham, Knapman and Davidson, for their assistance at the time of the blaze and kindness since. He also expressed his appreciation of the efforts of the fire brigade.

Protests Against Minister of Militia Came From Other Bodies in Addition to The Toronto Press.

LEFT TO THE PREMIER

OTTAWA, Nov. 23.—There is reason to believe that the protests against the action of General Hughes, Minister of Militia, in connection with the test mobilization held in Toronto, are not by any means confined to the press, but that the government has received strong representations from such an influential bodies as the Conservative Association of Toronto and from individual government members. Just what effect these representations will have is not yet apparent. It is not believed that General Hughes has been reprimanded by the leader or his colleagues to a degree calculated to have any chastening effect. General Hughes, as evidenced by his remarks at Montreal, believes that he has nothing to retract, and has gone still further to justify his actions. It is stated on good authority that the question is one for the Prime Minister to decide, and that the other members of the Cabinet have washed their hands of it entirely.

ELEVATOR FULL; MORE GRAIN CAME

During the past few days and particularly yesterday, the freight traffic through this City, on the Grand Trunk Railway, has been very heavy. The grain elevators at Midland have now been full for some days, and a couple of vessels laden with grain, have since docked there. The grain is being unloaded and shipped as rapidly as possible to the East.

SOISSONS, YPRES AND RHEIMS ARE BOMBARDED

Official Communique Says That Much Damage Has Been Done at Ypres—Many Houses Were Set on Fire—Fierce Fighting in the Argonne District.

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, November 23. — The text of the official communique issued this (Monday) afternoon, was as follows:

"Yesterday was marked by violent artillery fire. The enemy directed his attention particularly to the town of Ypres, where the belfry of the Cathedral, the markets, and a number of the houses, were set on fire, and to Soissons and Rheims.

"In the Argonne district the day was characterized by some very hot fighting. The enemy delivered spirited attacks which were repulsed. In the Woevre and in the Vosges the situation is without change."

LONDON, November 23. — Percy J. Philip telegraphs to the Daily News, from "Northeastern France" as follows:

"The great bayonet charge by the Zouaves near Bixschoote, of which you have already heard, was a particularly grewsome affair, for the Zouaves, like the Gurkhas, love the joy of a hand to hand battle. And it came at the end of three days constant fighting.

"They charged a wood; an officer told me, like a gale of wind, not giving a cry until they got within touch; then they let out yell upon yell as they plied their bayonets among the dripping trees.

"The enemy were mostly first line men and met them like heroes, firing in volleys once or twice, then leaping out to the combat. The impetus of the Zouaves carried them through. They did not stop to kill. They dashed through the first time, killing only as they went, then they charged back on the broken lines.

"There were hand to hand struggles until ten o'clock that ended with both sides falling on the ground exhausted. Four of the Germans fighting together gave a terrible account of themselves before they died. Three of the four were, I think, brothers, and they were brave soldiers."

ATHENS, November 23.—Shops owned by Christians were sacked and three Christans killed by a large force of Turks at Trebizond, a message received here to-day from Constantinople declares..

Trebizond is a seaport of Asiatic Turkey, on the Black Sea.

READY TO SAIL

WASHINGTON, D.C., November 23.—General Fuston cabled the war department to-day that all his troops would be on transports ready to sail from Vera Cruz at noon for Galveston.

BERLIN, via The Hague, November 23. — The war office to-day continued to confine its statements as to the fighting in the east to brief announcements that General Von Hindenberg's army was still engaged, with no decisive results having yet been reached.

Stole Jewellery From Relative

Allowed to go on Suspended Sentence—Blacklisters in Court

In this morning's Police Court a girl was brought before Magistrate Dumble charged with stealing a gold bracelet, a broach and ring, to the value of $10. She pleaded guilty to the charge, and after a severe lecture by the Magistrate was allowed to go on suspended sentence. She is a domestic and was on a visit to a relative, when she took the jewellery. The stolen property was returned.

A local blacklister admitted his guilt and was fined $10. Another disputed the charge and his case was adjourned until Friday.

KEEPING THE PACE.

In one of the city churches last night a sermon was preached from th text "we faint not"—"Therefore seeing we have received this ministry we faint not." These are the words of St. Paul who declared at the closing crisis of his life—"I have fought a good fight; I have finished my course"; he fainted not; he strove to the end. The preacher pointed out that success is not achieved by one isolated brilliant dash, nor a single success, but by steady faithful perseverance. Herein is a lesson that needs to be taken to heart. Its spirit is found in the hey-note of great lives in all ages of the world's history. It is represented by the bull-dog tenacity that marks the British nation in this war crisis. Not one expeditionary force, but many; not one thousand millions of money but, but thousands of millions; not one impetuous dash, but a steady, tireless stress of action, the only thing that counts. From St. Paul, all through his writings, to Jean LaFontaine, with his fable of the tortoise and the hare, the lesson is impressed that unceasing, steady, earnest effort—to the end—is the price of winning—not spasmodic dash alternating with inaction.

We need to learn the lesson in Peterborough. Peterborough, it is regretfully to be said, is given to spasms; to what the racing people call "spurts." Like an ill-riden race horse, we, too often, set out at a brilliant pace, but even before we reach the quarter pole, we slacken speed and drop out of the race, exhausted—exhausted or not, we drop out. Last spring we made a splendid spurt in the matter of beautifying the city. It died a sudden death. The Board of Trade took on new blood and made a splendid spurt; it slackened and ceased. A little revival of effort was manifested in the interest of the Patriotic Fund. There wasn't much of a spurt, however; it consisted in placing lists in a few banks, with about as substantial results, as might have been expected; as might be expected from a police officer sending out invitations to criminals to give him an interview at the police station. We made a considerable spurt in organising a Patriotic Fund campaign. There was great enthusiasm for the moment; but it soon died out. About the only big thing that has got beyond the spurt stage is the Civilian Rifle Association; that is nobly keeping up the pace, and is setting a splendid example. If it keeps on; if the true and only conditions of success are maintained—steady, tireless effort—taking a moderate pace and keeping it to the goal—the Rifle Association will be something to be proud of—will become, what cannot be said of many other enterprises with great initial promise, a success and a real factor in our discharge of duty. Just at this time, we owe something to the Patriotic Fund; we cannot be regarded as having paid our dues. Other places have done better. Shall we not revise our attitude, and more earnestly recognize our responsibility? Shall we not persevere and "faint not"; but instead unite in a sustained effort to cancel by attainment, the slogan—

$20,000 FOR THE PATRIOTIC FUND!

AS TO HOME GUARDS.

The local branch of the Trades and Labour Council, has, according to the report furnished by the "official scribe," disapproved of the home guard movement, and declares that "Labour is against war." So say we all, but we are forced to do many things that do not meet with our approval. We are opposed to breaking a man's head, but if we catch a burglar's head coming through a window, we forget our abstract hostility to violence, and meet the situation with a blow sufficient to serve the purpose. Labour and we all, also, are opposed to war; opposed to the present war which has been thrust upon the world. We are in this war because we can't help it; and we must win it for the Allies and because its triumph on our side in the price of liberty. Everybody should be in it; not from love of war; but from love of peace.

Whom or what are we fighting? Not our fellowmen the German soldiers; but the organized devilry that has thrust them into the fight. We are fighting against the triumph of the cry of the German war lords—"World Power or Downfall." What would German "world power" mean to the world? What would it mean to Labour in Canada and Peterborough? It would mean slavery; it would mean universal militarism—it would mean the subjugation of the interests of Labour and all the interests of civilization to big war fleets and standing armies. It would mean, if Germany triumphs and gets "world power," that every working man in Canada would become a conscript liable for military duty; that the independence and freedom of action and opinion that now belong to every working man or other man in Peterborough, would be lost. German triumph and "world power" would mean wreck of manhood, peace, happiness, human liberty, and all that we associate with the highest civilization.

Labour is right in its opposition to war on principle. But in this war, which is not war but self-defence—Labour cannot be neutral if it would. Men who work have a share in the war, even if that share is only the blessed opportunity of pursuing their labours in peace and security through the efforts of the British and allied armies; through the efforts and sacrifices of their fellow-citizens and neighbours now under arms. If there ever was a righteous war, the present was as waged by Britain and the Empire, and her allies, is a righteous war. Nobody is exempt. Even the peaceful Quaker, whose religion is peace, whose creed forbids the taking of life, is in the war. Now the Quakers or Friends are in the fighting line—manning our ambulance corps on the fields of battle, succoring the wounded and helping heal men so that they can again take their place in the fighting line.

Labour is rightly opposed to war, but it can't escape it. Labour itself wages war. What is a strike, but war against attack by unjust capital or other injustice—against the rights of Labour. It is, however, like the present war on the part of Britain and the Empire, a righteous war, a struggle for rights. In these days what Labour most needs is a chance to work. It is for that principle; to give labour the world over a chance to work in peace, that we are fighting to-day. Every individual man who is worth the name will fight for his rights; will fight for his home; and the men who are in the fighting line in France are fighting for the dearest rights of every man, woman and child in peaceful Peterborough; fighting for the principle of the recognition of human rights; the only thing that can bring permanent peace. The surgeon inflicts pain to save life. We fight and slay for the sake of the good that will come of the triumph of right—that from the red welter of war carnage, may spring the olive branch of peace.

BIG DIVIDENDS.

"If blood be the price of the admiralty," as Kipling sang, the British certainly have no cause to complain when they balance the books. The advantages have been incalculable, and the cost in money and men has been small. What are a half dozen second-rate cruisers, or half a dozen dreadnoughts for that matter, in comparison with the military and commercial dividends that the navy has paid the empire within the last ten weeks? —New York Herald.

THE CALAIS BLUFF.

There is reason to believe that the Titanic attempt of the Germans to reach Calais is due to a desire to obtain a position that will enable them to secure favourable peace terms. It must be that the Kaiser believes that if he controls the French side of the Straits of Dover, he can compel the Allies to meet at least some of his terms, otherwise he would never have sacrificed the 100,000 men said to have fallen in the drive towards the Channel ports.

It is strange that the Germans, who have shown themselves so astute in other matters, should really think that Great Britain could be forced into a peace conference. If France, Russia, Belgium and Servia were to withdraw to-morrow, Great Britain would still carry on the fight until Germany was ready to beg for terms. If the German Emperor imagines that he can bluff the British into a compromise that will save Germany's face, his conception of British character and British motives is greatly at fault. Great Britain is in this affair to stay.

Already Germany has made tentative overtures for peace, one to Washington and one to the Czar. The Allies could have made but one answer, and should the Kaiser win to the Channel ports and then suggest a peace talk the answer will be the same—nothing but complete submission to the Allies' demands.—London Advertiser.

BRITAIN'S UNPREPAREDNESS.

The Montreal Star observes that had Lord Roberts' warnings been heeded about the need of conscription and a huge British army, the world might to-day be at peace, and the present great war would never have come.

This is all a matter of conjecture. No doubt it would have been better had Britain's army preparations been more complete. The tendency for centuries in Britain has been to limit the army to the minimum. This policy is probably mistaken in these modern times and would bear improvement.

But it is perhaps as well that Britain did not have, at all events, a huge army, all prepared to the last button, at a minute's notice, for a gigantic war. What would the world say of Britain to-day had she been armed to the teeth for an instant fierce strike, as Germany was? Would Britain get the credit for pacific policy and effort that the whole world, barring lying militarists of Germany, credit her with?

Britain is thought all the more of because she was not prepared as her enemy was, and whilst at the outset the war is apt to be costly for that reason, there is at least some compensation in her more complete vindication of aggressive intent. The finding of history will doubtless dwell largely on this consideration, coupled with the shifty, insincere behaviour of German diplomacy in the ante-war negotiations such as impressed even Germany's ally, Italy, as tainted by double-dealing. — Brantford Expositor.

SEEKING GOOD-WILL.

While German agents are doing their utmost to influence public opinion in the United States in favour of Germany, the people of the Republic are under the necessity of contributing millions of money and sending shiploads of food to succor the famished victims of German aggression in Belgium.

The Germans seek American goodwill at an unfavourable time. They come seeking the approval of a great neutral nation at the very time when it is charitably seeking to staunch the wounds of a small neutral nation almost done to death by the Germans. The American people are asked to give their good-will to the robber whose victim they are nursing back to life.

Belgium has been devastated. Towns and villages have been smashed flat to the ground. Six million people are homeless, the country swept bare of food. The people are literally starving. Yet Germany, according to her agents in the United States, has plenty of food everywhere, not only for the present but for a year to come. It is the Belgians that must starve. And their conquerors go on, wherever there is a town not plundered already, to tax its inhabitants, and seize their supplies. As to this Collier's Weekly says:

"While Belgium starves, Germany continues to grind war taxes from her smoking cities, violating all rules of civilized warfare. Germany's Consul-General in New York, Herr Horst Falcke, says in his kind way: 'Germany is doing its best to help the Belgians.' May God save the rest of the world from German 'help'!"

In that fervent prayer all may join. The German idea is that anything that forwards their ambitious for conquest is a right thing to do, no matter what the consequences may be to other people.

But they have a hard task ahead of them in earning any good-will of their own.—Toronto Star.

A PARTIZAN ATTACK ON SIR WILFRID LAURIER

An unfair and unprovoked attack on a distinguished Canadian appears in the Brockville Times of the 16th inst., wherein it is declared that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has not redeemed his pledge to appeal to the people of Canada to come to the assistance of the Mother Country in time of extreme peril. It is far from prudent to be led away by political partisanship at this critical juncture in the history of the Empire and the world, and that nothing but political partizanship was behind this charge we shall proceed to show.

The paper, under the caption, "A Promise Unfulfilled," quotes an utterance of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's in 1909 as follows:

"I would deem it my duty to devote what might be left of my life and energy to stump the country and endeavour to impress upon my fellow-countrymen—especially my compatriots of the Province of Quebec—the conviction that the salvation of England is the salvation of our country."

Then follows this amazing information:

"So far Sir Wilfrid has addressed one meeting in Montreal called for the purpose of forming a French-Canadian battalion for the front. That seems to be the extent of the fulfillment of this promise."

What are the facts? On August 19 Sir Wilfrid Laurier made a great speech in the House of Commons on the subject of the war that was published in every paper in Canada—unless we have to except the Brockville Times—and copiously cabled to Great Britain and France.

On September 10, and again on the 12th the Opposition leader spoke in Toronto, where he dwelt on the superiority of British institutions.

At Ottawa, Sir Wilfrid delivered an inspiring speech on the principles for which the British are fighting. This was on September 23rd before the Methodist Conference. In was in this speech that he referred to the German Emperor as an "Imperial bully."

On September 28th in the Russell Theatre, Ottawa, the ex-premier in an eloquent address on the war renewed his offer of undivided support to the Government in connection with the war. It was in this speech he said: "It's a long way to Tipperary but 30,000 Canadain boys are on their way and will arrive in due time."

It was on October 15 that Sir Wilfrid thrilled 20,000 people at Sohmer Park with appeals and reasons for participating in the war.

There may have been, and doubtless have been, other occasions, but we have mae it clear that the Brockville Times is adopting a 'mischievous course in perverting history in order to make an attack on a political adversary. The editor of the Island City journal is literally behind the times.—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

INDIANS' GIFT TO PATRIOTIC FUND

The patriotic spirit of the Indians of Western Canada is described in an interesting letter which Mr. W. R. Baker, secretary of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has received from a friend, and from which the following is an extract:

"Mr. Graham, Inspector of Indian Agencies for Southern Saskatchewan, has through his ability and energy done much to make the File Hills Indian Agency one of the most progressive in Canada. He initiated a colony upon which he placed and is still placing graduates from Indian Industrial Schools. This colony has been quite a successful venture, and the young Indians settled there are doing very well. Some grow as many as from eight to ten thousand bushels of grain per year and all (there are over thirty families) are practically out of debt. Well, the people being much alive to the war news, asked so many questions that Mr. Graham decided to hold a meeting on the colony, which was done. I was, much to my delight, in good enough shape to go with the party, and we travelled thither in beautifully decorated cars. I brought along a gramaphone and many patriotic records. We played the national airs of Great Britain, France and Russia, and "It's a long, long way to Tipperary" came in for a great deal of praise. Mr. Graham addressed them behind a table, upon which was spread the Union Jack, and explained the causes and progress of the war, lucidly and fully, also the work of the Patriotic Fund and Red Cross Society. A committee was at once formed and all of these young Indians quite voluntarily offered to sell so many bushels each of wheat and oats. They were most enthusiastic and gave cheer after cheer for the Kings of the different allied nations, our own beloved Sovereign coming in for very loud applause. A few days afterwards Mr. Graham received $300, the result of the sale of grain promised. The young Indian women at once took up Red Cross work—knitting, etc., in a very enthusiastic way. Two of the boys—Neck Moore and Ed. Swanson—have joined the Second Contingent. They are graduates of the Brandon Indian School, and are dead shots. Among the contributors of the collection to the Patriotic Fund, which amounted to $502.10, were Frank Dumont, a nephew of Gabriel Dumont, of Riel Rebellion fame, and his two sons."

WOMAN OF 100 DAUGHTER OF 80 FLEE FROM WAR

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Fleeing from Turkish Armenia to escape the rigors of war, Mrs. Tokany Stephaian, one hundred years old, and her daughter, Mrs. Hiranes Paklaian, eighty years old, were passengers on board the Roma, of the Fabre line, which arrived here yesterday from Mediterranean ports.

The mother, bent and feeble with the weight of years, had to be assisted from the Roma by two stewards. Her daughter walked down the gangplank as steadily and as erect as many passengers fifty years her junior. Heavy weather failed to make either of the women suffer, and as neither had ever been more than twenty miles away from the little Armenian hamlet in which they were born, the long voyage proved a kaleidoscope of revelations and delights for them. Relatives from Trenton, N.J., with whom they will make their home, met them at the pier

Adventures Of A Surgeon

Faulty German Medical Arrangements

Cold Pork For the Wounded

How the Germans requited the faithful service and devotion of a British Red Cross party in Belgium was described recently by Mr. Samuel Osborn, F.R.C.S., an eminent surgeon who has just come back from Bruges, where he had been conducting a Red Cross hospital. "I originally went out to Belgium," he said, "with three nurses, the Hon. Miss Colborne, Nurse Baines, and my daughter, Nurse Asborn, and three dressers from St. Thomas' Hospital.

"We went out to join the Belgian Red Cross, and at their suggestion we set out to Gembloux, where they told use we could be of use. Near Gembloux our motor cars were fired at, and on entering the city we found it in German occupation. After some discussion I was asked if I would mind looking after the German wounded. I agreed, and a beautiful villa, the Chateau Romaine, belonging to a M. Doera, was placed at my disposal as a hospital.

"I soon discovered that this hospital was right on the German lines of communications. About 170 wounded came in daily from the German field hospitals, where they had received only their first dressings, and after they had been attended to by us were sent on their way to Germany. The condition of these poor wretches was awful. The only food they were given was cold pork and black bread, hardly an ideal diet for an invalid, while their officers and their own doctors had white bread and eggs and occasionally a bottle of champagne when they went on their way.

"The German doctors absolutely declined to allow me to operate. Some obviously believed the stupid tales circulated among the troops to the effect that the English nurses were accustomed to pick out the eyes of the wounded in the hospitals during the night. However, I got my own way once when a man shot in the leg was brought in. The bullet was showing, and borrowing a razor I extracted it myself then and there before the man got to the operating room.

"It was in the hospital at Gembloux that I realized the difference betwen the Prussians and the other kind of Germans. I have no hesitation in pronouncing the Prussian to be a perfect beast, while I found the Hanaverians, some of whom had the word Gibraltar on their sleeves in memory of their service under the Georges of England, to be charming fellows.

Haphazard Surgery.

"I was not at all impressed by what I saw of the German medical organization. The wounded were brought down in all kinds of haphazard ways—by train, by motor, or in carts of al colours and fires. Many cases of fracture arived with the injured limb in plaster of Paris, put on in the field, with the result that the limb was swollen and inflamed from the compression and often in a highly dangerous state. In the case of one officer whose arm was in this condition I sent to the German surgeons to borrow a pair of pliers to remove the plaster, but my messenger was told that there were no pliers to spare. I was accordingly forced to use a corn razor! My experience at the hospital absolutely confirmed the statement that in the eyes of their officers the German privates are only so much 'cannon fodder.' Again and again I pleaded in vain with the German doctors to leave patients whom it would have been fatal to move, but whom the doctors nevertheless wished to send on to Germany to make way for fresh wounded. Sometimes the patients thus bundled out were men shot through the abdomen, who, notwithstanding their condition, were forced to walk to the railway station, or men with a temperature of 104.

"I saw one extraordinary case in my hospital at Gembloux. A private shot in the breast had had a box of cigarettes in his pocket. The bullet had entered the box lengthwise and traversed the length of one cigarette, bursting it all up, and had remained with its nose sticking out of the other end of the box. That bullet did not even scratch the man.

"After I had been ten days nursing and tending the German wounded I was sent for by the German commander of Gembloux. I took a young officer with me as interpreter.

"I was curtly told we could leave. I asked the commander if he would give orders for motor cars to take us back to Brussels. He replied insolently that he had no cars for us. 'Will you then please telegraph to the United States Minister at Brussels?' I said, 'and ask him to send a couple of cars to fetch us.' 'No,' said the commander. 'How, then, do you expect us to go?' I said. 'You can walk,' was the reply. 'That is the only conveyance I can offer you.'

"The man's manner was so studiedly offensive that the young officer apologized for his superior when we left. On our way back to the hospital we were overtaken by a messenger who told me the commander's orders were that we should leave Gembloux in a quarter of an hour, and that we were to go to the railway station.

More "Culture."

"I collected my party and our baggage. At the station we found a cattle truck waiting for us attached to a train bound for Liege. A loaf of black bread and a bottle of water were put in with us. It was characteristic of German manners that a number of officers whom we had nursed at the hospital, some of whom had actually lunched as our guests that very morning, passed us in our truck and took their places in the first-class carriages reserved for them without even offering the ladies of our party better accommodation than that offered to them by a commander.

"At Liege there was more browbeating. We were taken before the commander, whose name I don't know, but who I heard was a prince and who was certainly treated with extreme deference. He asked what we were doing at Liege, and when I told him we had been sent away from Gembloux, said he had no means of knowing that we were not spies. Thereupon I produced my passport, at the sight of which he went white with rage. An officer there subsequently explained that this was the effect of Sir Edward Grey's name on the pass . . . 'the most hated man in Germany.'

"Finally we were given a pass to Brussels. There was nothing for us to do at Brussels, for the Germans had suppressed the Belgian Red Cross and collared all its funds, so we went on to Bruges, where I took charge of a hospital for Belgian wounded at the English Convent. There we remained a little over a month, until, in fact, just as I was dressing a patient last Tuesday a bomb fell through the roof, announcing the approach of the Germans."

DASHING CHARGE BY SCOTS GREYS

PARIS, Nov. 21.— Back from the Flanders battlefield, a French soldier told to-day this story of how the gallant Scotts-Greys came to the rescue of a French 75-millimetre gun:

"There was a thick fog, which lifted later, and the objective of our troops was Haubourdin, or as near it along the banks of the Lys as we could get. Between Haubourdin and Loos the enemy had mounted four big guns, cannon which had impeded his march in Flanders, but which, once in position, gave him a formidable advantage. Our only course seemed to lie between the railway and the high road, which the German guns partly commanded.

"Undaunted, our dragoons and infantry attempted to cross the marches skirting the metals. The turf was softer than we thought, and we were soon over our ankles and sometimes our knees in mud. And the horses almost stuck fast. But mud is better than shrapnel. We tried to get our mobile "75" across. About a thousand yards ahead the ground appeared firmer, but it was no light task to cross our artillery to reach it. There was no way around it, and that kilometre was shelled.

"A diversion was imperative—a diversion that would give our gunners behind us time to clear the zone of German mitrailleuse. Suddenly we saw the Scots-Greys swinging around on our left. They had determined to traverse what seemed an impossible belt. Heavy guns roared, but on swept the Scottish. They were irresistible. Their lives must have been charmed, for in an incredible space of time we saw them right in the midst of the enemy's battery.

"It was British sabres against German cannon, and the cannon lost. To the music of their cornets they had charged like the heroes of Sir Walter Scot, they and their little caps, and what we French love to call their ballet-skirts. Neither ditch nor barbed wire had bothered them. We could see them slay the gunners and spike the guns. It all took exactly ten minutes. Their mission accomplished back they turned.

"Those heroic ten minutes and that heroic regiment ahd enabled our "75" to extricate themselves and to reach the position on the right that it sought. The battle thereupon resolved itself into an artillery duel, and an engagement that began in the night at dawn ended in noonday sunshine, with out capture of the western suburbs of Lille."

58 P.C. OF THE WORLD AT WAR

56 Per Cent. of Population

LONDON, Nov. 12—(Correspondence of the Associated Press).—With the addition of Turkey and Portugal to the ranks of the belligerents, the area of hostilities has been extended to approximately 58 per cent. of the land surface of the globe and about 56 per cent. of the total population of the earth must be classed as technically belligerent, says the London Daily Chronicle.

In round numbers out of a total land surface of 51,500,000 square miles (excluding the uninhabitable regions in the Arctic and Antarctic), 30,000,000 square miles is occupied by the eleven belligerent powers, and about 1,000,000,000 of the 1,200,000,000 human beings on earth are directly involved in the great war.

Apportioning the area and population between the two oposing groups it will be found that there is a vast preponderance of both on the side of Britain and her Allies, which own 27,500,000 square miles, and have about 840,000,000 people under their rule, against the 2,000,000 square miles and 160,000,000 people to the credit of Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Turkey.

ANALYZED BY CONTINENTS.

If the affected areas are analyzed by continents, it will be found that in Europe 3,040,000 square miles out of a total area of 3,850,000 and 3,800,000 people out of 475,000,000—or nearly 80 per cent. in both cases—are at war.

In Asia the belligerent area amounts to 9,300,000 square miles (leaving out of account the interior of Arabia—a political no man's land, of about 1,000,000 square miles), the total area of the Continent being about 16,500,000 square miles. Hence over 56 per cent. is at war. Of the population of Asia 475,000,000 out of 980,000,000—say 48½ per cent.—must be classed as belligerents.

Africa is, proportionately, even more affected than Europe. About 10,500,000 square miles out of the 11,700,000—nearly 90 per cent.—and 125,000,000 of the 137,000,000 inhabitants—over 90 per cent., are at war. The only neutral regions are the Italian and Spanish colonies and the native states of Abyssinia and Liberia.

Curiously enough, Australasia and Oceania, although the most remote from the primary zone of hostilities, have the highest percentage of belligerency of any of the continental divisions of the earth, over 95 per cent. in area, and 94 per cent. in population.

SOUTH AMERICA HAPPY.

South America occupies the happiest position of all. Out of an area of over 7,500,000 square miles and a population of about 52,500,000, only 125,500 square miles of territory and 350,000 human beings are subject to any of the combatants.

The percentage of area is less than two and of population less than one.

Thus the continent whose very name was formerly regarded as denoting the most favourable soil on earth for the germination of wars, has, strangely enough, the distinction of being almost entirely at peace, while more than half of the world is at war.

It isn't necessary to feel benevolent over buying things made in Canada. You get better value for your money in most cases and the fact is that if you don't spend your money that way the chaps who earn the $300,000,000 of annual Canadian wages will stop sending their money your way and, then what?

Daring Hold-up Near Lindsay

LINDSAY, Nov. 23—Mr. John Mitchell, who resides on the Gunn farm, West Ops, about four miles from Lindsay, was the victim of a hold-up near the National Concrete Works.

Mr. Mitchell was in town during the day and had drawn some money in order to make necessary purchases. He started for home in the evening, and when leaving the G.T.R. track to take the road at the crossing near the Concrete Works, three men approached him. Two of them grabbed his arms while the third proceeded to go through his pockets. Mr. Mitchell struggled to free himself but was unable to do so. His pocketbook, containing $30, together with a quantity of plug tobacco, was taken by the trio, who immediately decamped.

Mr. Mitchell stated that owing to the darkness he was unable to identify his assailants.

STREAM OF FUGITIVES FROM EAST PRUSSIA

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 22.—Private despatches from North Schleswig-Holstein state that 20,000 refugees from East Prussia are en route to that Province, where the authorities have arranged temporary accommodations.

This stream of fugitives from East Prussia testifies to the steady advance of the Russians into German territory.

In Persia there grows a weed, the seed pods of which have long horns that enter the nostrils of grazing animals and frequently kill them by preventing them from eating or drinking.

GOING MAD FROM THE TERRIFIC PAIN

Prominent Musician Thinks His Life Was Saved By "Fruit-a-tives".

DAVIDSON, ONT., JUNE 15th, 1913.

"I am a general storekeeper, at the above address, and on account of the great good I have experienced from using "Fruit-a-tives", I recommend them to my customers. They were a great boon to me, I can tell you, for about two years ago, I was laid up in bed with vomiting and a terrific pain at the base of my skull. The pain nearly drove me mad. Doctors feared it would turn to inflammation of the Brain, but I took "Fruit-a-tives" steadily until I was cured. I have gained fifteen pounds since taking "Fruit-a-tives", and I verily believe they saved my life in a dangerous illness".

BRITISH TROOPS REST IN SHELTER CONNECTED WITH TRENCHES—During the battle of the Aisne, the British troops suffered severely from the large shells from the German 8-inch siege gun, although latterly the effect was mitigated by more efficient and thorough entrenching. The picture shows a shell-proof shelter near the trench used as a rest room.
